III. GENERAL INFORMATION

An in-depth discussion of the statutes involved in deemed assessed and proposed penalties can be found in Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control.

Effective January 1, 1994 the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act (UPIA) contains all of the penalty and interest provisions for most of the taxes administered by the Illinois Department of Revenue. The old penalty and interest provisions were either deleted from the IITA or references to UPIA were added.

Section 1003 Interest on Deficiencies of the IITA provides that any amount of tax required to be paid under the IITA, which is not paid on or before the date prescribed for payment, shall have interest assessed on it. Interest is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax to which it relates. Interest is an amount which, in addition to tax and penalties, is due to the Department or refundable to the taxpayer.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

For returns due on and after January 1, 2001, interest is no longer computed on penalties, only tax. Ref: UPIA § 3-2(c) and (c-5)

The various sections of the UPIA have differing effective dates:

1. The interest on tax provisions of the UPIA went into effect January 1, 1994 for all outstanding liabilities and overpayments regardless of the liability period to which the liability or overpayment relates.

2. The penalty, interest on penalty and unprocessable return provisions went into effect for liability periods with original due dates on or after January 1, 1994. These liability periods are:

    a. Corporations (including Subchapter S corporations) with tax years ending on or after October 31, 1993.

    b. Individuals, partnerships, trust and estates with tax years ending on or after September 30, 1993.

    c. Certain exempt organizations with tax years ending on or after August 31, 1993.

    d. Cooperatives with tax years ending on or after April 31, 1993.

3. The date of overpayment provisions for claims which are filed to carry back an Illinois net loss go into effect for claims which are filed on or after January 1, 1994 regardless of the loss or carry year involved. UPIA § 3-9(c).

For a more complete legislative history of the IITA penalty and interest provisions refer to Chapter 48 Major Legislation Changes.

A. Amnesty Program

1. Tax Amnesty Act 2003

On June 20, 2003, the Tax Delinquency Amnesty Act was signed into law, providing the opportunity for Illinois taxpayers to pay outstanding tax liabilities, file delinquent returns, and have 100% of the related interest and penalties abated.

Tax periods eligible for amnesty treatment under the 2003 act included those ending June 30, 1983 and prior to July 1, 2002. The Department abated 100% of the interest and penalties related to the tax that was paid under amnesty, and the Department did not seek civil or criminal prosecution for any taxpayer for the period of time for which amnesty was granted. However, penalty and interest imposed under the UPIA are doubled for eligible tax periods, if a tax liability eligible for amnesty was not paid during amnesty. Penalties imposed by other acts and interest for periods before the UPIA

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. became effective are not affected. The amnesty payment period ran from October 1, 2003 through November 15, 2003.

2. Tax Amnesty Act 2010

The Tax Delinquency Amnesty Act was amended on August 16, 2010 to implement a new Amnesty program in 2010.

Tax periods eligible for Amnesty treatment under the 2010 act included those ending after June 30, 2002, and prior to July 1, 2009. The Amnesty Program Period ran from October 1, 2010, through November 8, 2010. In order to qualify for Amnesty, taxpayers must have had an outstanding Eligible Liability for a tax period covered under the Amnesty Program. An “Established Liability”, which is an Eligible Liability that was assessed or became final prior to October 1, 2010, had to be paid in full during the Amnesty Program Period in order to qualify for penalty and interest abatement. For an “Eligible Liability” that had not been assessed, the taxpayer was required to file and pay the appropriate original or amended return for that liability, during the Amnesty Program Period, in order to participate in Amnesty. Penalty and interest were waived if the total tax liability was paid during the Amnesty Program Period. However, if the taxpayer failed to pay the full amount of an Established Liability during the Amnesty Program Period, a 200% Sanction was imposed on the full liability.

Amnesty needs to be taken into consideration when auditing years that fall within the Amnesty Period, as tax liabilities not paid during the Amnesty Period result in the doubling of UPIA penalties and interest*, including liabilities resulting from RARs and other federal changes not finalized as of the end of the 2003 Amnesty Program Period*. The Department’s position for charging double interest on unfinalized federal changes as of the end of the 2003 Amnesty Program Period resulting from RARs is supported by court case Metropolitan Life Insurance Co vs Brian Hamer, 990 N.E.2d 1144 (2013). Liabilities resulting from RARs not finalized as of the end of the 2010 Amnesty Program Period, are only subject to single penalty (if applicable) and interest rates. REF: IAC 520.101(b)(1)(A).

The Tax Delinquency Amnesty Act was amended on June 5, 2019 to implement a new Amnesty program for 2019.

Tax periods eligible for Amnesty treatment under the 2019 act included those ending after June 30, 2011 and prior to July 1, 2018. The Amnesty Program Period ran from October 1, 2019 through November 15, 2019. In order to qualify for Amnesty, taxpayers must have had an outstanding Eligible Liability for a tax period covered under the Amnesty Program. An “Established Liability”, which is an Eligible Liability that was assessed or became final prior to October 1, 2019, had to be paid in full during the Amnesty Program Period in order to quality for penalty and interest abatement. For an “Eligible Liability” that had not been assessed, the taxpayer was required to file and pay the appropriate original or amended return for that liability, during the Amnesty Program period, in order to participate in Amnesty. Penalty and interest were waived if the total tax liability was paid during the Amnesty Program Period.

The regulations, rules and audit procedures are similar to the 2010 amnesty program except there is no doubling of penalty and interest if the tax liability is not paid during the 2019 amnesty payment period.

Further information regarding Illinois' Tax Amnesty Program can be found in Audit Manual Chapter 2 Amnesty.

B. Interest Rates

Interest rates are currently governed by the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act § 3-2(a) and (b). Prior to UPIA the rates were governed by PA 79-838 and the U.S. Tax Reform Act of 1986.

1. Periods After 12/31/2013 and Prior to 1/1/2004

For all outstanding liabilities and overpayments the interest rate to be paid to taxpayers and to be charged taxpayers is the underpayment rate established under IRC § 6621. The interest rate will be adjusted semiannually on January 1 and July 1 based on the underpayment rate going into effect on that January 1 or July 1 under IRC § 6621. The change in rate after the first year has been eliminated.

2. Periods After 12/31/2003 and Prior to 1/1/2014

For all outstanding liabilities and overpayments the rate of interest payable to taxpayers and to be charged taxpayers is the "short-term federal rate" for the first year that the overpayment or underpayment accrues interest". Thereafter, interest is charged or paid at a rate equal to the federal underpayment rate. The following table reflects rates for interest accruing from 1/1/2004 to 12/31/2013:

C. Reasonable Cause

UPIA § 3-8 [35 ILCS 735/3-8] provides that the Illinois Department of Revenue can abate penalties imposed under the provisions of UPIA § 3-3, 3-4, 3-5 and 3-7.5 if the taxpayer can demonstrate reasonable cause for noncompliance. The late-payment penalty for underpayment of estimated tax of the IITA is also included per IITA § 804(e). UPIA does not authorize the Department to abate interest.

Refer to Audit Manual Chapter 3, Reasonable Cause, IAC §700.400 and Reasonable Cause Guide on Sp•IDOR Web for guidelines and procedures on reasonable cause for abatement of UPIA and Pre-UPIA penalties.

D. Penalty and Interest Relief

There are occasions when the Department will find it necessary to provide assistance to taxpayers who have encountered hardships, either due to natural disasters or other unanticipated events that affect taxpayer filing capabilities, by providing relief from penalties and interest.

Illinois income tax parallels federal income tax by conforming to IRS guidelines with respect to any tax relief granted relating to national natural disasters. Under IITA § 601(a), if the IRS extends a due date for payment of tax, no penalty or interest is imposed if payment of the equivalent Illinois tax is made by that date. Also, if the IRS extends a due date for filing a federal return or making a payment because of a natural disaster or a holiday, IAC § 100.5020(e)(4) provides that any taxpayer who files the equivalent Illinois return by that extended due date automatically has reasonable cause for late filing and IAC § 100.6000 provides that payment of the equivalent Illinois tax by the extended due date is timely.

For a list of current and past events, refer to the Exhibit A – Penalty and Interest Relief.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

IV. APE SPECIFIC LAW APPLICATIONS

A. Penalties

Refer to Publication 103, Penalties and Interest for Illinois Taxes, for additional explanation of penalties and interest assessed on returns due on or after January 1, 1994.

1. Penalty for Failure to File

It is important to note that the extended due date of a return is used to determine if a late filing penalty applies. However, it is the unextended due date of the return that determines which UPIA provision applies for purposes of imposing any penalty or interest on tax.

The late-filing penalty is only assessed in the following audit situations:

- Non-filer
- Original return filed late
  - Amended return amount
  - Audit liability amount

a) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2001 (UPIA § 3-3(a-10))

(1) Penalty Rate

Tier One:

2%, up to a maximum of $250, if return is not filed by the extended due date

Tier Two:

2% or $250, whichever is greater, not to exceed $5,000, if return is not filed within 30 days of notice of non-filing, in addition to any applicable Tier One penalty.

(2) Penalty Basis

Tier One:

Tax required to be shown due on a return reduced by any timely payments and properly allowable credits.

Tier Two:

Tax required to be shown due on a return before applying any timely payments and properly allowable credits.

b) Returns Due On and After January 1, 1996 and On or Before December 31, 2000 (UPIA § 3-3(a-5))

(1) Penalty Rate

Tier One:

2%, up to a maximum amount of $250, if not filed by the extended due date.

Tier Two:

2% or $250, whichever is greater, not to exceed $5,000, if return is not filed within 30 days of notice of non-filing, in addition to any applicable Tier One penalty.

(2) Penalty Basis

Tier One and Tier Two

Tax required to be shown due on a return before applying any timely payments and properly allowable credits.

c) Returns Due Before January 1, 1996 (UPIA § 3-3(a))

(1) Penalty Rate

5%, if not filed by the extended due date

(2) Penalty Basis

Tax required to be shown on the return. This is the total amount of income and replacement tax reported on the original return, taking into consideration the Article 2 credits (i.e. Enterprise Zone Investment Credits, Replacement Tax Investment Credits, etc.) but WITHOUT TAKING INTO CONSIDERATION ANY PAYMENTS FOR THE TAX YEAR OR CREDIT CARRYFORWARDS FROM A PREVIOUS YEAR.

Example: Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, made timely estimated payments of $900,000 during 1993. On March 15, 1994, Corporation A made an IL-505 payment of $200,000. On December 1, 1994, Corporation A filed its IL-1120 for 1993 reporting a tax liability of $1,000,000 and requesting a refund of $100,000.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Since Corporation A did not file its return timely, a UPIA §3-3(a) penalty would apply. The penalty would be 5% of the tax required to be shown on the return ($1,000,000) or $50,000. Therefore, Corporation A's requested overpayment of $100,000 would be reduced by the UPIA § 3-3(a) penalty of $50,000 (plus interest on the penalty).

If a UPIA § 3-3(a) penalty is applied to any tax year, the penalty will accrue interest from the original due date of the return (without extensions) until the date the penalty is paid or until the date the notice and demand is issued, provided the total amount shown due on the notice and demand is paid within 30 days of issuance of the notice and demand.

For more information regarding the accrual of interest on UPIA penalties, refer to Interest on Penalties.

If a penalty for late filing or nonfiling is imposed in addition to a penalty for late payment, the total penalty due shall be the sum of the late-filing penalty and the applicable late-payment penalty.

The enactment of the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act does not affect the assessment procedures or the abatement causes (with the exception of the reasonable cause guidelines) or procedures for the late-filing or nonfiling penalty. It also does not affect the determination of whether a company is a nonfiler or not in the case of a combined return.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that if an ORIGINAL RETURN is filed late, and reasonable cause does not apply, the UPIA § 3-3(a), (a-5) and (a-10) penalty basis is increased by any subsequent increases to the tax required to be shown on the return. This would include math errors, amended returns, federal audit adjustments (even if filed within 120 days) or Illinois audit adjustments. If a subsequent action reduces the tax required to be shown on the return, the UPIA § 3-3(a), (a-5) and (a-10) penalty basis is reduced accordingly. REF: UPIA § 3-3(d). This is true even if the tax required to be shown on the return is subsequently being reduced due to an Illinois net loss, federal net operating or capital loss or an Illinois Article 2 credit being carried forward on an amended return or as a result of an audit. HOWEVER, THE CARRYBACK OF AN ILLINOIS NET LOSS OR A FEDERAL CAPITAL LOSS WILL NOT REDUCE THE UPIA § 3-3(a), (a-5) or (a-10) PENALTY BASE.

d) Assessment of the Penalty

Effective for tax years ending on or after December 31, 1973, IITA § 1002(e)(2) was amended to state that the late-filing penalty is considered deemed assessed when the return is filed. Therefore, any amount of the penalty, that is attributable to a liability that is reported on an original or amended return, is considered deemed assessed. Any penalty imposed when a taxpayer never files an original return or that is attributable to an unreported federal change or audit liability for which a Notice of Deficiency is issued may only be assessed after a notice of deficiency is issued for the penalty. It is important to determine the proper method of assessment of any late-filing penalty in order to protect the statute of limitations for its collection.

For more information on what liabilities are deemed assessed and what liabilities are protestable in the case of an amended return being filed and the Department having no record of an original on file, refer to Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control.

For further information regarding the statutes involved in deemed assessed and protestable liabilities, refer to Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control.

For tax years in which the Income Tax liability and the Replacement Tax liability of a corporation were computed on separate returns, the Department took the position that the timely filing of either return was considered to be a timely filing of both returns. This position was based on the fact that Illinois had only one Act, which encompassed both taxes and only one provision for the Statute of Limitations for assessing any resulting tax, penalty and interest.

e) Combined Returns

When dealing with corporations that are members of a unitary group that has elected to file an Illinois combined return or is required to do so, two situations involving "nonfilers" can occur.

If an eligible member fails to include its income and factors (everywhere and Illinois) in the combined return, the tax liability of that member is determined on the basis of IAC § 100.5210(b) as follows:

- If the designated agent of the combined group claims or agrees with the auditor that the company was omitted from the group due to a mistake of law or fact or inadvertently, the member is treated as if it had been a member of the combined group from the beginning and, if the combined return was timely filed, NO LATE-FILING PENALTY IS APPLICABLE.

- If the designated agent does not agree with the auditor's findings, the omitted member is treated as a member of the unitary group filing a separate unitary return for Illinois purposes.

    - For tax years ending prior to December 31, 1993, when joining in a combined return was elective, the company is a nonfiler unless it filed its own return or joined in a combined return with another group, the LATE-FILING PENALTY SHOULD BE APPLIED.

    - For tax years ending on or after December 31, 1993, and prior to December 31, 2013, the combined return is the only required return, and the company is not subject to the late filing penalty for failing to join in the filing.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- For tax years ending on or after December 31, 2013, the company is a nonfiler subject to the late filing penalty unless it filed its own return or joined in a combined return with another group. Ref. IITA § 905(c).

If a combined return is filed and one of the companies which is included in the return as an Illinois non-filing member is determined, per audit, to have sufficient activities in Illinois to cause it to be taxable in this state, the member's Illinois factors should be included in the apportionment formula of the revised combined return. However, THE COMPANY IS NOT CONSIDERED AN ILLINOIS NONFILER AND NO LATE-FILING PENALTY SHOULD BE APPLIED.

f) Unprocessable Returns

UPIA § 3-2(d) contains the requirements an original return must meet in order for it to be considered processable. These requirements do not pertain to amended returns. An original return is processable if it:

1. Is in the form prescribed or approved by the Department,
2. Is signed by the person authorized by law, and
3. Contains all information, schedules, and supporting documents necessary to determine the tax due and to make allocations of tax as prescribed by law.

If any original return does not meet any one of these three requirements, it is considered unprocessable. The Department must notify the taxpayer that the original return has been deemed to be unprocessable and identify the areas of the return, which need to be corrected.

Examples of errors that cause a return to be considered unprocessable are:

1. No signatures
2. Use of a form not approved by the Department
3. Incomplete forms necessary for allocation of tax
4. Using the wrong forms for the tax being reported
5. Remittances received without returns

Examples of errors that do not cause a return to be unprocessable are:

1. Mathematical errors
2. Transposition errors
3. Attempts to claim an unacceptable subtraction
4. Bringing the wrong figures forward from a schedule
5. Subtractions or credits claimed not allowable for liability period of return
6. Subtractions, credits or deductions not properly reported
7. Wrong tax rates used
8. Payment differences

9. Exemption errors
10. Entries made on wrong lines
11. Incorrect accounts or liability periods used
12. Incorrect identification numbers used

If, in audit, the information is obtained which is necessary to perfect a return, the return will be considered FILED as of the date the auditor receives the information.

Example: Corporation A files its return for calendar year 2009 on October 15, 2010 without a signature. Corporation A fails to respond to any of the unprocessable notices issued by the Department. In 2012 an Illinois auditor begins an audit on the 2009 calendar year. On March 20, 2012, the taxpayer provides the auditor with a signed Jurat statement for the original, unsigned, unprocessable return. The taxpayer is considered to have filed the return for 2009 on March 20, 2012. The auditor will then complete the audit beginning with the as-filed numbers from the original return.

If an unprocessable return is filed on or before the date prescribed for filing (including extensions) AND THE RETURN IS PERFECTED WITHIN 30 DAYS (21 days for returns due before January 1, 1996) OF THE DATE THE UNPROCESSABLE NOTICE IS ISSUED, the perfected return will be considered to have been filed as of the date the original, unprocessable return was filed. Therefore, no UPIA § 3-3(a), (a-5) or (a-10) penalty will apply to the return.

If an unprocessable return is filed on or before the date prescribed for filing (including extensions) and the return is NOT perfected within 30 days (21 days for returns due before January 1, 1996) of the date the unprocessable notice is issued, the perfected return will be considered to have been filed as of THE DATE THE RETURN IS PERFECTED. In this case, a UPIA § 3-3(a) penalty or a Tier Two UPIA § 3-3(a-5) or (a-10) penalty will apply to the return based on the tax required to be shown due on the return with no reduction to the penalty base for timely tax payments or credit carryforwards.

If an unprocessable return is filed after the date prescribed for filing (including extensions) regardless of whether the return is perfected within 30 days (21 days for returns due before January 1, 1996) of the date the unprocessable notice is issued or not, the perfected return is considered to be filed late. Therefore, a UPIA § 3-3(a) penalty or a Tier One UPIA § 3-3(a-5) or (a-10) penalty would apply to the return, since the original, unprocessable return was filed late. If the return is not perfected within 30 days of the unprocessable notice, a Tier Two UPIA § 3-3(a-5) or (a-10) penalty will apply.

No refunds or credit carryforwards will be issued from the unprocessable return. If the return is not perfected within 3 years from the due date of the return (with extensions), any payments in excess of the tax liability for the year will be forfeited.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

There is no Statute of Limitations on the issuance of a Notice of Deficiency for the taxable year since an unprocessable return is a nonfiled return.

When the return is perfected does have an effect on the statute of limitations for issuing a Notice of Deficiency and on interest on overpayments.

For more information regarding the statute of limitations when an unprocessable return is involved, refer to Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control.

2. ES Late Payment Penalty – Underpayment of Estimated Tax (f/k/a Section 804 Penalty)

THIS SECTION APPLIES TO LIABILITY PERIODS WITH ORIGINAL DUE DATES (WITHOUT REGARD TO EXTENSIONS) WHICH OCCUR ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1994. REFER TO THE GENERAL INFORMATION SECTION OF THIS CHAPTER FOR A LISTING OF THE FISCAL YEARS AFFECTED BY UPIA.

With the enactment of UPIA, the ES Late Payment penalty was incorporated into the (b)(1) penalties of UPIA § 3-3.

The ES Late Payment Penalty in IITA applies solely to any underpayment of estimated tax and only affects the rate of the ES Late Payment penalty that is applied to any underpayment of estimated tax. It does not affect the computation of the amount of the underpayment, the assessment of the penalty or (with the exception of the reasonable cause abatement) the causes for abatement of or exceptions to the penalty.

Refer to chart in Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control for Due dates for Estimated Payments & Returns for Individuals and Corporations.

a) ES Late Payment Penalty Exceptions

(1) Persons not required to make payments

(a) Individuals

i. Estimated tax expected is $500 or less (tax years ending on or after 12/31/2001)
ii. Estimated tax expected is $250 or less (tax years ending before 12/31/2001)
iii. Short tax years beginning before January 1, 2011 (IAC § 100.8010(j))
iv. Short taxable year of less than 4 months (IAC § 100.8010(f)(4)(A))

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(b) Residents of Nursing Homes

IITA § 806 contains an exemption to the ES Late Payment penalty for any taxpayer 65 years or older and is a permanent resident of a nursing home.

(c) Farmers

Individuals who are farmers having gross income from farming which is at least 2/3 of their total estimated gross income for the taxable year, are also exempt from paying estimated taxes per IITA § 803.

(d) Corporations

i. Estimated tax expected is $400 or less
ii. Short tax years beginning before January 1, 2011 (IAC § 100.8010(j))
iii. Short taxable year of less than 4 months (IAC § 100.8010(f)(4)(B))

(e) Estates, Trusts, Partnerships and Sub S Corporations

IITA § 803 exempts estates and trusts (IL-1041), partnerships (IL-1065) and subchapter S corporations (IL-1120-ST) from paying estimated taxes.

(2) No Return Required for Preceding Taxable Year

No penalty shall be imposed under IITA § 804 with respect to any installment of estimated tax required to be paid in a taxable year by a taxpayer who was not required to file an Illinois Income tax return under IITA § 502 for the preceding taxable year. (For tax years ending on or after December 31, 1998, IITA § 804(d)).

For individuals, no penalty will be imposed if the taxpayer had no tax liability for the preceding taxable year and such year was a taxable year of 12 months.

(3) Change in Apportionment Factor

No penalty shall be imposed under IITA § 804 on any underpayment of an installment of estimated tax due before July 9, 1998 (the effective date of PA 90-613, which enacted single sales factor in IITA § 304(h)) to the extent that underpayment is attributable solely to the taxpayer's change in apportionment from IITA § 304(a) to IITA § 304(h).

IAC § 100.8010(g) and (h) provide an expanded list of exceptions to the penalty imposed under IITA § 804 along with examples.

b) Amount of Underpayment Defined

Because estimated tax payments are applied to the earliest installment first, until it is paid in full, before any is applied to a subsequent installment, the underpayment on which the penalty is based is the excess of the total of all estimated tax installments due for the taxable year on or before the installment date in question over the total payments made on or before that installment date. A credit carryforward from a prior year is considered a payment made on the first installment due date, regardless of when the return for that prior year was filed (for tax years 12/31/2013 and prior. For tax years 2014 and after credit carryforwards are applied to the tax period for which estimated payments currently are due as of the date the return is filed, unless an election to apply the credit to a different tax year is made. If the return is filed on or before the extended due date, the credit is considered paid on the due date of the first estimated tax installment of the tax period. However, if all or a portion of the overpayment results from payments made after the due date of the first estimated tax installment, that portion of the credit is considered to be paid on the date the payment was actually made. If the return is filed after the extended due date, that credit is considered paid on the file date of the return that made the election). There is no longer a need to determine the period of the underpayment. The ES Late Payment penalty rate is a flat rate rather than a per annum rate. If an estimated payment is 1 week late, 1 month late or never paid, the penalty rate for that estimated payment is the applicable rate for that period.

(1) For Tax Years Ending On or After December 31, 1990

IITA § 804 defines the amount of a required installment to be 25% of the required annual payment. The term “required annual payment” is then defined in IITA § 804(c)(1)(B) as the lesser of:

a. 90% of the tax shown on the return for the taxable year or, if no return is filed, 90% of the tax for such year, or

b. For installments due prior to 1/1/2011 and after 1/31/2012, 100% of the tax shown on the return of the taxpayer for the preceding taxable year, if a return showing a liability for tax was filed by the taxpayer for the preceding taxable year and such preceding year was a taxable year of 12 months, or

c. For installments due after 1/31/2011 and prior to 2/1/2012, 150% of the tax shown on the return of the taxpayer for the preceding taxable year, if a return showing a liability for tax was filed by the taxpayer for the preceding taxable year and such preceding year was a taxable year of 12 months.

Per IITA § 804(c)(2)(A), if a taxpayer’s “annualized income installment” is less than the required installment under the formula described above, the required installment is the annualized installment and the reduction is recaptured by increasing the amount of the next required installment by the amount of the

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. reduction, and by increasing subsequent required installments to the extent that the reduction has not previously been recaptured.

IITA § 804(c)(2)(B)(i) and (ii) defines the "annualized income installment" as the excess, if any, of:

a. The applicable percentage of the tax for the taxable year computed by placing, on an annualized basis, the net income for the months in the taxable year ending before the due date for the installment, over

b. The aggregate amount of any prior required installments for the taxable year.

The applicable quarterly installment percentage required under the law is:

1st installment	22.5%
2nd installment	45%
3rd installment	67.5%
4th installment	90%

For the computation for annualized net income (which is used to determine the annualized income installment), contact Technical Support for assistance.

(2) For Tax Years Ending Prior to December 31, 1990

IITA § 804(b) defined the amount of the underpayment as the excess of:

a. The amount of the installment which would be required to be paid if the estimated tax were equal to 80% of the tax shown on the return for the taxable year or if no return was filed, 80% of the tax for such year, over

b. The amount, if any, of the installment paid on or before the last date prescribed for payment.

In other words, if the amount of the payment which was required to be paid, is more than the amount which was actually paid, the difference is the amount of the underpayment for that quarter.

c) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2005 (UPIA § 3-3(b-20)(1))

(1) Penalty Rate

Once it is determined that an underpayment of estimated tax exists and no abatement of or exception to the ES Late Payment penalty applies, a penalty should be computed equal to:

- 2%, if paid no later than 30 days after the due date and
- 10%, if paid later than 30 days after the due date

(2) Penalty Basis

Any amount of underpayment of estimated tax.

If an ES Late Payment penalty is applied to any quarter of the tax year, the penalty will accrue interest from the original due date of the return (without extensions) for the year until the date the penalty is paid or until the date the notice and demand is issued, if the total amount shown due on the notice and demand is paid within 30 days of issuance of the notice and demand.

Refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator, ES Late Payment Penalty Examples on how to calculate the 3-3(b-20)(1) penalty in GenTax.

For more information regarding the accrual of interest on UPIA penalties, refer to Interest on Penalties.

d) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2004 and On or Before December 31, 2004 (UPIA § 3-3(b-15))

(1) Penalty Rate

Once it is determined that an underpayment of estimated tax exists and no abatement of or exception to the ES Late Payment penalty applies, a penalty should be computed equal to:

- 2%, if paid not later than 30 days after the due date,
- 10%, if paid later than 30 days after the due date and not later than 90 days after the due date,
- 15%, if paid later than 90 days after the due date and not later than 180 days after the due date, and
- 20%, if paid later than 180 days after the due date

(2) Penalty Basis

Any amount of underpayment of estimated tax.

Refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator, ES Late Payment Penalty Examples on how to calculate the 3-3(b-15) penalty in GenTax.

e) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2001and On or Before December 31, 2003 (UPIA § 3-3(b-10)(1))

(1) Penalty Rate

Once it is determined that an underpayment of estimated tax exists and no abatement of or exception to the ES Late Payment penalty applies, a penalty should be computed equal to:

- 2%, if paid no later than 30 days after the due date,
- 5%, if paid later than 30 days after the due date and not later than 90 days after the due date,
- 10%, if paid later than 90 days after the due date and not later the 180 days after the due date, and
- 15%, if paid later than 180 days after the due date

(2) Penalty Basis

Any amount of underpayment of estimated tax.

Refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator, ES Late Payment Penalty Examples on how to calculate the 3-3(b-10)(1) penalty in GenTax.

f) Returns Due On and After January 1, 1998 and On or Before December 31, 2000 (UPIA § 3-3(b-5)(1))

(1) Penalty Rate

Once it is determined that an underpayment of estimated tax exists and no abatement of or exception to the Late ES Payment penalty applies, a penalty should be computed equal to:

- 20%

(2) Penalty Basis

Any amount of underpayment of estimated tax

Refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator, ES Late Payment Penalty Examples on how to calculate the 3-3(b-5)(1) penalty in GenTax.

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

g) Returns Due On or After January 1, 1994 and On or Before January 1, 1998 (UPIA § 3-3(b)(1)

(1) Penalty Rate

Once it is determined that an underpayment of estimated tax exists and no abatement of or exception to the ES Late Payment penalty applies, a penalty should be computed equal to:

- 15%

(2) Penalty Basis

Any amount of underpayment of estimated tax.

Refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator, ES Late Payment Penalty Examples on how to calculate the 3-3(b)(1) penalty in GenTax.

h) Assessment of the Penalty

(1) For Tax Years Ending On or After December 31, 1973

The ES Late Payment Penalty is deemed assessed upon the filing of the return for the taxable year, except if no return was filed for that year. REF: IITA § 1002(e)(2)

If no return is filed for the taxable year, the ES Late Payment Penalty is assessed in the same manner as any other deficiency. REF: IITA § 1002(e)(1)

If, during the course of an audit, it is determined that a ES Late Payment Penalty is due for a year ending after December 30, 1973, a separate audit report must be sent to Technical Review. The report should include Forms PROD-1, EDA-25, EDA-27, IL-804 and IL-2220 (where necessary) and a narrative describing why the penalty was imposed. This is extremely important because an income tax notice and demand must be issued prior to the time for filing a lien(s) (IITA § 902(a)). It is important to note that a wavier (IL-872) will not extend the time for issuing an income tax notice and demand to the taxpayer for an ES Late Payment Penalty because this is a deemed assessed penalty. The ES Late Payment Penalty is treated as a math error and once an income tax notice and demand has been sent to the taxpayer, collection of the ES Late Payment Penalty remains "open" for collection through lien procedures or by the offsetting of future overpayments.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

For more information regarding the statute of limitations on deemed assessed and protestable liabilities, refer to Chapter 21 Due Dates/Extensions/Statutory Control.

(2) For Tax Years Ending Before December 31, 1973

The ES Late Payment Penalty was treated as a protestable deficiency and was, therefore, placed on an IL-870.

i) Combined Returns – Application of ES Late Payment Penalty

EFFECTIVE FOR TAX YEARS ENDING ON OR AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1993, ALL ELIGIBLE MEMBERS OF A UNITARY BUSINESS GROUP MUST FILE A COMBINED RETURN TO REPORT THEIR ILLINOIS TAX LIABILITY.

IAC § 100.5230(c) and § 100.5250(c) govern the application of the ES Late Payment penalty to combined returns.

For purposes of determining whether a penalty for failure to timely pay tax should be imposed by UPIA § 3-3(b), § 3-3(b-5), § 3-3(b-10), § 3-3(b-15) and § 3-3(b-20) the following guidelines apply (REF: IAC § 100.5250(c)(2)):

- In the case where a corporation erroneously fails to join in the filing of a combined return for a common taxable year, neither that corporation nor the combined group shall be subject to any failure-to-pay penalty under UPIA § 3-3(b)(1), § 3-3(b-5)(1), § 3-3(b-10)(1), § 3-3(b-15) or § 3-3(b-20)(1) if timely payment is made of the tax shown on a separate return filed by such corporation or on a combined return in which it erroneously joins in filing for each taxable year ending with or within such common taxable year.

- A corporation which erroneously fails to join in the filing of a combined return for a common taxable year and also fails to timely pay the tax shown on a separate return it files or on a combined return in which it joins in filing for each taxable year ending with or within such common taxable year shall be subject to penalty under UPIA § 3-3(b)(1), § 3-3(b-5)(1), § 3-3(b-10)(1), § 3-3(b-15) or § 3-3(b-20)(1) only for failure to pay the tax shown on the return it actually files or joins in filing.

When dealing with combined returns, the following procedures should be followed for purposes of applying an ES Late Payment penalty:

- The amount of any penalty for underpayment of estimated tax is computed as if the electing members were one taxpayer.

- In the first combined return year (and for years ending prior to December 31, 1990), Exceptions #1 and #2 (under former IITA § 804(d)(1) and (2)) are determined based on the aggregate of the tax and income shown on the returns filed for the previous year. Contact Technical Support for assistance.

- If former electing members properly file separate returns for the taxable year following a combined return year, and combined estimated payments were made for that following year, the payments are allocated to the members in a manner determined by the designated agent as long as the manner is satisfactory to the Department.

The designated agent's method will be satisfactory to the Department as long as it does not jeopardize the collection of any liability. REF: IAC § 100.5230(a).

For years ending prior to December 31, 1990, Exceptions #1 and #2 will be determined based on each former electing member's allocated share of tax and income from the combined return filed for the previous year. The allocated shares shall be reported to the Department by the designated agent in the manner prescribed in the instructions to Schedule UB.

- If combined estimated payments are made but separate returns are filed for a tax year NOT following a combined return year and no combined return is filed for the current year, the estimated tax shall be credited ONLY TO THE CORPORATION THAT MADE THE PAYMENT.

Several examples of these rules for applying the ES Late Payment penalty to members of a combined return are included in IAC § 100.5230(e).

j) Composite Returns (IL-1023-C)-Application of ES Late Payment Penalty

No ES Late Payment penalty is imposed on any IL-1023-C return. IAC § 100.5140 Composite Returns: Estimated Payments

3. Penalty for Failure to Pay

For more information regarding the accrual of interest on UPIA penalties, refer to Interest on Penalties.

Each of the five subsections of UPIA regarding late-payment penalties are often referred to as UPIA 1 through 5, as they occur in chronological order. For example, the first, UPIA § 3-3(b) is informally referred to as "UPIA 1". Likewise, UPIA § 3-3(b-20) is informally referred to as "UPIA 5".

a) Federal Changes (RARs)

UPIA § 3-3(b) penalties contain an exception to the late-payment penalty for amended returns, which are filed reporting the finalization of a federal change. In order for this exception to apply however, management policy requires that the amended return must be both filed and paid WITHIN 120 DAYS OF THE FEDERAL AUDIT FINALIZATION DATE. The exception will not apply if an additional liability is discovered relating to the RAR that the taxpayer neither reported nor paid to Illinois. The taxpayer would be subject to the UPIA late-payment penalty on the underreported and underpaid amounts.

Also, if an additional liability is discovered in audit that is not related to the RAR, but is processed along with the RAR, the late-payment penalty should be applied to the additional audit liability amount only.

Example 1: Taxpayer timely reported an RAR increasing tax liability by $10,000. Auditor also discovered an additional audit liability for $2,000. The late-payment penalty would only be assessed on the additional audit liability of $2,000.

Example 2: Taxpayer timely reported an RAR increasing tax liability by $10,000. Auditor discovered an additional liability of $2,000 related to the RAR that was not reported. The late-payment penalty would only be assessed on the additional RAR liability of $2,000.

If either of the UPIA late-payment penalties is applied to any tax year whose return is due prior to January 1, 2001, interest will accrue on the penalty from the original due date of the return (without extensions) until the date the penalty is paid, or until the date the notice and demand is issued, provided the total amount shown due on the notice and demand is paid within 30 days of issuance of the notice and demand.

For returns due prior to January 1, 2005, any payments made by the due date for payment must be taken into consideration in determining the amount of tax (basis) on which the late-payment penalty is to be calculated, even if some or all of the payments are refunded or credited as overpayments shown on the original return.

Refer to Exhibit E for the assessment of the Late-payment penalty on federal changes.

b) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2005 (UPIA § 3-3(b-20)(2)

(1) Penalty Rate

- 2%, if paid no later than 30 days after the due date,
- 10%, if paid later than 30 days after the due date and prior to the initiation of an audit,

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- 20%, if paid after the initiation of an audit, and
- Reduced to 15%, if the entire amount is paid not later than 30 days from issuance of IL-870

Due to the fact that the initiation of an audit causes the penalty to increase to 15% for any liabilities due after that date, the taxpayer must be notified in writing that an audit has been initiated. Refer to Chapter 20 Income Tax Audit Procedure for procedures on contacting the taxpayer.

Taxpayers filing a claim for refund after the completion of an agreed audit (other than from a Federal RAR change), the penalty will increase to 20% on the amount of the refund claim that is attributable to a late payment and is disallowed. The reduction in penalty from 20% to 15% is an incentive for the taxpayer to concede an audit liability, so the taxpayer cannot avoid the 20% penalty on a late payment by making the payment before the audit is competed and then filing a refund claim to contest the liability. Therefore, the day that we "issue" the IL-870 is very important as it starts the clock to determine the "completion date" of the audit.

The penalty on the IL-870 that is issued to the taxpayer should be calculated at 15%. You must explain to them that if they do not agree and pay within 30 days from the issue date on the IL-870, the penalty will be increased to 20%. If the taxpayer pays the tax within the 30-day period, but does not sign the IL-870, a tax payment constitutes agreement unless the taxpayer indicates that they are only paying the tax to stop the accrual of interest.

If the taxpayer indicates that they want to agree to a portion of the audit, the audit will be separated into agreed and unagreed issues. Two IL-870s will be issued. The IL-870 for the agreed portion will reflect a 15% penalty while the unagreed portion will be calculated at 20%.

(2) Penalty Basis

Tax shown or required to be shown on a return, reduced by any part of the tax which is paid on time and by any credit which was properly allowable on the date the return was required to be filed.

The "snapshot" rule does not apply to the UPIA § 3-3(b-20)(2) late-payment penalty. Overpayments on original returns that are refunded or credited as carryforwards reduce timely payments for the late-payment penalty basis.

(3) Assessment of the Penalty

Penalty is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax on which the penalty is based. If the penalty is assessed on an underpayment that is the result of a math error, EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed penalty in the Auditor's Comments.

c) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2004 and On or Before December 31, 2004 (UPIA § 3-3(b-15))

(1) Penalty Rate

- 2% of any amount that is paid no later than 30 days after the due date,
- 10% of any amount that is paid later than 30 days after the due date and not later than 90 days after the due date,
- 15% of any amount that is paid later than 90 days after the due date and not later than 180 days after the due date, and
- 20% of any amount that is paid later than 180 days after the due date.

(2) Penalty Basis

Tax shown or required to be shown on a return, reduced by any part of the tax which is paid on time and by any credit which was properly allowable on the date the return was required to be filed.

The fact that any of the payments might have later been refunded or credited to another tax year has no effect on the (b-15) penalty base. In order to determine the proper penalty base, a "snapshot" is taken of the payments and credits allowable as of the due date of the original return (without extensions).

Example: Corporation A filed its 11/30/2003 IL-1120 on 9/10/2004. The IL-1120 reflected a total tax liability of $120,000. The taxpayer made timely estimated payments totaling $150,000 for the year. They requested a $30,000 refund on their original return. The refund was mailed to the taxpayer in December 2004. An audit was completed on the 11/30/2003 return on 11/9/2005 which increased the total tax liability to $180,000. Since Corporation A had made $150,000 in estimated payments as of the due date of the return, the late-payment penalty would be calculated on $30,000. Therefore, the total penalty due per audit is $6,000 (30,000 x .20). This amount is entered in the Penalty section on the IL-870.

(3) Assessment of the Penalty

Penalty is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax on which the penalty is based. If the penalty is assessed on an underpayment that is the result of a math error, EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR

THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed penalty in the Auditor's Comments.

d) Returns Due On and After January 1, 2001 and On or Before December 31, 2003 (UPIA § 3-3(b-10)(1) and (2))

(1) Penalty Rate

(a) Admitted Liability (b-10)(1)

- 2% of any amount that is paid no later than 30 days after the due date,
- 5% of any amount that is paid later than 30 days after the due date and not later than 90 days after the due date,
- 10% of any amount that is paid later than 90 days after the due date and not later than 180 days after the due date, and
- 15% of any amount that is paid later than 180 days after the due date.

(b) Additional Liability (b-10)(2)

- 20% of any amount not paid within 30 days after a notice of math error, notice and demand, or a final assessment is issued by the Department.

(2) Penalty Basis

Tax shown or required to be shown on a return, whichever is applicable, or amended return (as adjusted for math errors) reduced by any part of the tax which is paid on time and by any credit which was properly allowable on the date the return was required to be filed.

If the amount of tax shown on the return is reduced, the penalty base is correspondingly reduced. REF: UPIA § 3-3(d).

This would include any reduction in tax due to the carryforward of an Illinois net loss, a federal net or capital loss or an Illinois Article 2 credit. However, the carryback of an Illinois net loss or federal capital loss WOULD NOT reduce the penalty base.

The fact that any of the payments might have later been refunded or credited to another tax year has no effect on the (b-10)(1) or (b-10)(2) penalty base. In order to determine the proper penalty base, a "snapshot" is taken of the payments and credits allowable as of the due date of the original return (without extensions).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

For additional (audit) liabilities, the (b-10)(2) penalty will not apply if the full amount of any tax is paid within 30 days after a notice of math error, notice and demand, or a final assessment is issued by the Department.

If both a (b-10)(1) and a (b-10)(2) penalty are assessed against the same return, the (b-10)(2) penalty will only be assessed against the additional amount of tax found due. REF: UPIA § 3-3(e-5).

Example 1(admitted liability): Taxpayer files its 2000 IL-1120 return on 3/15/2001 showing total tax due of $10,000 with timely estimated tax payments made of $4,000 (100% of last year's tax – no ES Late Payment Penalty due). The taxpayer shows a balance due on their return of $6,000 and pays the balance off by making the following payments.

Payment made on 4/10/2001 $1,000 $1,000 x 2% = $20
Amount paid no later than 30 days after the due date
Payment made on 6/05/2001 $1,000 $1,000 x 5% = $50
Amount paid later than 30 days and not later than 90 days after the due date
Payment made on 9/05/2001 $1,000 $1,000 x 10%= $100
Amount paid later than 90 days and not later than 180 days after the due date
Payment made on 11/10/2001 $3,000 $3,000 x 15%= $450
Amount paid later than 180 days after the due date
Total penalty due = $620

Example 2 (audit liability): Taxpayer files their 2000 IL-1040 return on 4/15/2001 showing total tax due of $3,000, tax withheld of $2,800 and payment with the return of $200. On 6/10/2001 the Department notifies the taxpayer via a math error notice that their tax liability is underpaid by $300 due to a subtraction modification that is not allowed by the Department. The taxpayer pays the $300 plus interest on 7/18/2001. The penalty is $300 x 20% = $60. The $300 was not paid within 30 days from the date of the math error notice.

Example 3 (audit liability): Taxpayer files their 2000 IL-1120 return showing total tax due of $15,000 on 3/15/2001. The total tax was paid through timely payments of estimated tax. The Department audits the taxpayer in 2004 increasing the tax liability by $5,000. The taxpayer signs an IL-870 agreeing to the additional liability on 8/31/2004. The taxpayer makes a payment of $3,000 on 9/25/2004. On 10/20/2004, the taxpayer pays the remaining balance of $2,000 plus interest. The penalty is $2,000 x 20% = $400. The $2,000 was not paid within 30 days of the IL-870 signature date. (The penalty is only computed on the portion not paid within the 30-day period).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(3) Assessment of the Penalty

(a) Admitted Liabilities (b-10)(1)

Penalty is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax on which the penalty is based. If the penalty is assessed on an underpayment that is the result of a math error, EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed penalty in the Auditor's Comments.

(b) Audit Liabilities (b-10)(2)

Allows the taxpayer certain time periods for paying any additional liability found due in an audit before any (b)(2) penalties will be applied. No (b)(2) penalty will be applied if the full amount of the additional TAX liability is paid:

- Within 30 days of the issuance of a notice and demand.
- Within 60 days of the date a Notice of Deficiency is issued IF THE NOTICE OF DEFICIENCY IS NOT PROTESTED WITHIN THE STATUTORY 60-DAY PROTEST PERIOD.
- Within 30 days from the date a final determination is issued on a protested liability.

IT IS IMPORTANT FOR THE AUDITOR TO FULLY EXPLAIN TO THE TAXPAYER THE REPERCUSSIONS OF AGREEING TO AN AUDIT AND SIGNING AN IL-870 AND NOT PAYING THE FULL AMOUNT OF TAX DUE PER AUDIT WITHIN 30 DAYS.

In order to avoid the (b-10)(2) penalty the taxpayer must pay the full amount of additional tax found due: however, that may not be the same tax amount upon which the (b-10)(2) penalty will be based if it is applied.

If a (b-10)(2) penalty is assessed on an additional liability found in audit it will be assessed through issuance of an income tax notice and demand by Springfield, not on an IL-870.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. e) Returns Due On and After January 1, 1998 and On or Before December 31, 2000 (UPIA 3-3 § (b-5)(1) and (2)

This would include any reduction in tax due to the carryforward of an Illinois net loss, a federal net or capital loss or an Illinois Article 2 credit. However, the carryback of an Illinois net loss or federal capital loss WOULD NOT reduce the penalty base.

The fact that any of the payments might have later been refunded or credited to another tax year has no effect on the (b-5)(1) or (b-5)(2) penalty base. In order to determine the proper penalty base, a "snapshot" is taken of the payments and credits allowable as of the due date of the original return (without extensions).

If both a (b-5)(1) penalty and a (b-5)(2) penalty are assessed against the same return, the (b-5)(2) penalty will only be assessed against the additional amount of tax found due. REF: UPIA § 3-3(e).

(3) Assessment of the Penalty

(a) Admitted Liabilities (b-5)(1)

Penalty is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax on which the penalty is based. If the penalty is assessed on an underpayment that is the result of a math error, EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed penalty in the Auditor's Comments.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(b) Audit Liabilities (b-5)(2)

Allows the taxpayer certain time periods for paying any additional liability found due in an audit before any (b)(2) penalties will be applied. No (b)(2) penalty will be applied if the full amount of the additional TAX liability is paid:

- Within 30 days of the issuance of a notice and demand.
- Within 60 days of the date a Notice of Deficiency is issued IF THE NOTICE OF DEFICIENCY IS NOT PROTESTED WITHIN THE STATUTORY 60-DAY PROTEST PERIOD.
- Within 30 days from the date a final determination is issued on a protested liability.

IT IS IMPORTANT FOR THE AUDITOR TO FULLY EXPLAIN TO THE TAXPAYER THE REPERCUSSIONS OF AGREEING TO AN AUDIT AND SIGNING AN IL-870 AND NOT PAYING THE FULL AMOUNT OF TAX DUE PER AUDIT WITHIN 30 DAYS.

In order to avoid the (b-5)(2) penalty the taxpayer must pay the full amount of additional tax found due: however, that may not be the same tax amount upon which the (b-5)(2) penalty will be based if it is applied.

If a (b-5)(2) penalty is assessed on an additional liability found in audit it will be assessed through issuance of an income tax notice and demand by Springfield, not on an IL-870.

f) Returns Due On and After January 1, 1994 and On or Before December 31, 1997 (UPIA § 3-3(b)(1) and (2)

(1) Penalty Rate

(2) Penalty Basis

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

This would include any reduction in tax due to the carryforward of an Illinois net loss, a federal net or capital loss or an Illinois Article 2 credit. However, the carryback of an Illinois net loss or federal capital loss WOULD NOT reduce the penalty base.

The fact that any of the payments might have later been refunded or credited to another tax year has no effect on the (b)(1) or (b)(2) penalty base. In order to determine the proper penalty base, a "snapshot" is taken of the payments and credits allowable as of the due date of the original return (without extensions).

Since the UPIA incorporates the ES Late Payment penalty rate into the (b)(1) late-payment penalty, if a taxpayer fails to make proper estimated payments AND fails to pay the total amount of tax due as of the due date of the original return without extensions, only one UPIA late-payment penalty can be applied to any dollar of unpaid tax liability.

> Example 1(admitted liability): Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, made timely estimated payments for 1993 of $500,000. On October 17, 1994, Corporation A filed its IL-1120 reporting a tax liability of $400,000. Corporation A requested that the $100,000 overpayment be credited to Corporation A's 1994 estimated payments.
> On July 1, 1995 A files an IL-1120-X increasing its 1993 tax liability to $550,000. In determining the amount of (b)(1) that applies to the amended return, the tax liability shown on the amended return ($550,000) is reduced by the amount of payments made by March 15, 1994 ($500,000). Although Corporation A owes an additional $150,000, Corporation A's (b)(1) penalty will be based on $50,000.
> Example 2 (admitted liability): Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, files its IL-1120 for 1993 on October 17, 1994 reporting a tax liability of $100,000. Corporation A submits payment for the entire $100,000 with the return. Assuming none of the exceptions or abatements for any of the penalties applied, a ES Late Payment penalty would be imposed on 90% of the tax liability and a (b)(1) penalty would be imposed on the remaining 10% of the liability.

However, for any payments made after the due date of the original return (without extensions), if the ES Late Payment penalty is not applied, the (b)(1) penalty can be applied. For instance, if the ES Late Payment penalty is not applied since:

- The tax liability shown on the return is less than the tolerance requiring estimated tax payments,

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- One of the exceptions to the ES Late Payment penalty apply (i.e. no return required in the previous year), or

- Reasonable cause abatement is warranted for the quarters involved, then a (b)(1) penalty may be applied to the entire tax shown due and not paid by the date prescribed for payment.

> Example 3 (admitted liability): Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, files its IL-1120 for 1993 on October 17, 1994 reporting a tax liability of $100,000. Corporation A submits payment for the entire $100,000 with the return. Corporation A was not required to file a return in Illinois for 1992. Even though an exception to the ES Late Payment penalty applies, Corporation A would be subject to a (b)(1) penalty on 100% of the tax liability shown due on the return since none of the tax was paid by the due date of the original return (without extensions).

If both a (b)(1) penalty and a (b)(2) penalty are assessed against the same return, the (b)(2) penalty will only be assessed against the additional amount of tax found due. REF: UPIA § 3-3(e).

> Example 4 (audit liability): Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, made timely estimated payments of $50,000 for 1993. On October 17, 1994 Corporation A files a timely IL-1120 for 1993 reporting a tax liability of $110,000. Corporation A submits a payment of $60,000 with the original return. A notice and demand is issued to Corporation A for interest on tax, a (b)(1) penalty of $9,000 ($60,000 * 15%) and interest on the (b)(1) penalty. Corporation A pays the total amount shown due on the notice and demand.
> In 1995 an audit is completed on Corporation A and adjustments are made which increase Corporation A's tax liability to $200,000. If a (b)(2) penalty is applied it will have a penalty base of $90,000; the amount required to be shown due on the return ($200,000) less any payments made by the due date of the original return without extensions ($50,000) less any tax which has had a (b)(1) penalty applied to it ($60,000).

The fact that any of the payments might have later been refunded or credited to another tax year has no effect on the (b)(1) or (b)(2) penalty base. In order to determine the proper penalty base, a "snapshot" is taken of the payments and credits allowable as of the due date of the original return (without extensions). The “snapshot” rule does not apply to UPIA-5.

> Example 5 (audit liability): Corporation A, a calendar year taxpayer, made timely estimated payments for 1993 of $500,000. On October 17, 1994, Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 reporting a tax liability of $400,000. A requested that the $100,000 overpayment be credited to Corporation A's 1994 estimated payments.

On July 1, 1995 an audit is completed on Corporation A and adjustments are made which increase Corporation A's 1993 tax liability to $550,000. In determining the amount of (b)(2) penalty that could apply to the audit liability, the tax liability established in audit ($550,000) is reduced by the amount of payments made by March 15, 1994 ($500,000). Although Corporation A owes an additional $150,000, any (b)(2) penalty will be based on $50,000.

In the case of a nonfiler, a ES Late Payment penalty and a (b)(2) penalty may not be applied against the same dollar of tax. If, however, a ES Late Payment penalty is not applied to any given quarter because:

- The tax liability required to be shown on the return is less than the tolerance requiring estimated tax payments,
- One of the exceptions to the ES Late Payment penalty apply (i.e. no return required in the previous year), or
- Reasonable cause abatement is warranted for the quarters involved, a (b)(2) penalty may be applied to the entire tax required to be shown due and not paid by the date prescribed for payment.

Example 6 (audit liability): Corporation A, a calendar year corporation, is a nonfiler for Illinois income tax purposes for 1993. In 1995 an audit is conducted on Corporation A and a tax liability of $100,000 is established. If none of the exceptions to or abatements of the ES Late Payment penalty apply, a ES Late Payment penalty will be assessed on 90% of the audit liability ($90,000) and a (b)(2) may be assessed on the remaining 10% of the audit liability ($10,000).

If a ES Late Payment penalty does not apply to the audit liability since, for example, Corporation A was not required to file a return for the previous tax year, a (b)(2) penalty may be assessed on the entire audit liability ($100,000).

(3) Assessment of the Penalty

(a) Admitted Liabilities (b)(1)

Penalty is deemed assessed upon the assessment of the tax on which the penalty is based. If the penalty is assessed on an underpayment that is the result of a math error, EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed penalty in the Auditor's Comments.

(b) Audit Liabilities (b)(2)

Allows the taxpayer certain time periods for paying any additional liability found due in an audit before any (b)(2) penalties will be applied. No (b)(2) penalty will be applied if the full amount of the additional TAX liability is paid:

- Within 30 days of the issuance of a notice and demand.

- Within 60 days of the date a Notice of Deficiency is issued IF THE NOTICE OF DEFICIENCY IS NOT PROTESTED WITHIN THE STATUTORY 60-DAY PROTEST PERIOD.

- Within 30 days from the date a final determination is issued on a protested liability.

IT IS IMPORTANT FOR THE AUDITOR TO FULLY EXPLAIN TO THE TAXPAYER THE REPERCUSSIONS OF AGREEING TO AN AUDIT AND SIGNING AN IL-870 AND NOT PAYING THE FULL AMOUNT OF TAX DUE PER AUDIT WITHIN 30 DAYS.

In order to avoid the (b)(2) penalty the taxpayer must pay the full amount of additional tax found due: however, that may not be the same tax amount upon which the (b)(2) penalty will be based if it is applied.

If a (b)(2) penalty is assessed on an additional liability found in audit it will be assessed through issuance of an income tax notice and demand by Springfield, not on an IL-870.

4. Penalty for Failure to File Correct Information Return (UPIA § 3-4)

UPIA § 3-4(c) defines an information return as "any tax return required by a tax Act to be filed with the Department that does not, by law, require the payment of a tax liability".

The following forms are not information returns:

- IL-941 Illinois Withholding Income Tax Return
- ST-1 Sales and Use Tax and E911 Surcharge Return

Refer to IAC § 700.310(a) for examples of information returns.

Information returns are not required to be filed for the following types of income:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- Certain payments made under contracts for personal services (IITA § 1405.2), and
- Certain payments of prizes and awards (IITA § 1405.3)

However, the UPIA § 3-4 penalty still applies if any person required to provide copies of information to persons to whom payments are made fails to do so.

a) Penalty Rate

- $5 will be assessed for each return or statement with respect to which the failure occurs, not to exceed $25,000 for all failures during any calendar year.

A reduction in the penalty of 50% ($2.50 or $12,500) will apply if any failure to file an information return or to include all of the information required to be shown on the return is corrected within 60 days after the required filing date.

Refer to IAC § 700.310(d)(3) & (4) for information on what constitutes a corrected information return and filing requirements.

b) Basis of the Penalty

The penalty for failure to file correct information returns will be imposed for the following failures:

- Any failure to file an information return with the Department on or before the required filing date, or

- Any failure to include all of the information required to be shown on the return or the inclusion of incorrect information.

5. Collection Penalty (UPIA § 3-4.5)

The collection penalty applies to any return due on or after July 1, 2003.

a) Penalty Rate

- $30 in any case in which the amount of the liability shown on the notice and demand, notice of additional tax due, or other request for payment that remains unpaid more than 30 days after the request for payment is issued is less than $1,000; or

- $100 in any case in which the amount of the liability shown on the notice and demand, notice of additional tax due, or other request for payment that remains unpaid more than 30 days after the request for payment is issued is $1,000 or more.

b) Basis of the Penalty

The collection penalty will be imposed if full payment is not received prior to the 31st day after a notice and demand, notice of additional tax due or a request for payment of a final liability is issued by the Department.

The collection penalty shall not be imposed more than once with respect to the liability for a particular tax for a given tax period.

Liability amount includes any related penalties and interest.

Reasonable Cause does not apply to the collection penalty.

Refer to IAC § 700.315(e) for examples regarding the collection penalty. [Note: this regulation has not yet been proposed.]

6. Penalty for Negligence (UPIA § 3-5)

UPIA § 3-5(a) states:

> If any return or amended return is prepared negligently, but without intent to defraud, and filed, in addition to any penalty imposed under UPIA § 3-3 of the Act, a penalty shall be imposed in an amount equal to 20% of any resulting deficiency.

If a UPIA § 3-5 penalty is applied to any tax year whose return is due prior to January 1, 2001, the penalty will accrue interest from the original due date of the return (without extensions) until the date the penalty is paid or until the date the notice and demand is issued, provided the total amount shown due on the notice and demand is paid within 30 days of issuance of the notice and demand. No interest accrues on this penalty for taxable years whose return is due on or after January 1, 2001.

For more information regarding the accrual of interest on UPIA penalties, refer to Interest on Penalties.

The negligence penalty can be assessed only by issuance of a notice of deficiency.

UPIA § 3-5(b) states that "negligence" includes any failure to make a reasonable attempt to comply with the provisions of any tax Act and includes careless, reckless or intentional disregard of the law or regulations.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A reasonable difference as to taxability may be established by evidence that shows that the issue in dispute between the taxpayer and the Department is:

- Not resolved by the plain language of the statute.
- An issue about which the Department has not adopted a rule of general applicability.
- An issue about which the Illinois Supreme Court has not ruled and there are inconsistent opinions of the Illinois Appellate Courts. REF: IAC § 700.320.

It is improper to AUTOMATICALLY assess a negligence penalty against a taxpayer for failing to notify the Department of a change to their Federal Income Tax Return within 120 days (20 days prior to July 1, 1986) after the change becomes final. The negligence penalty may be asserted, however, in situations where an auditor has determined (from evidence gathered) that the taxpayer, in failing to notify the Department of a federal change, was guilty of negligence or an intentional disregard of the notification rules.

Negligence penalties cannot be assessed without approval from the Division Manager.

a) Penalty Rate

- 20% of any deficiency resulting from negligence on the part of the taxpayer, for returns due on and after January 1, 1994.

b) Basis of the Penalty

A negligence penalty can only be applied if a filed return (original or amended) is prepared negligently. UPIA § 3-5 PENALTY CANNOT BE APPLIED TO A DEFICIENCY ESTABLISHED ON A NONFILER.

For the UPIA § 3-5 penalty, a "deficiency" is the additional amount of tax determined by the auditor only if the return was filed timely. If the original return was filed after the extended due date, the full amount of tax due (i.e. the amount shown on the original return plus the additional amount established by audit) is the basis for the penalty. A taxpayer that is under audit will not be able to file amended returns during the course of the audit in order to avoid a negligence penalty. REF: IITA § 1002(f).

Example 1: For the calendar year 2012, a corporate taxpayer files a return on 10/10/2013. The original liability was $10,000 and taxpayer paid $9,000 in ES payments and $1,000 when the return was filed. Per audit it was determined that the taxpayer owes $35,000 resulting in a “deficiency” of $25,000. The negligence penalty is calculated on the $25,000 “deficiency.”

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

Example 2: A corporation fails to file its income tax return for the year ending 12/31/2012. The taxpayer did file its 12/31/2011 return and requested that a $2,000 overpayment be carried forward and applied against the 12/31/2012 tax liability. Therefore, the taxpayer has "paid" $2,000 in tax for this year. Per audit it was determined that the taxpayer should have filed a return reporting a tax liability of $20,000 on the 12/31/2012 IL-1120. Since the corporation was a non-filer, the negligence penalty will not be assessed.

c) Assessment of the Penalty

The penalty for negligence is assessed through issuance of a Notice of Deficiency. The taxpayer has the right to protest the application of this penalty before payment is made. Because of this, the execution of an IL-872 extends the statute of limitations for assessment of the penalty. (IITA § 1002(e)).

7. Penalty for Fraud (UPIA § 3-6)

UPIA § 3-6 states,

> "(a) If any return or amended return is filed with intent to defraud, in addition to any penalty imposed under § 3-3 of this Act, a penalty shall be imposed in an amount equal to 50% of any resulting deficiency.
> (b) If any claim is filed with intent to defraud, a penalty shall be imposed in an amount equal to 50% of the amount fraudulently claimed for credit or refund."

If a UPIA § 3-6 penalty is applied to any tax year whose return is due prior to January 1, 2001, the penalty will accrue interest from the original due date of the return (without extensions) until the date the penalty is paid or until the date the notice and demand is issued, provided the total amount shown due on the notice and demand is paid within 30 days of issuance of the notice and demand. No interest accrues on this penalty for taxable years whose return is due on or after January 1, 2001.

The enactment of the UPIA had no effect on what constitutes fraudulent activity or on the assessment of the fraud penalty.

Fraud penalties cannot be assessed without approval from the Division Manager.

a) Penalty Rate

- 50% of any deficiency resulting from fraudulent activity or 50% of any refund claimed fraudulently, for returns due on and after January 1, 1994.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

b) Basis of the Penalty

A fraud penalty can only be applied if a filed return (original or amended) is prepared fraudulently. A UPIA § 3-6 PENALTY CANNOT BE APPLIED TO A DEFICIENCY ESTABLISHED ON A NONFILER.

As with the UPIA § 3-5 Negligence penalty, for purposes of the UPIA § 3-6 Fraud penalty, a "deficiency" is the additional amount of tax determined by the auditor only if the return was filed timely. If the original return was filed after the extended due date, the full amount of tax due (i.e. the amount shown due on the original return plus the additional amount established by audit) is the basis for the penalty. A taxpayer that is under audit will not be able to file amended returns during the course of the audit in order to avoid a fraud penalty. REF: IITA § 1002(f).

c) Fraudulent Activity

Refer to Audit Manual Chapter 20 Income Tax Audit Procedure for what constitutes fraudulent activity and the procedure for referring audit cases to the Criminal Investigation Division (CID).

8. Bad Check Penalty (UPIA § 3-7.5)

Effective January 1, 2001, a penalty of $25 shall be imposed on any person who issues a check or other draft to the Department that is not honored upon presentment. The penalty imposed under this Section shall be deemed assessed at the time of presentment of the check or other draft and shall be treated for all purposes, including collection and allocation, as part of the tax or other liability for which the check or other draft represented payment. This penalty can also qualify for reasonable cause under UPIA § 3-8.

9. Frivolous Return Penalty (IITA § 1006)

Effective for tax years ending on or after December 31, 1987, the frivolous return penalty applies to individual return filers only. The amount of the penalty, $500, is imposed upon any individual who files an IL-1040 which does not contain information needed to figure the correct tax or shows a substantially incorrect tax because the taxpayer is taking a frivolous position or are trying to delay or interfere with the collection of the tax. IAC § 100.5050(e) contains a list of positions considered frivolous which would subject the taxpayer to the penalty.

The penalty does not apply to an individual acting as a return preparer for another taxpayer or to an individual filing or signing a return of any taxpayer other than that individual.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

B. Interest

Refer to Publication 103, Penalties and Interest for Illinois Taxes, for additional explanation of penalties and interest assessed on returns due on or after January 1, 1994.

1. Assessment of Interest

Interest on tax is deemed assessed upon the late payment of tax.

For returns due on and after January 1, 2001, interest accrues on the amount of unpaid tax only (UPIA § 3-2(c-5).

Prior to January 1, 2001, if the UPIA penalty applied, the interest on the UPIA penalty applied.

There is no authority in the IITA to waive or abate interest. If the tax is found to be due, the interest is due.

Taxpayers who do not agree with the Department's determination of interest may file a claim for refund premised on an additional overpayment of interest due. The claim is to be filed in accordance with the provisions of IAC § 100.9400(c)(1) and 100.9400(f)(6).

2. Interest Computations

Interest is an amount which, in addition to tax and penalties, is due to the Department or refundable to the taxpayer. It is computed by the following formula:

Interest = Interest rate x period x amount of tax

For liability periods with original due dates which occur on or after January 1, 1994 and on or before December 31, 2000, interest is also computed on any penalties which are assessed in accordance with the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act.

For more information regarding the computation of interest on penalties, refer to Interest on Penalties.

3. Interest on Deficiencies

The interest period on a deficiency is not the same as the interest period on an overpayment. The object of assessing interest on underpayments of tax is to charge the taxpayer for using the funds beyond the date they should have been paid to Illinois. This is called the "use of money" theory. REF: Merten's Law of Federal Income Tax Section 55.02. Therefore, GENERALLY, interest on deficiencies is computed from the original due date of the return to the date paid, except in the following situations:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- In an agreed audit liability (AL), IITA § 1003(a) gives the Department 30 days from the date Form IL-870 is filed with the Department to issue a Notice and Demand to the taxpayer. If the Notice and Demand is not issued within the 30 days, interest cannot be imposed from the 31st day after the IL-870 was issued to the date of the issuance of the Notice and Demand. In this situation, the auditor should process the audit to the supervisor within a maximum of seven days after the execution of the IL-870 for processing to Technical Review. The audit should be transmitted to Technical Review with a note explaining its priority: "AL - ISSUE NOTICE AND DEMAND PRIOR TO (the IL-870 date plus 30 days)."

  The waiver is considered "filed" on the date the taxpayer signs the IL-870. Therefore, the 30-day time period for issuance of the Notice and Demand begins at that point. Refer to Chapter 20 Income Tax Audit Procedure for more information regarding the processing of agreed audits without remittance.

- When an original return has been filed reflecting an overpayment, the start date for the accrual of interest on any subsequent liability varies depending on whether the taxpayer has requested that the overpayment be refunded or credited to the next year's estimated payments. Refer to the headings Original Overpayment Credited To Next Year's Payments, Original Overpayment Refunded Within 3 Months, Original Overpayment Not Refunded Within 3 Months, and Original Overpayment Refund Still Pending below.

The UPIA provisions may have an effect on the date on which interest stops accruing. UPIA § 3-2(c) and (c)(5) states:

> If notice and demand is made for the payment of any amount of tax due and if the amount due is paid within 30 days after the date of such notice and demand, interest under this Section on the amount so paid shall not be imposed for the period after the date of the notice and demand.

The "notice and demand" which is referred to in UPIA § 3-2(c) and (c-5) refers specifically to the Notice and Demand that is issued by Technical Review. An IL-870 is not a UPIA notice and demand, so interest will continue to accrue after the IL-870 is issued until the tax liability is paid.

At one time, the Form IL-870 was treated as a notice and demand, so that no interest would accrue on a liability shown on the Form IL-870 after the date it was issued if the liability was paid within 30 days. Taxpayers no longer have this 30-day grace period. For purposes of the Form IL-870, Auditors should continue to calculate interest through the IL-870 issuance date and explain to the taxpayer that additional interest will continue to accrue until the date the audit tax is paid. This is the postmark date for checks that are mailed to the Springfield office or the date the check is given to the Auditor. If the taxpayer wishes to avoid additional interest accruing, the taxpayer will need to pay the tax as of the IL-870 date.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

This does not affect the UPIA 5 late-payment penalty 30-day grace period. The taxpayer will still have 30 days from the issuance of the IL-870 to pay the audit tax before the late-payment penalty increases from 15% to 20%, as provided for in UPIA § 3-3(b-20)(2).

Example: Corporation A is a calendar year filer. As a result of an audit, which is conducted on the 2009 IL-1120, an additional audit liability of $5,000 is proposed. On September 1, 2011, at the close of the audit, the taxpayer is presented with an IL-870 reflecting tax due of $5,000 and interest (computed through September 1, 2011) of $118.63.

- The taxpayer signs the IL-870 and pays the TOTAL AMOUNT DUE of $5,118.63 on September 1, 2011. No additional interest accrues after September 1, 2011. (A UPIA § 3-3(b-20)(2) audit late-payment penalty at 15% would also apply in this situation.)

- The taxpayer signs the IL-870 on September 1, 2011. The taxpayer does not make a payment until October 10, 2011 when the full amount of tax is paid. Department issued a Notice and Demand on October 1, 2011. Since the TOTAL AMOUNT DUE was not paid on the execution date of the IL-870, the interest will continue to accrue from September 2 to September 30. Taxpayer owes an additional $15.89 of interest (interest on the $5,000 from September 2, 2011 until the date prior to the issuance of the Notice and Demand). (A (b-20)(2) audit late-payment penalty at 20% would also apply in this situation since the payment was made more than 30 days after the execution of the IL-870).

- The taxpayer signs the IL-870 on September 1, 2011. On September 11, 2011, the taxpayer pays $5,000. No other payment is made. Since the taxpayer did not pay the TOTAL AMOUNT DUE upon execution of the IL-870 taxpayer will owe the original interest amount of $118.63 (interest from March 15, 2011 to September 1, 2011 and an additional amount of interest from September 2, 2011 until the date of payment). (A (b-20)(2) audit late-payment penalty of 15% would also apply in this situation.)

- The taxpayer signs the IL-870 on September 15, 2011. On September 30, 2011, the taxpayer pays $5,118.63. Although the taxpayer paid the amount due as of October 1, 2011, regardless of the fact that the IL-870 was signed on September 15; interest continued to accrue until the liability was paid, which was September 30, 2011. Taxpayer owes additional interest accrued from September 1 to September 30 in the amount of $15.89. (A (b-20)(2) audit late-payment penalty of 15% would apply in this situation until October 1, 2011. If the remainder is paid after October 1, 2011 the rate will increase to 20%).

a) Original Overpayment Credited to Next Year's Payments

The following information applies only to the computation of interest on a subsequent liability established in a year in which the taxpayer has requested that an overpayment be applied to next year's return as an estimated tax payment.

These procedures are based on the hearing decision in Proctor & Gamble (95-IT-0037) and the federal court case in May Department Stores Co. (36 Fed. Cl. 680 (1996), acq. AOD CC:1997-008 (Aug. 4, 1997)).

When an overpayment is applied to a subsequent year, the Department always applies it to the first estimated tax installment (for tax year 12/31/2013 and prior. For tax years 2014 and after credit carryforwards are applied to the tax period for which estimated payments currently are due as of the date the return is filed, unless an election is made to apply the credit to a different tax year. If the return is filed on or before the extended due date, the credit is considered paid on the due date of the first estimated tax installment of the tax period. However, if all or a portion of the overpayment results from payments made after the due date of the first estimated tax installment, that portion of the credit is considered to be paid on the date the payment was actually made. If the return is filed after the extended due date, that credit is considered paid on the file date of the return that made the election).

When a taxpayer has requested that an overpayment shown on their original return, be applied to their next year's estimated payments, the interest computed on that portion of any subsequent liability should be computed from the earlier of:

1. The date the credit was needed to satisfy the estimated payment requirement for the succeeding year, or

2. The date the overpayment year return was filed.

If an increase in tax liability is established for the overpaid year (year 1) due to an audit or the filing of an amended return, interest on the portion of the liability that is less than or equal to the original credit carryforward amount to year 2 will be computed according to the following steps:

1. Did the taxpayer file the return for year 1 on or before the due date of the first estimated tax installment for year 2? If yes, interest begins to accrue from the day after the due date of the first installment for year 2. If no, go to step 2.

2. Was any portion of the year 1 credit carryforward needed to satisfy any part of the first estimated tax installment for year 2 in order to avoid ES Late Payment penalty? If yes, interest begins to accrue on that portion from the day after the due date of the first installment for year 2. If no, go to step 3.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

3. Was there any excess portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed to satisfy the first estimated tax installment for year 2? If no, stop here. If yes, go to step 4.

4. Did the taxpayer file the return for year 1 before the due date of the second estimated tax installment for year 2? If yes, interest will begin to accrue on the portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed in step 2 from the day after the date the return was filed. If no, go to step 5.

5. Was any excess portion of the credit carryforward in step three needed to satisfy any part of the second estimated tax installment for year 2 in order to avoid ES Late Payment penalty? If yes, interest begins to accrue on that portion from the day after the due date of the second installment for year 2. If no, go to 6.

6. Was there any excess portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed to satisfy the first and second installments for year 2? If no, stop here. If yes, go to 7.

7. Did the taxpayer file the return for year 1 before the due date of the third estimated tax installment for year 2? If yes, interest will begin to accrue on the portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed in steps 2 and 5 from the day after the date the return was filed. If no, go to 8.

8. Was any excess portion of the credit carryforward in steps 3 and 6 needed to satisfy any part of the third estimated tax installment for year 2 in order to avoid ES Late Payment penalty? If yes, interest begins to accrue on that portion from the day after the due date of the third installment for year 2. If no, go to 9.

9. Was there any excess portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed to satisfy the first, second and third installments for year 2? If no, stop here. If yes, go to 10.

10. Did the taxpayer file the return for year 1 before the due date of the fourth estimated tax installment for year 2? If yes, interest will begin to accrue on the portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed in steps 2, 5 and 8 from the day after the date the return was filed. If no, go to 11.

11. Was any excess portion of the credit carryforward in steps 3, 6 and 9 needed to satisfy any part of the fourth estimated tax installment for year 2 in order to avoid Section ES Late Payment penalty? If yes, interest begins to accrue on that portion from the day after the due date of the fourth installment for year 2. If no, go to 12.

12. Was there any excess portion of the credit carryforward that was not needed to satisfy the first, second, third and fourth installments for year 2? If no, stop here. If yes, go to 13.

13. Interest begins to accrue on that portion from the day after the date the return was filed.

Example 1: Company ABC files their original return for calendar year 1 on 10/15/x2. The return reflects total tax due of $20,000. The taxpayer makes estimated tax payments in the amount of $30,000, which results in an overpayment of tax in the amount of $10,000. Company ABC indicates on their return that they want the overpayment of $10,000 applied to their estimated tax payments for year 2. The year 1 overpayment of $10,000 is applied to the first estimated tax installment period for year 2 on 4/15/x2.

Company ABC made estimated tax payments for year 2 (based on 100% of the tax paid in year 1) totaling $20,000. The taxpayer used the $10,000 credit from year 1 and made two $5,000 ES payments, which were for the first and second quarter installments.

Payments & Credits

$10,000 on 4/15/x2	(ES Pmt – Credit from year 1)
$5,000 on 4/15/x2	(ES Pmt)
$5,000 on 6/15/x2	(ES Pmt)
$-0- on 9/15/x2
$-0- on 12/15/x2

An audit is completed on year 1 and it is determined that Company ABC had understated their tax liability by $8,000. For purposes of computing interest on the year 1 liability, we treat the credit as being applied to whatever period the money is needed to satisfy a particular installment. In this case, it was the third and fourth quarter installments since the taxpayer did not make estimated tax payments for these.

Interest on the $8,000 will be computed as follows:

1. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 9/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the third installment payment for year 2), and

2. Interest on $3,000 will be computed from 10/16/x2 (the day after the date the year 1 return was filed).

Example 2: Same as Example 1, except Company ABC's estimated tax payments are made on different dates. The taxpayer used the $10,000 credit from year 1 and made two $5,000 ES payments, which were for the third and fourth quarter installments.

Payments & Credits
$10,000 on 4/15/x2 (ES Pmt – Credit from year 1)
$-0- on 4/15/x2
$-0- on 6/15/x2
$5,000 on 9/15/x2 (ES Pmt)
$5,000 on 12/15/x2 (ES Pmt)

In this example, we would treat the credit as being applied to the first and second installments, since the taxpayer did not make estimated payments for these.

1. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 4/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the first installment payment for year 2), and

2. Interest on $3,000 will be computed from 6/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the second installment payment for year 2).

Example 3: Same as Example 1, except Company ABC understated their tax liability by $15,000. Interest on the $15,000 will be computed as follows:

1. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 3/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the year 1 return).

2. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 9/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the third installment payment for year 2).

3. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 10/16/x2 (the day after the date the year 1 return was filed.)

Example 4: Same as Example 2, except Company ABC understated their tax liability by $15,000. Interest on the $15,000 will be computed as follows:

1. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 3/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the year 1 return.

2. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 4/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the first installment payment for year 2), and

3. Interest on $5,000 will be computed from 6/16/x2 (the day after the due date of the second installment payment for year 2).

b) Original Overpayment Refunded Within 3 Months

When a taxpayer has requested that an overpayment appearing on an original return be refunded, AND the refund was issued within 3 months from the last date prescribed for filing the return or from the date the return was filed whichever is later (therefore, no interest was paid on the overpayment), interest on that portion of any subsequent deficiency should be computed from the date the refund was issued.

> Example: Company A makes timely estimated payments totaling $30,000 for the 1988 calendar tax year. On October 15, 1989 Company A files a tax return reporting a liability of $20,000 and requesting that the overpayment of $10,000 on the original return be refunded. The refund was issued on December 15, 1989. In 1990, Company A is audited for 1988 and a deficiency of $25,000 is proposed. Interest on $15,000 ($25,000 - $10,000) of the deficiency would be computed from the March 16, 1989 through December 14, 1989 and on $25,000 from December 15, 1989 to the date of payment.

REF: IRS Rev. Ruling 88-98.

c) Original Overpayment Not Refunded Within 3 Months

When a taxpayer has requested that an overpayment appearing on an original return be refunded AND the refund is not issued within the 3-month time period described above, interest on that portion of any subsequent deficiency should be computed from the date of overpayment.

> Example: Company A makes timely estimated payments totaling $30,000 for the 1988 calendar tax year. On October 15, 1989 Company A files a tax return reporting a liability of $20,000 and requesting that the overpayment of $10,000 on the original return be refunded. The refund (consisting of the tax and interest on the $10,000, computed from October 15, 1989) was issued on June 30, 1990. In 1990, Company A is audited for 1988 and a deficiency of $25,000 is proposed. Interest on $15,000 ($25,000 - $10,000) of the deficiency is computed from March 16, 1989 through October 14, 1989, on $25,000 from October 15, 1989 to the date of payment and on the interest paid on the refund starting from June 30, 1990 to the date of payment.

d) Original Overpayment Refund Still Pending

When a taxpayer has requested that an overpayment appearing on an original return be refunded AND the refund is still pending, interest on a subsequent deficiency is only computed on the amount, if any, by which the deficiency exceeds the amount of the pending refund.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example: Company A makes timely estimated payments totaling $30,000 for the 1988 calendar tax year. On October 15, 1989 Company A files a tax return reporting a liability of $20,000 and requesting that the overpayment of $10,000 on the original return be refunded. The refund is currently pending. In 1990, Company A is audited for 1988 and a deficiency of $25,000 is proposed. No interest would be computed on $10,000 of the deficiency. Interest on the remaining $15,000 would be computed from the March 16, 1989 to the date of payment.

4. Interest on Overpayments

An overpayment is any creditable or refundable portion of taxes, penalty or interest that was previously paid. This means that an overpayment of tax includes any paid previously assessed penalties and interest related to the overpaid tax.

If, in the course of an audit, it is determined that an overpayment of tax exists for a reason other than a federal capital loss, net operating loss carryback or an Illinois net loss carryback, the overpayment will include any refundable penalties and any interest assessed on tax or on penalties under UPIA § 3-2. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(2). If an audit reduces a taxpayer's income tax liability which has been paid along with a UPIA § 3-3(b), (b-5), (b-10), (b-15) and (b-20) assessable penalty and interest, the overpayment (upon which interest is computed) includes the amount of the reduction in penalty and underpayment interest attributable to the reduction in tax. For UPIA liability periods the term "overpayment" would also include any interest previously paid on penalties.

The ES Late Payment penalty, which is based on the amount of tax "shown on the return" IS NOT REDUCED OR INCREASED by any subsequent action that alters the tax liability.

The carryback of a federal capital loss or net operating loss or an Illinois net loss will not reduce any previously imposed penalties.

Example: Corporation Z files its December 31, 2008 IL-1120 on November 6, 2009 and pays tax with the return in the amount of $5,000, UPIA-5 (§ 3-3(a-10)) late-filing penalty in the amount of $100, UPIA-5 (§ 3-3 (b-20)) late-payment penalty in the amount of $500 and interest in the amount of $46.99 through November 6, 2009. During the course of an audit, the auditor determines that the taxpayer has overpaid its tax liability by $2,400. In addition to the $2,400 tax refund, Corporation Z will also receive a refund of the late-filing penalty, late-payment penalty and interest previously paid on the $2,400 of $48, $240 and $22.55, respectively, for a total overpayment amount of $2,710.55.

a) Date of Overpayment

(1) The date or dates of overpayment, except in the case of a federal change due to the final allowance of a carryback from a loss year ending prior to December 31, 1986, are the date of payment of the first amount that (when added to previous payments) exceeds the tax liability (including interest or penalties) for the taxable year and the date or dates of any subsequent payments made with respect to the tax liability.

There can be no overpayment of tax until the LATER of the following three situations occurs (REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)):

- The last day prescribed for filing the return. (The original due date).

  Example: Corporation Q is a calendar year filer for 2008. The statutory due date is March 15, 2009. Corporation Q files its annual return on March 1, 2009. The taxpayer has made excess estimated payments of $2,000. The taxpayer is sent a refund on September 11, 2009. Interest would be computed from March 16, 2009 even though the tax was paid prior to that date.

- The date the original return (IL-1120) is actually filed for the taxable year.

  Example 1: Corporation K files its December 31, 2006 IL-1120 on September 14, 2007 showing a total tax liability of $25,000. Corporation K has made estimated payments in the amount of $15,000 and paid tax in the amount of $10,000 with the return. In 2009, Corporation K files an IL-1120X to report a federal RAR, which reduces its Illinois income tax liability by $12,000. Interest is computed on the refund from the date the original return was filed (September 14, 2007) to the date that the refund is made.

  Example 2: Corporation B files a tentative return (IL-505-B) for the year ending December 31, 2007 on March 15, 2008. The taxpayer receives an automatic extension of time until October 17, 2008. A final return is filed on August 15, 2008. The date of overpayment will be August 15, 2008.

  Prior to the December 28, 1982 revisions to the IAC § 100.9400, the date the return was actually filed was not a criteria in determining the date of the overpayments.

- The date that the entire tax liability due for the taxable year is satisfied.

  Example: Corporation X is a calendar year filer for 2007 and pays $10,000 tax with its original return on March 15, 2008, the statutory due date of the return. Corporation X realizes that it made an error in its original filing and files an IL-1120-X on October 17, 2008 paying additional tax in the amount of $5,000 plus

DATE	ADJUSTMENT	TOTAL TAX
03/15/2008	Filed original return	$10,000
10/17/2008	IL-1120-X $5,000	$15,000
01/12/2010	Audit ($2,500)	$12,500

The date from which interest is calculated on the overpayment is October 17, 2008. If not for the additional tax payment of $5,000 on that date, the taxpayer would not be overpaid; hence, the date of the overpayment is October 17, 2008.

The amount of the overpayment is the $2,500 of tax that was overpaid as of October 17, 2008 plus the accompanying interest of $44.25 which was also paid on October 17, 2008 for a total overpayment amount of $2,544.25. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(2). Interest would be computed from October 17, 2008 through the date the refund was issued on an overpayment of $2,544.25.

If the amount of overpayment of tax established in audit was $7,000, then there would have been two interest start dates. Interest on $5,000 of tax plus the $88.49 of previously paid interest would have been computed from October 17, 2008. Interest on the remaining $2,000 would have been computed from March 15, 2008, which was the date the original return was filed and the $10,000 tax was paid.

(2) In the case of a federal change due to the final allowance of a carryback from a loss year ending prior to December 31, 1986, the date of overpayment shall be:

a. The close of the taxable year in which the deduction, losses, or other item or event occurred that created the federal carryback

b. Or, the date when the return for the carryback year is filed, whichever is later.

(3) In the case of a federal change due to the final allowance of a carryback or carryforward from a loss year ending on or after December 31, 1986, and in the case of an Illinois change due to the carryforward or carryback of an Illinois net loss, Illinois investment credit, jobs credit, replacement tax credit, or other credit (other than estimated or tentative tax credit) from a loss or credit year ending on or after December 31, 1986, the date of overpayment shall be:

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

a. The date the claim for refund is filed, except, that if any overpayment is refunded within 3 months after the date the claim for refund is filed, no interest shall be allowed on the overpayment.

b. Beginning January 1, 1994, if a claim for refund relates to an overpayment attributable to a net loss carryback as provided by IITA § 207, the date of overpayment shall be the last day of the taxable year in which the loss was incurred.

Example: ABC filed a timely IL-1120 for 1989 reflecting income of $50,000. Corporation ABC filed a timely IL-1120 for calendar year 1992 reflecting an Illinois net loss of $100,000. On December 13, 1993 ABC filed an IL-1120-X carrying back its 1992 INLD to 1989 and requesting a refund of overpaid taxes.

In April of 1994, the IL-1120 for 1992 and the IL-1120-X for 1989 are audited and it is determined that ABC actually incurred an Illinois net loss of $80,000 in 1992. An IL-870 is prepared reflecting the approved refund for 1989 and the comments section of the IL-870 will state that the IL-870 is reflecting a partial denial of the claim which was filed December 13, 1993.

Since the Illinois net loss carryback claim was filed before January 1, 1994, IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C) applies and the date of overpayment is the date the claim is filed. If, however, the taxpayer formally withdrew the December 13, 1993 claim and used the IL-870 as an original claim to carryback the 1993 Illinois net loss, the claim would be considered "filed" as of the date the taxpayer signed the IL-870. Since this date would be after January 1, 1994, IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(D) would apply and the date of overpayment for the Illinois net loss claim would be the end of the loss year.

b) Period for which interest is allowable

On and after January 1, 1994, interest on amounts refunded or credited pursuant to the filing of an amended return or claim for refund shall be determined from the due date of the original return or the date of overpayment, whichever is later, to the date of payment by the Department.

Prior to January 1, 1994, interest shall be allowed and paid from the date of overpayment to a date determined by the Director or his or her designee, which shall not be more than 30 days prior to the date of any refund or credit.

No interest shall be paid to a taxpayer on any refund allowed under the Tax Delinquency Amnesty Act.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

According to Public Act 98-925 (requiring us to allow taxpayers to elect to apply overpayments against estimated tax on late returns and amended returns):

- In the case of a timely-filed original return on which the taxpayer elects to have some or all of the overpayment applied to the following year's estimated tax obligation, no interest is allowed on the amount applied.

- On a late-filed original return or an amended return, interest accrues on the amount applied against estimated tax under principles that otherwise apply to refund but cannot accrue after the filing date of the return or amended return on which the election is made.

c) For Refund Claims Filed On or After January 1, 1994

The date of overpayment will be as detailed in IAC § 700.230(b) as follows:

The date of overpayment means:

- The date the tax was paid,

- The original due date of the return, or

- The date a processable return was received, whichever is later.

EXCEPT IN THE FOLLOWING SITUATIONS:

- If a claim for refund is filed that is the result of an Illinois net loss carryback, the date of overpayment is the last day of the loss year. REF: UPIA § 3-2(d)

- If a claim for refund is filed resulting from the carry back of a federal net operating loss or a capital loss, the date of overpayment shall be the date the claim for refund is filed (or the date an IL-870 is issued). IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C)

No interest will be paid upon any overpayment of tax if the overpayment is refunded within 90 days after the due date of the original return, or within 90 days of receipt of a processable return or within 90 days of the date of overpayment, whichever is later.

For more information regarding processable and unprocessable returns refer to Unprocessable Returns.

d) Refunds Resulting from Carryforwards and Carrybacks

There are currently 8 possible dates of overpayment contained in IAC § 100.9400:

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryback a pre-86 Federal net operating loss or a Federal capital loss, the date of overpayment is the last day of the loss year or the date the final return is filed for the carryback year, whichever is later. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(B).

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryforward a pre-86 Federal net operating loss or a Federal capital loss, the date of overpayment is the latter of the original due date of the return (without extensions) for the carryforward year, the date the payment was made which created the overpayment in the carryforward year or the date the return for the carryforward year was filed. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(A).

In the case of a carryforward year with an original due date (without extensions) for the return which occurs on or after January 1, 1994, the final criteria listed above would be the date a processable return was filed for the carryforward year.

- In the case of a claim being filed to carry a Federal capital loss which is incurred in a tax year ending on or after 12/31/86 either forward or back, the date of overpayment is the date the claim is filed. If the refund is issued within 3 months of the date the claim is filed, no interest is paid. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C).

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryback an Illinois net loss, IF THE CLAIM IS FILED PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1994, the date of overpayment is the date the claim was filed. If the refund is issued within 3 months of the date the claim is filed, no interest is paid. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C).

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryback an Illinois net loss, IF THE CLAIM IS FILED ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1994, the date of overpayment is the end of the loss year. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(D).

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryforward an Illinois net loss, the date of overpayment is the date the claim is filed. If the refund is issued within 3 months of the date the claim is filed, no interest is paid. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C).

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryforward an Illinois credit from a credit year which ended prior to 12/31/86, the date of overpayment is the later of the original due date of the return (without extensions) for the carryforward year, the date the payment was made which created the overpayment in the carryforward year or the date the return for the carryforward year was filed. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(A).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In the case of a carryforward year with an original due date (without extensions) for the return which occurs on or after January 1, 1994, the final criteria listed above would be the date a processable return was filed for the carryforward year.

- In the case of a claim being filed to carryforward an Illinois credit from a credit year which ended on or after 12/31/86, the date of overpayment is the date the claim was filed. If the refund is issued within 3 months of the date the claim is filed, no interest is paid. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C).

If the taxpayer has filed a claim for refund, any audit adjustments to the claim which decrease the overpayment should be clearly identified on the IL-870 as either a total or partial denial of the originally filed claim. UNLESS THE TAXPAYER HAS OFFICIALLY WITHDRAWN THE CLAIM AND THE CLAIM IS NOW BEING ESTABLISHED IN AUDIT (CL), THE IL-870 IS NOT SUPERSEDING OR REPLACING THE ORIGINALLY FILED CLAIM. If an originally filed claim is being increased in audit, the signed IL-870 is considered the taxpayer's claim for the additional overpayment amount.

> Example: Corporation A files a timely IL-1120 for 1992 reflecting an Illinois Net Loss Deduction (INLD) of $200,000. In December of 1993, Corporation A files an IL-1120-X for 1989 carrying the INLD back to offset income in that year and requesting a refund. Interest on the refund would begin on the date the claim was filed (assuming the refund was not paid within 3 months of the date of claim).
> In March of 1994, an audit is conducted on the 1992 return and the 1989 claim. It is determined that an incorrect Illinois Net Loss was claimed in 1992. The amount of refund requested is correspondingly reduced. The taxpayer agrees with the audit results and signs the IL-870, which reflects the reduced refund amount on March 31, 1994.
> Since the IL-870 is denying a portion of the originally filed claim, the date of overpayment for the reduced amount of refund is still the date the original claim was filed. If, however, the taxpayer had formally withdrawn the claim and stated that the IL-870 would serve as the originally filed claim carrying back the correct amount of INLD, the date the IL-870 was signed would be considered the date of claim. Since the IL-870 was signed on or after January 1, 1994, the UPIA restricted interest provisions would be in effect and the date of overpayment for the INLD carryback would be the end of the loss year (December 31, 1992).

In audits involving normal audit deficiencies or overpayments and restricted interest overpayments, it is necessary to include an EDA-25, Auditor's Report, FOR EACH SITUATION, which identifies the amount of liability or overpayment and the appropriate interest amounts. The multiple EDA-25s are necessary for processing purposes.

The following paragraphs detail some of the restricted interest situations that are often encountered in audit.

All of the examples contained in the following paragraphs assume:

- The taxpayers have calendar year tax years.
- The term "credits" refers to the Article 2 credits which are available. The term, as it is used below, does not include estimated or tentative payment credit carryforwards from an original return.
- No credits or refunds were issued on the original returns.
- All original returns were timely filed.
- All refunds were issued more than 90 days after the date the claim was filed.
- The "date the refund is issued" is the “Posted” date on the Transaction tab in GenTax (or the warrant request (REQ) date, which appeared on the Taxpayer History Report in the BIT system).
- Illinois tax amounts are not intended to be mathematically accurate but rather are used to illustrate the interest computation principles involved.
- The terms “pre-loss” and “pre-credit” refer to the audit liability that exists if the loss or excess credit carryforward is not taken into consideration.
- The term “original due date” refers to the due date of the return without regard to extensions.

e) Illinois Net Loss/Credit C/F on Original Return

When an Illinois net loss or credit is carried forward on an original return, no interest will accrue on the tax liability which would have been incurred on that original return had there been no Illinois net loss or credit to carry forward. An UNDERPAYMENT of tax on the original return is determined based on the amount that was required to be shown as tax on the original return, reduced by the amount of any credit against the tax which was properly allowable ON THE DATE THE RETURN WAS REQUIRED TO BE FILED.

Example: Corporation A incurred an Illinois net loss for 1989. On 10/15/91 Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 carrying forward the 1989 Illinois net loss and completely offsetting any 1990 tax liability. No interest would accrue on any unpaid "pre-loss" liability for 1990 for the period of 3/15/91 to 10/15/91. Interest on any overpayment will begin to accrue as of 10/15/91, the date the return was filed.

f) Illinois Net Loss/Credit Carried on Amended Return

When an Illinois net loss or credit is carried forward on an amended return or carried back on an amended return filed prior to January 1, 1994, the provisions of IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C) would apply. This section states that for post-12/31/86 net operating loss carrybacks (if the claim is filed prior to January 1, 1994) or carryforwards, the date of overpayment for calculating interest on the resulting overpayments is the date the claim is filed.

Example 1: For 1989, Corporation A incurs an Illinois net loss. On 2/1/92, Corporation A files a claim for refund carrying back the 1989 Illinois net loss to 1986. Interest on the resulting overpayment will be calculated from the date the claim was filed (2/1/92) through the date the refund is issued.

Example 2: For the year ended 1989, Corporation A incurs an Illinois net loss of $1 million. On 10/15/91, Corporation A files an IL-1120 for 1990 and does not carry the 1989 loss forward. The 1990 original return reflects a tax liability of $10,000. Corporation A has made payments in the amount of $6,000 and has an outstanding tax balance on the original return of $4,000. On 11/20/92, Corporation A files an IL-1120-X for 1990, carrying forward the 1989 Illinois net loss and reducing the tax liability for 1990 to $-0-.

Interest will accrue on the unpaid, original return, liability of $4,000 from the due date of the original return without extensions (3/15/91) to the date the claim was filed (11/20/92). Once the 1989 Illinois net loss is carried forward, interest on the net overpayment of $6,000 is calculated from the date the claim was filed through the date the refund is issued.

If an Illinois net loss is carried back on an amended return which is filed on or after January 1, 1994, the date of overpayment is the last day of the loss year.

Example 3: For the year ended 1992, Corporation A incurs an Illinois net loss which Corporation A carries back to 1989 on an amended return filed February 2, 1994. Interest on the resulting refund is computed from the end of the loss year (12/31/92) through the date the refund is issued.

g) Illinois Net Loss/Credit Carried in Audit

Prior to January 1, 1994, when no claim has been filed to carry the Illinois net loss either back or forward or an Illinois credit forward and the Illinois net loss or credit is carried in audit, the "date of overpayment" for any resulting refund would be the date the IL-870 is signed since, in this situation, the IL-870 is considered the claim. REF:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Form IL-870. IF THE TAXPAYER DOES NOT AGREE WITH THE AUDIT RESULTS AND SIGN THE IL-870, THE LOSSES CANNOT BE CARRIED IN AUDIT. THE AUDITOR SHOULD ESTABLISH THE AUDIT LIABILITY WITHOUT TAKING ANY LOSS OR CREDIT CARRYOVERS INTO CONSIDERATION. THE TAXPAYER WILL THEN BE RESPONSIBLE FOR FILING AMENDED RETURNS CARRYING THE LOSSES OR CREDITS.

Example 1: For 1989, Corporation A incurs an Illinois net loss. An audit is conducted on the period covering tax years 1987 through 1989. In the audit, it is realized that taxpayer has never carried the 1989 Illinois net loss to an income year and it is agreed that the loss should be carried back to 1986. Taxpayer signs the IL-870 (reflecting the overpayment resulting from the Illinois net loss carryback to 1986) on 6/15/91. Interest on the refund will begin to accrue on the date of overpayment (i.e. the date the IL-870 was signed - 6/15/91).

Example 2: For 1986, Corporation A incurred an Illinois net loss, which had never been carried. An audit is conducted on the period of 1986 through 1989 and, it is agreed that the Illinois net loss will be carried forward to offset income in 1987. Corporation A signs the IL-870 (which reflects the overpayment resulting from the Illinois net loss carryforward to 1987) on 6/15/91. Interest on the refund will begin to accrue on the date of overpayment (i.e. the date the IL-870 was signed - 6/15/91).

On or after January 1, 1994, if a taxpayer does not file a claim carrying back an Illinois net loss and the loss is carried back in audit, interest on the resulting refund will begin to accrue on the last day of the loss year.

Example 3: For 1992, Corporation A incurred an Illinois net loss, which had never been carried. An audit is conducted on the period of 1989 through 1992 and it is agreed in audit that the 1992 Illinois net loss should be carried back to offset income in 1989. The IL-870 is signed by the taxpayer on March 20, 1994 and reflects an overpayment for 1989 based on the Illinois net loss carryback. Interest on the 1989 overpayment will accrue from the end of the loss year (12/31/92) through the date the refund is issued.

For additional examples on calculating interest refer to Chapter 43 GenTax Penalty and Interest Calculator Exhibits.

h) For Refund Claims Filed Prior to January 1, 1994

The date of overpayment is the date of payment of the tax that is determined to be overpaid. However, there can be no overpayment prior to the due date of the return, the date the return was filed or the date the tax liability is satisfied whichever is later. This applies to both original and amended returns with two exceptions:

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

1. In the case of federal change due to the final allowance of a federal net operating loss carryback from a loss year ending prior to 12/31/86, the date of overpayment will be the close of the taxable year in which the deduction, losses, or other item or event occurred which created the federal carryback, or the date when the return for the carryback year is filed, whichever is later. IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(B); or

2. In the case of a federal change due to the final allowance of a carryback or carryforward from a loss year ending on or after 12/31/86, and in the case of an Illinois change due to the carryforward or carryback of an Illinois net loss, Illinois investment credit, jobs credit, replacement tax credit, or other credit (other than estimated or tentative tax credit from a loss or credit year ending on or after December 31,1986), the date of overpayment shall be the date the claim for refund is filed. However, if any overpayment is refunded within 3 months of the date the claim for refund is filed, no interest will be allowed. IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C).

A signed IL-870 (Waiver of Restrictions) reflecting an overpayment will also be considered a claim for refund.

5. Interest on Penalties

FOR RETURNS DUE ON AND AFTER JANUARY 1, 2001, INTEREST IS NO LONGER COMPUTED ON PENALTIES, ONLY TAX. REF: UPIA SECTION 3-2(c-5).

THIS PARAGRAPH APPLIES TO PENALTIES, WHICH ARE ASSESSED ON LIABILITY PERIODS WITH ORIGINAL DUE DATES, WHICH OCCUR ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1994 AND ON OR BEFORE DECEMBER 31, 2000.

Any time a UPIA penalty is assessed on a liability period, the penalty will accrue interest from the due date of the original return without regard to extensions. The interest will be assessed at the same rate as interest on tax. The interest will be assessed in the same manner as the penalty to which it applies.

Example: Corporation A is a calendar year, Illinois filer. Corporation A files its original return for 1993 on November 15, 1994. Corporation A's return reflects a tax liability of $100,000 which Corporation A paid with its return. When Corporation A's return is processed, Corporation A will be billed for a UPIA late-filing penalty of $5,000 plus interest on the penalty from March 15, 1994. Corporation A will also be billed for a UPIA estimated payment penalty of $13,500 plus interest on the penalty from March 15, 1994. Finally Corporation A will be billed for interest on the tax from March 15, 1994 until the date the tax was paid, November 15, 1994.

The interest due on the tax will not continue to accrue after November 15, 1994 since the tax liability was paid, however, interest on each of the penalties will continue to accrue until the date each of the PENALTIES are paid. The only way for A to protest either the penalties or the interest on tax or penalties is to pay the liability and file a claim since the penalties and the interest are being assessed on an admitted, deemed assessed liability.

If, in December of 1995, an audit is completed on Corporation A's 1993 return resulting in a $50,000 liability which the taxpayer disagrees to at the field level, a UPIA late-filing penalty of $2,500 will be proposed based on the additional liability established in audit. In addition, interest on the tax due and on the late-filing penalty will be computed starting with the original due date of the 1993 return, March 15, 1994. Corporation A will be able to protest the tax and the late-filing penalty related to the audit since the penalty is being assessed on a protestable tax liability.

As discussed under the heading Interest On Deficiencies, if the taxpayer pays the total amount due on a notice and demand within 30 days of the date of the notice and demand, no additional interest accrues from the date of the notice and demand. This provision applies to interest on penalties as well as interest on tax.

6. Interest On Erroneous Refunds

UPIA § 3-2(e) states:

"Any portion of the tax imposed by an Act to which this Act is applicable or any interest or penalty which has been erroneously refunded and which is recoverable by the Department shall bear interest from the date of payment of the refund. However, no interest will be charged if the erroneous refund is for an amount less than $500 and is due to a mistake of the Department."

The erroneous refund provisions of IITA § 1003 were deleted with the enactment of UPIA.

If an erroneous refund is being recovered in audit it is important to remember that interest will be charged not only on the tax being recovered but also any penalties and interest being recovered.

Example: Corporation A incurs an Illinois net loss in calendar year 1993 which Corporation A carries back to 1990 to offset income in that year. Corporation A files an IL-1120X for 1990 claiming a refund of $50,000. The refund is issued to Corporation A on March 15, 1995 for a total amount of $54,210 ($50,000 plus $4,210 of interest).

In January 1997, an audit is conducted on 1993 and it is determined that Corporation A had no Illinois net loss to carry back to 1990. The refund, which was issued in March of 1995, is considered an erroneous refund, therefore, a deficiency is proposed of $54,210 plus interest on the entire amount from March 15, 1995 until the date of payment.

7. Restricted Interest

“Restricted interest” is a federal income tax term which refers to the interest that is due on underpayments that are reduced or extinguished by a carryback that is not effective as of the original due date. For example, a federal capital loss may extinguish a tax liability, but restricted interest will need to be computed on any tax underpayment until the effective date that the Illinois tax was reduced by the federal capital loss.

Restricted interest accrues from the date of underpayment until the date the carryback that reduces or eliminates the underpayment is deemed to occur. Federal capital loss and net operating loss carrybacks are deemed to arise on the original due date of the loss year return. IRC § 6601(d)(1). The same rule should apply for Illinois net loss carrybacks prior to the UPIA. After the interest provisions of the UPIA took effect on January 1, 1994, Illinois net loss carrybacks are deemed to arise on the last day of the loss year. UPIA § 3-2(d).

Underpayments that are eliminated by a carryforward do not accrue interest because the carryforward is in existence before the year of the underpayment, so that the tax eliminated by the carryforward is never actually underpaid. The one exception to this rule is when the carryforward is actually produced by a carryback from a loss year after the year of the underpayment, such as when the carryback of a federal capital loss causes the taxpayer to have an Illinois net loss in the carryback year. In that case, the Illinois net loss created by the carryback is not deemed to arise until the original return due date of the capital loss year, so that any underpayment for a year prior to the capital loss year will accrue restricted interest until the capital loss is deemed to arise.

8. Additional Audit Situations

As often happens, situations are encountered in audits that do not precisely fit within the basic definitions shown above. The following examples reflect some of those situations.

a) Taxpayer files a claim for refund carrying back an Illinois Net Loss prior to January 1, 1994

The date the claim is filed determines the "date of overpayment" only for the Illinois net loss reflected on the claim. Any audit adjustments, which increase the amount of loss or increase or decrease the amount of income in the carryback year(s), would not use this original "date of overpayment" for interest computation purposes. Instead, if the IL-870 is signed prior to January 1, 1994, the date the IL-870 is signed will determine the "date of overpayment" for any additional overpayment created in audit. If the IL-870 is signed after January 1, 1994, the "date of overpayment" for the additional overpayment created in audit would be the end of the loss year.

Had the Audit Bureau not discovered the error which increased the amount of Illinois net loss available to be carried or increased or decreased the amount of income in the carryback year(s), the taxpayer would have had to file a subsequent, amended return to correct the error. If this had happened, the additional overpayment would have had a "date of overpayment" which was determined based on the filing date of the subsequent claim (prior to January 1, 1994) or the end of the loss year (on or after January 1, 1994).

Example 1: Corporation A incurred an Illinois net loss in 1989 and filed a claim on 1/12/91 to carryback the Illinois net loss to 1986. In a 1992 audit, the 1989 Illinois net loss is increased and the increase is also carried back to 1986.

The date of overpayment for the original claim amount is 1/12/91. The date of overpayment for the additional amount carried back per audit is the date the IL-870 is signed.

Example 2: Given the following information for Corporation A:

1986: (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried back)

IL Net Income	As filed	$2,000,000
Tax	As filed		$ 130,000
IL Net Income	Per audit	$4,000,000
Tax	Per audit		$ 260,000

IL Net Loss	As filed	(8,000,000)
IL Net Loss	Per audit	(8,100,000)

Corporation A filed a claim on 1/1/91 to carry back $2,000,000 of the 1989 IL Net Loss to 1986. The "date of overpayment" for the claim amount of $130,000 is 1/1/91. Interest would accrue on the overpayment from 1/1/91 until the refund is issued.

In 1992, an audit is conducted on the tax years 1986 through 1989. The Illinois audit adjustments increased the amount of Illinois income in 1986 and carried back an additional $2,000,000 of the 1989 Illinois net loss. Therefore, the IL-870 would net the "pre-loss" tax increase to 1986 and the additional 1989 loss carryback decrease to 1986 tax and would reflect no change in the tax liability for 1986. In addition, the IL-870 would reflect interest which had accrued on the additional "pre-loss" tax increase per audit of $130,000 from 3/15/87 (the original due date of the 1986 return without extensions) until 3/15/90, the unextended due date of the 1989 return. IRC§ 6601(d)(1).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example 3: Corporation A incurred an Illinois net loss in 1992 and filed a claim on 11/12/93 to carryback the Illinois net loss to 1989. In an audit that was completed in 1994, the 1992 Illinois net loss is increased and the increase is also carried back to 1989. The IL-870 is signed 12/20/94.

The date of overpayment for the original refund requested on the 1989 claim is 11/12/93, the date the claim is filed. The additional amount of refund that was carried back in audit has a date of overpayment of the end of the loss year (12/31/92).

b) Illinois net loss is carried forward on an ORIGINAL RETURN

This section deals with an audit adjustment that either:

- Increases the amount of loss available to be carried forward, or
- Increases the amount of credit which can be carried forward, or
- Increases or decreases the amount of income which can be offset by the loss, and

THE NET RESULT OF THE AUDIT IS NOT AN OVERPAYMENT.

The additional Illinois net loss or credit which is carried forward in audit will be considered to have been carried forward as of the date the original return for the carryforward year was filed.

In determining whether there is an underpayment of tax on the original return, we should determine the amount that was required to be shown as tax on the return based on the facts in existence as of the end of the taxable year. The amount required to be shown as tax on the original return is reduced by the amount of any deduction in computing net income and any credit against the tax, which was properly allowable on the date the return was required to be filed. There is no underpayment if there was a deduction or credit available (including an Illinois Net Loss which is available for carryforward to the tax year) on the date the original return was filed which could be used to reduce the taxpayer's liability.

Example 1: Corporation A incurs Illinois net losses in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989. The 1986 through 1988 Illinois net losses are carried forward on the original return filed for 1990 and totally offset the 1990 Illinois income. In audit, the 1990 Illinois income is increased by $500,000 and the 1989 Illinois net loss is carried forward and, again, totally offsets the income for 1990. On the IL-870 the tax effects of the increase in "pre-loss" income and the allowance of the additional carryforward of the 1989 Illinois net loss are netted and result in no additional tax liability per audit for 1990. No interest would be computed in this situation since the Illinois net loss was carried forward on the original return for 1990 AND THE AUDIT DID NOT RESULT IN A REFUND.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example 2: Given the following facts for Corporation A:

1987	Illinois net loss	As Filed	$1,000,000
1988	Illinois net loss	As Filed	500,000
1989	Illinois net loss	As Filed	800,000
		Per Audit	1,000,000

1990 (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried forward):

Illinois net income	As Filed	$3,000,000
Tax	As Filed		$ 219,000
Illinois net income	Per Audit	4,000,000
Tax	Per Audit		292,000
(with Illinois loss c/f)
Illinois net income	As Filed	$ 700,000
Tax	As Filed		$ 51,100

Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 carrying forward all of its 1987, 1988 and 1989 Illinois net losses. The IL-1120, as filed, reflected remaining 1990 Illinois income of $700,000, resulting in a tax liability of $51,100 which Corporation A had paid as of 3/15/91.

An audit was conducted on Corporation A for the period of 1987 through 1990. The amount of Illinois net loss originally reported in 1989 and the amount of income originally reported in 1990 were each increased (see above). The increased amount of loss in 1989 was carried forward and the "net" audit increase to income for 1990 was $800,000. This resulted in a "net" audit tax increase of $58,400.

Since the Illinois net losses were originally carried forward on the original return and THE AUDIT DID NOT RESULT IN AN OVERPAYMENT, interest on the "net" audit tax increase of $58,400 would be computed from the original due date of the return (3/15/91) through the date the liability is paid.

c) Taxpayer has carried forward an Illinois net loss or credit on an AMENDED RETURN

This section deals with an audit adjustment that either:

- Increases the amount of loss or credit available to be carried forward, or
- Increases or decreases the amount of income which can be offset by the loss or credit, and

THE NET RESULT OF THE AUDIT WILL NOT BE A REFUND.

The additional Illinois net loss credit which is carried forward in audit will be considered to have been carried forward as of the date the amended return was filed.

Example 1: Corporation A incurs Illinois net losses in 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989. No Illinois net losses are carried forward on the original return filed for 1990 and Corporation A pays the liability reflected on the return as filed. On 1/1/92 Corporation A files an amended return carrying forward the 1986 through 1988 Illinois net losses which totally offset the 1990 Illinois income. Interest on the resulting refund would begin to accrue on the date of overpayment (i.e. the date the claim was filed -1/1/92) and would continue to accrue until the date the refund is issued.

In audit, the 1990 Illinois income is increased and the 1989 Illinois net loss is carried forward to completely offset the audit increase to income for 1990. On the IL-870 the tax effects of the increase in "pre-loss" income and the allowance of the additional carryforward of the 1989 Illinois net loss are netted and result in no additional tax liability, per audit, for 1990. Although the taxpayer did not claim the net loss deduction until it filed an amended return over one year after the unextended due date of the return, so that interest did not accrue on the refund until the refund claim was filed, a net loss carryforward deduction sufficient to eliminate all net income after all audit adjustments was in existence as of the end of the tax year, so there is no underpayment on which interest may accrue.

Example 2: Given the following facts for Corporation A:

1987	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	$1,000,000
1988	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	500,000
1989	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	800,000
		Per Audit	1,000,000

1990 (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried forward):

Illinois Net Income	As Filed	$3,000,000
Tax	As Filed		$219,000
Illinois Net Income	Per Audit	4,000,000
Tax	Per Audit		292,000

Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 without carrying forward any Illinois net losses, reporting 1990 Illinois income of $3,000,000 and a tax liability of $219,000. The $219,000 had been paid as of 3/15/91. On 1/1/92 Corporation A filed an amended return carrying forward the 1987, 1988 and 1989 Illinois net losses and offsetting all but $700,000 of Illinois income in 1990. Interest on the

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. overpayment would begin to accrue on the date of overpayment (i.e. the date the claim was filed - 1/1/92) and would continue to accrue until the date the refund was issued.

An audit was conducted on Corporation A for the period of 1987 through 1990. The amount of Illinois net loss originally reported in 1989 and the amount of income originally reported in 1990 were each increased (see above). The increased amount of loss in 1989 was carried forward and the "net" audit increase to income for 1990 was $800,000. This resulted in a "net" audit tax increase of $58,400.

Interest would accrue only on the "net audit tax increase", taking into account both the increase in 1990 income and the increase in Illinois net loss carryforward deduction, and the interest would accrue from the 1/1/92 date of underpayment through the date the liability is paid. Any interest paid on the original refund would also have to be repaid by the taxpayer, to the extent the original refund is reduced by the net audit tax increase.

d) Taxpayer has carried forward an Illinois net loss on either an original return or an amended return

This section deals with an audit adjustment that either:

- Increases the amount of loss available to be carried forward, or
- Increases or decreases the amount of income which can be offset by the loss, and

THE NET RESULT OF THE AUDIT WILL BE A REFUND.

The additional Illinois net loss which is carried forward in audit will be considered to have been carried forward as of the date the IL-870 is signed.

Example 1: Given the following facts for Corporation A:

1987	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	$1,000,000
1988	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	500,000
1989	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	800,000
		Per Audit	1,500,000

1990 (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried forward):

Illinois Net Income	As Filed	$3,000,000
Tax	As Filed		$219,000

Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 carrying forward all of its 1987, 1988 and 1989 Illinois net losses. The IL-1120, as filed, reflected remaining 1990 Illinois income of $700,000 resulting in a tax liability of $51,100 which Corporation A had paid as of 3/15/91.

An audit was conducted on Corporation A for the period of 1987 through 1990. The amount of Illinois net loss originally reported in 1989 was increased (see above). The increased amount of loss in 1989 was carried forward and completely offset the remaining 1990 Illinois income, resulting in an audit overpayment of $51,100. Interest on the audit overpayment would begin to accrue as of the date the IL-870 is signed.

Example 2: Given the following facts for Corporation A:

1987	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	$1,000,000
1988	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	500,000
1989	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	800,000
	Tax	Per Audit	2,000,000

1990 (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried forward):

Illinois Net Income	As Filed	$3,000,000
Tax	As Filed		$219,000
Illinois Net Income	Per Audit	4,000,000
Tax	Per Audit		292,000

Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 carrying forward all of its 1987, 1988 and 1989 Illinois net losses. The IL-1120, as filed, reflected remaining 1990 Illinois income of $700,000 resulting in a tax liability of $51,100 which Corporation A had paid as of 3/15/91.

An audit was conducted on Corporation A for the period of 1987 through 1990. The amount of Illinois Net Loss originally reported in 1989 and the amount of income originally reported in 1990 were increased (see above). It was agreed in audit to carry forward the increased amount of loss for 1989 and offset all but $500,000 of the revised 1990 Illinois income. This resulted in a "net" audit overpayment of $14,600.

No interest would accrue on the tax resulting from the "pre-loss" audit increase to 1990 income. Interest on the "net" audit overpayment of $14,600 would begin to accrue on the date the IL-870 was signed and continue to accrue until the date the refund was issued.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example 3: Given the following facts for Corporation A:

1987	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	$1,000,000
1988	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	500,000
1989	Illinois Net Loss	As Filed	800,000
		Per Audit	2,000,000

1990 (Prior to any Illinois net loss being carried forward):

Illinois Net Income	As Filed	$3,000,000
Tax	As Filed		$219,000
Illinois Net Income	Per Audit	4,000,000
Tax	Per Audit		292,000

Corporation A filed a timely IL-1120 for 1990 without carrying forward any of its Illinois net losses. The IL-1120, as filed, reflected 1990 Illinois income of $3,000,000 resulting in a tax liability of $219,000 which A had paid as of 3/15/91. On 1/1/92 Corporation A filed an amended return carrying forward all of its 1987 through 1989 Illinois net losses. The amended return reduced 1990 income to $700,000 and reflected an overpayment of $167,900. Interest on this overpayment would accrue from the date the claim was filed (1/1/92) until the date the refund was issued.

An audit was conducted on Corporation A for the period of 1987 through 1990. The amount of Illinois net loss originally reported in 1989 and the amount of income originally reported in 1990 were increased (see above). It was agreed in audit to carry forward the increased amount of loss for 1989 and offset all but $500,000 of the revised 1990 Illinois income. This resulted in a "pre-loss" audit tax increase of $73,000 and a "net" audit overpayment of $14,600.

No interest would accrue on the "pre-loss" audit tax increase of $73,000 because the increase is entirely offset by the net loss carryforward. Interest on the "net" audit overpayment of $14,600 would begin to accrue on the date the IL-870 was signed and continue to accrue until the date the refund was issued.

e) Original return for carryforward year filed reflecting an Illinois net loss - agreed audits.

The following discussion concentrates on agreed audit adjustments to years for which an original return was filed reflecting an Illinois net loss. The positions taken below would also apply if the same types of adjustments are made by a taxpayer through the filing of an amended return which creates income in a year and simultaneously offsets the increase by an Illinois net loss or excess credit carryforward.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(1) Offsetting Between Different Taxpayers

In the situation where the taxpayer wants to offset between different taxpayers such as one factor and three factor combined returns, the Auditor should prepare an offset statement for the taxpayer's signature. This statement should detail the tax overpaid, the tax underpaid plus any applicable penalty and the balance due or overpayment after the offset. This signed statement will give Audit Perfection the authority to offset the overpayments and underpayments and either bill the taxpayer for the balance due or refund any remaining overpayment after the interest is computed. See Exhibit G.

(2) Overpayment Date When Refund Not Due to Carrying Losses/Credits

When an overpayment is the result of an audit where several separate filing companies are combined into one group, the date of overpayment is the due date of the overpaid return, the date the return was filed or the date the tax was paid, whichever is later.

Example: An audit was conducted on companies A, B, C, D and E for YE 12/93. The five companies filed separate original returns on the extended due date of 10/15/94. All of Company B's tax was paid as of 3/15/94. As a result of the audit and the subsequent legal settlement, the five companies were determined to be unitary and a combined return was prepared. The results are as follows:

	Company A	Company B	Company C	Company D	Company E	Combined
FTI	(10,000)	5,000	7,500	(20,000)	2,500	(15,000)
Mods	500	200	(7,500)	0	(2,500)	(9,300)
Bus Inc	(9,500)	5,200	0	(20,000)	0	(24,300)
Ill Bus Inc	(4,500)	2,600	0	(2,500)	0	(4,400)
Tax Paid	0	200	0	0	0	200

The taxpayer signed an IL-870 agreeing to the legal settlement. The overpayment date for the calculation of refund interest in this situation is the date the return was filed. IAC §9400(c)(3)(A)

(3) Carrying Losses In Unagreed Audits

The correct amount of loss or credit will be properly carried forward or back in unagreed audits. This policy resulted from both the amendment of IITA § 905(e) and the need to reflect the correct loss and/or credit available to carry forward to future periods.

As a result, no interest will be due on an unagreed liability that is offset by loss carryforwards. If the audit results in no liability due because the adjustments were offset by a loss or credit carryforward, the Auditor should follow the "LR" procedure. The taxpayer will be able to protest if and when there is a tax effect in a future period. The Auditor is required to provide the taxpayer with details of all adjustments made along with EDA-143-LR, Notice of Audit Results, Net Loss and Credit Reductions, informing them of our findings and their rights to protest. Refer to Chapter 20 Income Tax Audit Procedure regarding the creation of the EDA-143-LR.

The only exception to the above situation is where the taxpayer has not filed and will not file loss year returns. If the Auditor cannot secure loss year returns from the taxpayer, there will be no loss available to carry. A notice of deficiency will be issued for the entire liability due including the applicable penalty and interest.

(4) Interest Issues On Loss Carryforwards

There is no restricted interest on a liability established in audit which is offset by the carryforward of a federal net operating loss, Illinois net loss or Article 2 credit even if the loss year return is filed late. The loss year return must be filed in order for the loss to be carried.

The following examples illustrate the interest calculations to be used when an Illinois net loss is being carried forward or back, an excess Illinois Article 2 credit is being carried forward or a federal capital loss is being carried forward or back.

The examples assume the following:

1. The taxpayers file calendar year returns.
2. The term “excess credits” refers to excess Article 2 credits. It does not refer to an overpayment on an original return that is credited to the next year’s estimated tax payments.
3. The terms “pre-loss” and “pre-credit” refer to the audit liability that exists if the loss or excess credit carryforward is not taken into consideration.
4. The term “original due date” refers to the due date of the return without regard to extensions.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

(5) Original Return – Carryforward Year – Illinois Net Loss

The following examples illustrate years in which the original return was filed reflecting an Illinois net loss and the audit adjustments created income. The income was then offset by an available loss or credit carryforward. These examples would also apply if the taxpayer made the same type of adjustment by filing an amended return.

(a) Complete Offsets

When a taxpayer filed an original Illinois return reflecting an Illinois net loss and, in audit, it is determined that the return should have reflected income, no restricted interest will be computed on the proposed audit liability if:

1. Illinois net losses or excess credits incurred in prior years can be carried into the year to completely offset the amount of income and/or tax proposed in audit, and

2. The taxpayer has filed Illinois returns for the loss or excess credit years.

The offset of a proposed audit liability with a loss or excess credit carryforward is not considered a refund, so the date of overpayment rules contained in IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C) do not apply. Since the Illinois net losses or excess credits are available to offset the income and/or tax in a carryforward year as of the original due date of the carryforward year's return there is no underpayment and, therefore no underpayment interest.

Example 1: Corporation ABC timely filed its Illinois returns for 1995, 1996 and 1997. All three returns reflected Illinois net losses.

In 1999, an Illinois audit determines that Corporation ABC incurred Illinois income for 1997. The Illinois net losses for 1995 and 1996 were available to be carried forward to completely offset the Illinois income proposed in audit. The auditor verifies that the losses are correct and carries them forward to offset all of the income for 1997.

No restricted interest will apply to the proposed pre-loss audit liability for 1997. The Illinois net losses were available to offset income as of the original due date of the carryforward year return. There is no underpayment, so there is no interest.

Example 2: Corporation BCD timely files its Illinois returns for 1995, 1996 and 1997. The returns for 1995 and 1996 reflect excess credits and the return for 1997 reflects an Illinois net loss.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In 1999 an Illinois audit determines that Corporation BCD actually incurred Illinois income for 1997 which results in a tax liability for that year. The excess credits for 1995 and 1996 are verified and carried forward to completely offset the Illinois tax liability established in audit.

No restricted interest would apply to the pre-credit audit liability for 1997. The excess credits were available to offset tax as of the original due date of the carryforward year return. There is no underpayment, so there is no interest.

(i) Agreed Audits

When the proposed audit liability is being completely offset by Illinois net loss or excess credit carryforwards and the taxpayer agrees, the Auditor can prepare amended returns and secure the taxpayer's signature. However, if an IL-870 is obtained, it should be completed as follows:

1. The pre-loss or pre-credit audit tax liability should be entered as a positive number in the liability section;

2. The identical reduction to the audit liability due to the loss or excess credit carryforward should be entered as a decrease (brackets) in the liability section; and

3. No penalty or interest amounts will be entered on the IL-870.

(ii) Unagreed Audits

If the taxpayer disagrees with the audit liability and the amount of loss or excess credit carried forward or back, the Auditor will complete the following steps:

1. The correct amount of loss or credit available to carry will be calculated and applied;

2. If an Illinois net loss, it will be determined if the loss was properly carried back or a proper election was made to forgo the carry back period; and

3. If the carryforward offsets all of the audit liability and there is no tax effect, the Auditor will close the audit following the "LR" procedure.

UPIA § 3-3(b) penalty (if applicable) should be applied to any net audit liability remaining after the prior year(s) Illinois net losses and/or excess credit carryforwards have been applied.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(b) Partial Offset In Agreed Audits

In the above situations, if the Illinois net losses or excess credits which are being carried forward do not completely offset the income and/or tax determined in audit for the carryforward year, interest will be computed on the portion of the audit liability not offset by the carryforward. In general, interest would accrue from the original due date of the return, however, if an overpayment existed on the original return, refer to Interest Computations.

(c) Partial Offset In Unagreed Audits

In an unagreed audit, if the carryforward does not offset all of the liability due, a notice of deficiency will be issued for the net tax due. The Auditor will follow the unagreed audit procedures.

Interest will be computed on the net tax due as in an agreed audit.

(6) Late Filers/Non-Filer

An Illinois net loss or excess credit cannot be carried forward by a taxpayer until an Illinois income tax return has been filed establishing the Illinois net loss or excess credit. REF: Sunshine letter IT95-0045.

If a taxpayer files an original return late which reflects an Illinois net loss or excess credit and then carries that loss or credit forward on a future year return, the loss or credit will be available as of the due date of the carry year return. No restricted interest will be due on the liability that was offset by the carryforward.

Example: Corporation CDE files its returns for 1995 and 1996 on January 1, 1998. Corporation CDE files its return for 1997 on October 15, 1998. All three returns reflect Illinois net losses.

In 1999, an audit determines that Corporation CDE actually incurred income in 1997. The Illinois net losses for 1995 and 1996 were verified and carried forward to completely offset the 1997 Illinois income established in audit.

No interest would apply to the proposed pre-loss audit liability for 1997. Although the original returns for 1995 and 1996 were filed late, there were still filed prior to the loss being carried. The Illinois net losses were available to be credited as of the original due date of the carryforward year return. There is no underpayment, so there is no interest.

The return(s) establishing a loss or excess credit must be filed prior to any carryforward application. However, the loss or excess credit is available as of the due date of the carryforward return, regardless of when the loss year or credit year return is filed.

Example: Corporation DEF files its returns for 1995, 1996 and 1997 on October 15, 1998. All three returns reflect Illinois net losses.

In 1999, an audit determines that Corporation DEF actually incurred income in 1997. The 1995 and 1996 Illinois net losses are verified and carried forward to completely offset the 1997 Illinois income determined in audit.

No interest will accrue on the pre-loss audit liability for 1997 since the returns reporting the Illinois net losses were filed.

If the taxpayer incurred Illinois net losses or excess credits and has not filed returns for those loss years, the losses have not been established and cannot be carried. If the auditor secures original, signed returns or the taxpayer voluntarily files the returns, the losses or credits will be available as of the due date of the carryforward year return.

However, if the taxpayer does not file the loss year returns, the loss will not be carried in audit because the loss has not been established. A notice of deficiency will be issued for the entire audit adjustment.

(7) Losses Carried Back January 1, 1994 and After

If an amended return is filed or a signed IL-870 is received on or after January 1, 1994 carrying back an Illinois Net Loss, the date of overpayment is the end of the loss year even if the loss year return is filed late. The claim for refund must be filed within three years of the due date of the loss year return including extensions or within the period of a waiver of the statute of limitations plus six months. If the loss year return is filed within that period even though late, the date of overpayment is the end of the loss year. REF: IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(D).

Example: Corporation KLM timely files its 1993, 1994 and 1995 returns reporting income and paying the tax due. Amended returns were filed on 3/15/99 carrying back the 1996 Illinois net loss to 1993 and 1994. However, when reviewing the amended returns, it is discovered that the 1996 return has not been filed. When contacted, the taxpayer filed the original 1996 return on 7/1/99. The overpayment date is 12/31/96, the end of the loss year.

Corporation LMN has not filed returns for 1996 and 1997. In an audit of the period, it is determined that the 1996 return has income and the 1997 return has an Illinois net loss. The liability is established for 1996 and the original return is obtained for 1997. The 1997 Illinois net loss is carried back to offset the 1996 income.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Restricted interest will be computed on the 1996 liability from the due date of the return to the end of the loss year which is 12/31/97.

(8) Capital Loss Carryback and Forward – Date of Overpayment

Whenever a capital loss is carried back or forward, the date of overpayment is either the claim received date or the date the IL-870 is signed per IAC § 100.9400(c)(3)(C). The capital loss is carried back before the federal net operating loss, Illinois net loss and Article 2 credit carryforwards are applied as of the claim received date. In most cases, a capital loss carryforward will be applied as of the due date of the carry year return.

Example: Company JKL has an Illinois net loss in 1995 and incurs a capital loss that cannot be absorbed by capital gains in 1997. The Illinois net loss cannot be used in years prior to 1995 and there are not capital gains in 1994 and 1995 that can offset the capital loss. The 1997 capital loss would be applied to the 1996 capital gain as of the claim received date. The 1995 Illinois net loss would be carried forward as of the due date of the 1996 return.

FTI(Loss)	(500,000)	200,000	180,000
Cap Gain/(Loss)	0	25,000	(10,000)
Carry 1997 Cap Loss		(10,000)	10,000
FTI/(Loss)	(500,000)	215,000	180,000
Appt Factor	.50	.75	.75
Ill Net Inc/(Loss)	(250,000)	161,250	135,000
C/F 1995 INL	250,000	(161,250)	(88,750)
Illinois Income After Loss	0	0	46,250

(9) Audits with RAR and Illinois Adjustment To Losses

Example: Corporation FGH timely filed its Illinois returns for 1995, 1996 and 1997. The taxpayer elected to carry forward the Illinois net losses from 1990 and 1991 to 1995 and 1996 and offset all of the Illinois income. The return for 1997 reflected an Illinois net loss. Illinois net losses from timely filed returns for 1992, 1993 and 1994 were not carried forward because the Illinois net losses from 1990 and 1991 completely offset all of the income.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In 1999 an Illinois audit determined that:

1. An RAR was completed for 1990 and 1991 and completely eliminated any Federal loss and resulted in Illinois net income for those years, and

2. 1997 was an income year resulting in a tax liability.

The Illinois tax liability was established for 1990 and 1991. Since no election was made to forgo the carryback period, the Illinois net losses for 1992 and 1993 were carried back to offset all income. The remaining 1993 loss was carried forward along with the 1994 loss to offset part of the 1995 income.

The interest would be computed on the years with tax liability established as follows:

1. 1990 – Restricted interest would be computed from the due date of the 1990 return until the end of the 1992 and 1993 loss year;

2. 1991 – Restricted interest would be computed from the due date of 1991 return until end of the 1993 loss year;

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

3. 1995 – No interest would be due on the liability to the extent it was offset by the $35,000 in loss carryforwards.

Also, pre-UPIA IITA § 1005 penalty would apply to 1990 and 1991.

The IL-870 should be completed as follows:

1. The pre-loss or pre-credit audit tax liability should be entered as a positive number in the liability section.

2. The reduction to the audit liability due to the loss or excess credit carryforward or carryback should be entered as a decrease (brackets) in the liability section.

3. The penalty or interest amounts will be entered on the IL-870.

If the audit is unagreed, the loss will be carried and the notice of deficiency will be issued for the penalty and restricted interest for 1990 and 1991 and the liability due for 1995, 1996 and 1997.

(10) Audits with Original Loss or Income Year Returns Not Filed

Example 1: Corporation GHI files its first return on October 15, 1996 for 1995. This return has an Illinois net loss of $50,000. No returns were filed for the subsequent years.

In 1999, in audit, it is discovered that Corporation GHI was required to file Illinois returns for 1996 and 1997. The audit determines that 1996 has an Illinois net loss of $25,000 and income for 1997 of $80,000.

On July 1, 1999, Corporation GHI files the original return for 1996, requests that the Illinois net losses for 1995 and 1996 be carried forward since there is no carryback period available, and agrees to the audit adjustment for 1997 by signing an IL-870. The Illinois net losses from 1995 and 1996 offset all but $5,000 of the 1997 income.

Since the loss year returns were filed, even though late, the loss was available as of the due date of the carry year return. No interest is due on the liability offset by the loss or credit carryforward. Interest and penalties will be computed on the tax liability due on the remaining income for 1997 that is not offset by the loss carryforward.

If the audit was unagreed and the taxpayer did not file the 1996 return, no loss would be carried.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example 2: Corporation HIJ started conducting business in Illinois in 1995 and does not file returns for 1995, 1996 and 1997. When contacted by Audit Bureau personnel in 1999, it is determined that the taxpayer has losses and Article 2 credits for 1995 and 1996 which offset all the income and tax due for 1997 as follows:

YEAR	1995	1996	1997
Income/Loss	-100,000	-250,000	500,000
Carry Loss 95 to 97	100,000		-100,000
96 to 97		250,000	-250,000
Remaining Income			150,000
Pre Credit Tax Due			10,950
Article 2 Credits Available	4,000	4,500	7,500

For the three-year period, the taxpayer has $16,000 in Article 2 credits available. The credit for 1995 and 1996 are carried forward to 1997 offsetting $8,500 of the tax due. The remaining 1997 tax due of $2,450 is offset by the credit earned in 1997. The remaining 1997 credit of $5,050 is available to carry to 1998.

If the taxpayer files the original loss year returns, the loss and credits will be carried forward and no penalty or interest will be due for 1997.

If the taxpayer disagrees and will not file the loss year returns, a notice of deficiency will be issued for the liability due for 1997 without the loss and credit offsets. Interest and late-filing penalty will be assessed.

(11) Original Returns Filed Reflecting Income-Audit Creates an Illinois Net Loss or Excess Credits-Agreed Audits

When a taxpayer has filed returns which reflect income and it is later determined that the taxpayer actually incurred an Illinois net loss or excess credits for one or more of the years, the Illinois net loss or excess credits will be considered to be realized or available for credit, as of the date the IL-870 is signed or an amended return is filed. This will not affect the calculation of interest on the overpayment which results in the loss or excess credit year (i.e., interest will accrue from the original due date of the return, the date the return was filed or the date the payment was received which created the overpayment). Also, if the loss or excess credits are carried forward to reduce income in a subsequent year, the income in the carryforward year will be considered to be offset as of the date the IL-870 is signed or the amended return reflecting the loss or excess credit is filed for purposes of computing the interest on any refund. However, no interest will accrue on any unpaid tax for the carryforward year to the extent the underpayment is reduced by the carryforward because the net loss or excess credit was in existence prior to the carryforward year, even if not reported until afterwards.

Example: Corporation J files its returns for 1989, 1990 and 1991 on October 15, 1990, October 15, 1991, and October 15, 1992 respectively. All of these returns reported Illinois income. For 1989, 1990, and 1991 Corporation J timely paid the tax liabilities of $1,000, $2,000 and $3,000 respectively. Corporation J received no credits or refunds from the original returns.

In 1994, due to an audit, it is determined that Corporation J actually incurred a loss for 1990 which would result in a refund of the $2,000 of tax paid and has additional income in 1991 which would result in a correct tax liability of $7,000. The 1990 loss determined in audit is available to be carried back or forward to offset income and Corporation J makes an election to carry it forward to completely offset the proposed audit liability of $4,000 in 1991.

On July 1, 1994, Corporation J agrees to the audit adjustments for 1990 and 1991 by signing an IL-870. For 1990, Corporation J will receive a refund of $2,000 and will receive interest on the $2,000 from October 15, 1991. For 1991, no interest will accrue on the audit liability of $4,000 because it is offset by a carryforward. If the carryforward also generates a refund for 1991, interest on the refund will run from July 1, 1994, the date of the refund claim.

The IL-870 would show a decrease (brackets) in tax of $2,000 for 1990. For 1991 the pre-loss audit liability of $4,000 should be entered as a positive number in the liability section and a $4,000 reduction to the audit liability due to the carryforward of the net loss should be entered as a decrease (brackets) in the liability section.

MOST SITUATIONS WILL FIT INTO ONE OF THE GENERAL CATEGORIES ABOVE. IF A UNIQUE SITUATION IS ENCOUNTERED, PLEASE CONTACT INCOME TAX TECHNICAL SUPPORT FOR ADVICE.

(12) Offsets Between Years

Offsets are only allowed between periods on the same IL-870, unless the Director approves otherwise. Interest should be computed on each period separately in the normal course before amounts are offset. Generally, the offset date for an audit period is the IL-870 issuance date. This means that refund interest should be calculated on overpaid periods through the IL-870 issuance date, and liability interest should be calculated on underpaid periods through the IL-870 issuance date. The auditor should then offset the total overpayment from overpaid periods against the total underpayment from underpaid periods, and the net overpayment/underpayment will continue to accrue overpayment/underpayment interest through the date of payment

Interest must be paid on any payment of tax liability that is later than the due date of the return. If at a later date this tax liability is reduced, the taxpayer has an overpayment of tax PLUS interest upon which interest is calculated.

If an audit situation arises where the taxpayer has an overpayment/underpayment the first year and an underpayment/overpayment the subsequent year, interest should be computed on each period separately before the amounts are offset.

Example 1: On June 30, 2011 (the IL-870 date), an audit is completed for tax years ending 12/31/06 and 12/31/07. Taxpayer made timely ES and IL-505-B extension payments totaling $15,000 for 2006 and filed its IL-1120 on 9/15/07 reflecting a $15,000 liability. Taxpayer also made timely ES and IL-505-B extension payments totaling $12,000 for 2007 and filed its IL-1120 on 5/15/2008 reflecting a $12,000 liability. The audit adjustment for 2006 reflects an RAR decreasing the liability to $11,000. The 2007 audit adjustment increased the tax liability by $4,500. Each year should be examined separately and then the results offset for determining the total audit refund or liability.

For 2006, interest will be paid on the $4,000 overpayment resulting from the audit (based on the RAR adjustment of taxable income) from the date of overpayment (09/15/2007) through the IL-870 issuance date (6/30/2011). The total interest is $613.27. Therefore, the total overpayment for 2006 is $4,613.27.

For 2007, penalty and interest must be calculated on the additional audit liability of $4,500 from the original due date of the return to the IL-870 issuance date (3/15/08 to 6/30/11). The late-payment penalty is $900.00 and interest is $1,040.05 (doubled for Amnesty). The total balance due for 2007 is $6,440.05.

The overpayment amount for 2006 of $4,613.27 can be used to offset the underpayment amount for 2007 of $6,440.05 creating a net underpayment amount of $1,826.78. Interest will continue to accrue on the underpayment until the date of payment.

(13) Bankruptcy Computation of Interest

Interest will be calculated for audits where the taxpayer is involved in bankruptcy as follows:

The first calculation will compute interest on the total tax and penalty through the debtor's bankruptcy filing date. This amount is informational for the Bankruptcy Unit because they can only file a claim against the debtor with interest computed through the bankruptcy filing date. For claim purposes, interest stops accruing as of the bankruptcy filing date.

The second calculation will compute interest on the total tax and penalty through the date the audit is closed. This is the amount that will be assessed if the debtor's liability is not discharged through the courts. The Department will then be able to start collection activity against the debtor and/or responsible officer(s) for the entire amount of tax, penalty and interest.

In all instances, interest will continue to accrue on the tax and penalty (for applicable periods) that has not been discharged through the courts until the amount is paid.

(14) Bankruptcy Claims Bar Date

The time frame for the Department to file a claim against a Chapter 7 or 13 bankrupt account has changed. Generally, the bar date for Chapter 7 or 13 accounts is set for 90 days after a first meeting of creditors. This has been changed to 180 days from the bankruptcy filing date for both. (This time frame can be changed, but only by a Court Order).

In Chapter 11 bankruptcies, the setting of the bar date remains indefinite.

A. Penalty and Interest Relief

1. Governor waives penalties, interest for taxpayers affected by severe weather, flooding

Gov. JB Pritzker announced today (May 13, 2019) that individuals and businesses devastated by severe weather and flooding that began on April 23, 2019, may request waivers of penalties and interest on state taxes if they cannot file their returns or make payments on time. Those impacted in the 36 counties declared a disaster are eligible to request a waiver of penalties and interest for income taxes, withholding taxes, sales taxes, and specialty and excise taxes.

“Communities across Illinois continue to be threatened by heavy rains and flooding and the state is committed to doing everything we can to help” said Governor JB Pritzker. “From providing sandbags and other resources to communities to waving penalties for impacted taxpayers who need more time to file, we want Illinoisans to know the state is on their side. During this time, I urge impacted individuals and businesses to take precautions, help their neighbors, and safely evacuate if necessary.”

The counties covered by the disaster declaration include: Adams, Alexander, Brown, Bureau, Calhoun, Carroll, Cass, Fulton, Greene, Grundy, Hancock, Henderson, Henry, Jackson, Jersey, Jo Daviess, Knox, LaSalle, Madison, Marshall, Mason, Mercer, Monroe, Morgan, Peoria, Pike, Putnam, Randolph, Rock Island, Schuyler, Scott, St. Clair, Tazewell, Union, Whiteside, Woodford.

Gov. Bruce Rauner announced today (December 6, 2018) that individuals and businesses devastated by tornadoes and severe weather in parts of Christian County on Dec. 1, 2018, may request waivers of penalties and interest on state taxes if they cannot file their returns or make payments on time. The waivers apply to individual and business income taxes, withholding taxes, sales taxes, and specialty and excise taxes.

“Families and businesses affected by the storms may need additional time to gather essential paperwork to file and pay their taxes,” Rauner said. “The waivers help give taxpayers the time they need to recover and get their affairs in order. This is another way we can help them deal with the destruction caused by the storms.”

9. Flood – April 2013

Illinois businesses and individuals who file monthly, quarterly or annual returns and have been impacted by the flooding will have until October 31, 2013 to file tax returns that were due on or after April 19. No late fees or penalties will be assessed.

Taxpayers who opt to mail their deferred returns and payment should write Flood-April 2013 on the outside of the envelope in red ink and on the top of each page of the tax filing, so the account can be updated and handled appropriately. Filers using My Tax Illinois or WebFile will be provided instructions when they file their returns.

Electronic filers, who do not mail tax documents, should notify the department by email at REV.SuperStormSandy@illinois.gov. The email should include the taxpayer's name, account identification number, period that is affected, and a brief explanation of why they will be late, along with an estimate of when they believe they can file or pay.

C. “10% Rule” for Abatement of Late-payment Penalty

IAC § 100.5020(d)(1), having no basis in law, has been removed from the regulations. The regulation contained the “10% rule” for abatement of late-payment penalties. The purpose of the rule was to avoid penalizing taxpayers that could not, for some reason, file returns by the due date and must estimate their true tax liability. It was basically an automatic reasonable cause exception to be used in processing for a temporary underpayment of tax which the taxpayer corrects with the filing of a return if full payment of the tax is made within the extension period. It was not a 10% tolerance for assessment of the penalty and was not to be used in audit situations.

IAC § 100.5020(d)(1) stated:

> …no penalty will be assessed if the amount of the underpayment is 10% or less of the amount of tax required to be shown on the return and the taxpayer pays such amount due by the extended due date.

This “10% rule” had no effect on audit liabilities, except that if an additional liability was found due in audit and the taxpayer originally avoided the late-payment penalty through use of this rule, the abatement was forfeited and a late-payment penalty was due on the original amount of tax shown due on the return and not paid by the date prescribed.

Although the regulation has been removed, GenTax is still applying the “10% rule”. However, this should have no effect when audit proposes a deficiency on current audits. A late-payment penalty should be applied to the entire late-payment unless the taxpayer has reasonable cause.

This late-payment penalty is deemed assessed upon the filing of the return. EXECUTION OF AN IL-872 WILL NOT EXTEND THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR ISSUING A NOTICE AND DEMAND FOR THIS PENALTY. Therefore, it is necessary to clearly indicate the statute expiration date for collecting the deemed assessed late-payment penalty in the Auditor’s Comments.

> Example 1: Corporation A, a calendar year filer, makes $90,000 in timely estimated payments for 1993. On October 17, 1994 Corporation A files its IL-1120 for 1993 reporting a tax liability of $100,000. Corporation A pays the additional $10,000 with the Il-1120. Since Corporation A has paid 90% of the tax due by the date prescribed for payment and the remaining amount due by the extended due date, IAC § 100.5020(d)(1) will apply and no (b)(1) penalty will be assessed.
> In 1995, Corporation A’s 1993 return is audited and the correct tax due for 1993 is determined to be $150,000 resulting in an audit deficiency of $50,000. Corporation A agrees to the audit changes. Corporation A has now forfeited the benefits of the 10% rule. A (b)(1) penalty now applies to the original $10,000 which was not paid by the due date of the original return (without extensions). This (b)(1) penalty will be assessed through issuance of an income tax notice and demand, which must be issued by October 17, 1997.

Example 2: Corporation B, a calendar year filer, makes $98,000 in timely estimated payments for 1993. On October 17, 1994, Corporation B files its IL-1120 for 1993 reporting a tax liability of $100,000. Corporation B pays the additional $2,000 with the IL-1120. Since Corporation B has paid 90% of the tax due by the date prescribed for payment and the remaining amount due by the extended due date, IAC § 100.5020(d)(1) will apply and no (b)(1) penalty will be assessed.

In 1995, Corporation B's 1993 return is audited and the correct tax due for 1993 is determined to be $105,000 resulting in an audit deficiency of $5,000. Corporation B agrees to the audit changes. Corporation B has now forfeited the benefits of the 10% rule even though Corporation B had paid 90% of the correct liability by the original due date of the return because the remaining amount due (the $2,000 per the return AND the $5,000 audit liability) was NOT paid by the extended due date. A (b)(1) penalty now applies to the original $2,000 which was not paid by the due date of the original return (without extensions). This (b)(1) penalty will be assessed through issuance of an income tax notice and demand, which must be issued by October 17, 1997.

Example 3: A calendar year taxpayer makes timely estimated payments totaling $1,000 for the 1990 tax year. On October 15, 1991, the 1990 IL-1120 is filed reporting a tax liability of $1,100. The taxpayer paid the additional $100 plus interest with the return. Due to the 10% rule a IITA § 1005 penalty is not computed on the $100 which was not paid by the due date of the return without extensions but WAS paid by the extended due date.

The taxpayer is subsequently audited for 1990 and the correct tax liability for 1990 is determined to be $10,000. The IITA § 1005 penalty would be computed on $9,000 from March 16, 1991 through October 15, 1991 and on $8,900 from October 16, 1991 through the date of payment.

Even though a "10% rule abatement" is forfeited because of a subsequent audit liability, that portion of the IITA § 1005 penalty, which is assessed on the tax reported on the original return, is deemed assessed on the FILING OF THE RETURN. Execution of an IL-872 will not extend the statute of limitations on the deemed assessed penalty.

In the above example, the deemed assessed penalty on the $100 of tax, which was shown on the original return, would have a statute expiration date of October 15, 1994.

D. Interest on Deficiency- Revocation of Letter Ruling IT 93-0033

The IT 93-0033 letter ruling advised the taxpayer that penalties and interest computed on original carry year returns would stop accruing on the due date of the loss year's return rather than on the date the return was actually filed or the date the carryback is claimed.

In the taxpayer's situation original returns for the years ended 9/30/88, 9/30/89, 9/30/90 and 12/31/90 were all filed on 12/23/91. The 9/88, 9/89 and 9/90 returns showed tax deficiencies and Section 1001 Late Filing Penalty, Section 1005 Underpayment of Tax Penalty and Section 804 Underpayment of Estimated Tax Penalty were assessed. The 12/31/90 short period return showed an Illinois Net Operating Loss and the taxpayer requested the loss be carried back to 9/88, 9/89 and 9/90.

The taxpayer had received a billing from the Department for penalties and interest, which had been computed through 12/31/91. The taxpayer then relied upon federal rules to argue that penalties and interest computed through the due date of the 12/31/90 loss year return – 3/15/91 and not the 12/31/91 actual filing date.

An Illinois Net Operating Loss is established only after a return for the loss year is filed. In addition, the net loss carryback is not considered to be an overpayment until the carryback is claimed.

Under Section 100.9400(c)(3)(A). Date of Overpayment – There can be no overpayment of tax prior to the last date prescribed for filing the return, nor until the entire tax liability for the taxable year is satisfied, nor until the return is filed for the taxable year.

The issuance of Letter Ruling IT 96-0027 notifies the taxpayer that Letter Ruling IT 93-0033 was in error and explains the correct computation of penalties and interest in this net loss carryback situation.

This revoked letter ruling has no effect as audits have been computing interest correctly with respect to net loss carrybacks. This is for informational purposes only. Should a taxpayer rely on Letter Ruling IT 93-0033 for the computation of penalties and interest you will be able to instruct them it was issued in error.

Note that while this response is correct for this situation, effective January 1, 1994 the date of overpayment when an Illinois Net Loss carryback is involved is the last day of the loss year per Section 3-2(d).

Auditors are required to compute and include interest on the IL-870 for their taxpayers. This is done in GenTax using the Penalty and Interest Rate Calculator, which is identified on the system as “P&I Calculator”. This tool can be used to compute penalty and interest on an unpaid liability through a specific date, or to calculate interest on overpayments. For purposes of this section, the italicized words are fields or terms that are associated with the GenTax P&I Calculator (e.g. Original Due Date and Interest Thru).

Auditors must apply a thorough understanding of penalty, interest, and the appropriate statutes when using the calculator to arrive at the correct penalty and interest amounts.

A. Using The P&I Calculator

Below is a screen shot of the GenTax V9 P&I Calculator

Note that the calculator is divided into four sections:

Period Info
Penalty
Interest
Amnesty

The P&I Calculator will calculate penalty/interest on liabilities and interest on overpayments. However, two different approaches must be used since the calculator is always going to treat the principal amount entered as a "balance due". One approach, enter all applicable payments, credits, refunds, and the corrected tax (i.e. the final adjusted tax in Column C of EDA-25, 24, etc.) for underpayments. The approach for overpayments will require entering only the overpayment amount(s) (i.e. the tax decrease from Column B of EDA-25, 24, etc.) in the calculator and computing the appropriate refund interest.

1. Audit Liabilities

For periods with an audit liability, the P&I Calculator is capable of calculating the same amount of penalty and interest that the Account springboard would for the taxpayer's account. The calculator is a stand-alone tool, however. This means that the auditor will have to input all payments, certain credits, refunds, and the tax required to be shown (corrected total tax including amended returns and audit) into the calculator for it to determine the correct amount of penalties and interest. Essentially, the auditor is "recreating" the entire tax and payment activity for the taxpayer.

It is important for the auditor to use the appropriate dates so that the correct interest and penalty are assessed.

For an audit liability:

- Original Due Date is the balance due date for the liability.
- Interest Thru date should be the issuance date of the IL-870.

For example, if an audit liability is established for a calendar 2005 IL-1120 that was originally timely paid (without any overpayment or subsequent payments), the Original Due Date would be 3/15/06. Liability interest begins to accrue the day after the payment entered in the Original Due Date field, or on 3/16/06 for a calendar 2005 IL-1120 due on 3/15/06. The Interest Thru date would be the IL-870 issuance date. If the taxpayer pays within 30 days of the IL-870 issuance date, then the UPIA late-payment penalty will remain at 15% and doubled for Amnesty and double interest will accrue until the tax is paid. If the taxpayer pays after the 30 days, then the penalty for UPIA-5 will increase to 20% and be doubled for Amnesty, and double interest will accrue until payment is made.

Remember, the interest you calculate for purposes of the IL-870 should be accrued through the IL-870 date. However, an IL-870 is not considered a notice and demand, so you should explain to the taxpayer that interest will accrue until payment is made, and provide the taxpayer projected interest amounts for a particular date if requested.

> Note: For simplicity's sake, all examples assume due dates that fall on the 15th of each month and dates of filing or payment ignore the possibility that the date is a Saturday, Sunday or holiday. If a due date for filing or payment falls on a Saturday, Sunday or holiday, filing or paying on the next business day is deemed to be timely, but the due date itself does not change. So if March 15 is a Saturday, a payment made on Monday, March 17 is timely, but a payment made on Tuesday, March 18 is 3 days late. IAC §100.5000(b).

Example A: Company A made 4 timely calendar 2008 ES payments of $2,250 each and a timely extension payment (IL-505-B) of $1,000, as well as filing its 2008 IL-1120 on the 10/15/09 extended due date reporting a tax of $10,000. An audit is eventually performed finding an audit liability of $5,000. In determining the interest and penalty due, the auditor should enter all 5 payments made and enter $15,000 as the Amount Due. The $15,000 represents the "tax required to be shown", or the correct net income tax after the audit is performed.

2. Audit Claims

Note: All amounts must be entered as positive amounts in the P&I Calculator.

As previously stated, calculating the necessary interest on an audit overpayment only requires entering the principal amount of the refund into the calculator and using the appropriate interest dates through which to calculate the interest. Entering payments in this scenario will only reduce the overpayment interest base, since the calculator will apply the payment to it as if it were an audit liability.

For an overpaid audit, the interest start date is the later of the statutory filing due date (not considering filing extensions), the actual filing date, or the date the return became overpaid. IAC §100.9400(c)(3) defines the "date of overpayment" as:

- The original due date of the return without regard to the automatic extension, the date final payment is made, or the date the original return is filed, whichever is later.

- The date the claim was filed in the case of a federal capital loss carryback, or the carryforward of Illinois net losses and investment credits (unless the refund is issued within three months of the date of the claim).

- The last date of the loss year if the claim is due to an IITA §207 Illinois net loss carryback from a loss year ending prior to December 31, 2003.

If a taxpayer filed its calendar 2005 IL-1120 on 2/15/06 and the due date without extension was 3/15/06, then the Original Due Date used would be 3/15/06. If the taxpayer filed that return on 11/13/06, then the date of overpayment would be 11/13/06 and entered in the Original Due Date.

In the simplest scenario, a taxpayer would have filed an original return and paid its liability or received a refund with no subsequent payments after filing. When the claim is established in the audit, the interest for that APE would be calculated on the overpaid amount from the date of overpayment through the IL-870 date. See Example B below.

Example B: Same facts as Example A above, only the auditor now establishes a claim during the audit of $2,500, which reduced the tax reported of $10,000 to an audit tax of $7,500. To calculate the interest on the claim, you should determine

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. the refund basis, which would be the $2,500 claim (Column B change on EDA-25), and compute interest from the date the original return was filed through the IL-870 date.

When there has been activity such as amended returns filed and subsequent payments, then you must look at the payments that created the overpayment and calculate interest on each "segment" of the audit overpayment based on those payments, starting from the most recent payment first and working backwards chronologically. See Example C below.

Example C: Same facts as Example A, only after timely filing the original 2008 return showing a $10,000 tax, Taxpayer filed an IL-1120-X reporting a total tax of $12,500 and made an amended payment of $2,800 on 3/15/10 ($2,500 tax + $250 late-pay penalty + $50 interest). During the audit, the auditor determines that the correct reportable tax is $9,000. This reduction in liability means that no late-payment penalty or underpayment interest was due. Under IAC §100.9400(c)(2), the $250 late-payment penalty and $50 in underpayment interest are included in the overpayment for purposes of computing interest, so this change creates an audit claim of $3,800. Since there has been a subsequent payment, the auditor will need to look at the payment activity starting from the most recent and calculating interest from the dates of the payments through the IL-870 date that contributed to the taxpayer being overpaid $3,800. Therefore, the auditor would calculate interest on $2,800 from 3/15/10 through the IL-870 date. That leaves $1,000 to calculate from the next most recent payment. This occurred from the original return payments, but we must use the later of the original return due date, date it was overpaid, or the received date of the original return. Therefore, interest is calculated on $1,000 from 10/15/09 through the IL-870 date.

Note: The original characterization of the $2,800 payment made on 3/15/10 is ignored. The payment is just a payment with no emphasis placed on whether it was made to satisfy liability, penalty, or interest.

The following steps, including screenshots, provide general guidance for using the P&I Calculator. Keep the above-mentioned information in mind while going through these steps. While Examples A, B, and C will be referenced in this section, more illustrative examples are provided in the Penalty & Interest Calculations-GenTax section. Lastly, this section mainly focuses on audit liability accounts, because it is more complex and requires more information input into the calculator. Understanding all the fields used for calculating an audit liability will also help explain how to calculate an audit claim. Calculating interest for claims is discussed at the end of this section.

1. Period Info Section

The Period Info section must be completed first. This will allow the computation of penalty, if applicable. Each tax period must be calculated separately. We will use Example A to complete this section.

A. Enter the original due date in the Original Due Date field.
B. Enter the date the original return was filed in the Return Rcvd Date field.

The Return Rcvd Date field is not a required field. However, there are instances when the field will require input for proper calculation of penalties and/or interest.

1) Penalty
The Return Rcvd Date field on the Main screen of the P&I Calculator is linked to the Date Return Received field on the Late File Calculation screen under the Penalty tab. Anytime a date is input in the Return Rcvd Date field on the Main screen, the Date Return Received field on the Late File Calculation screen will automatically populate.

A Late File Penalty will automatically be calculated whenever the date entered in the Return Rcvd Date field is later than the date entered in the Original Due Date field or if it is left blank.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights

To properly calculate the Late File Penalty with the P&I Calculator, the Return Rcvd Date field should be used in conjunction with the Use Extended Due Date and Extended Due Date fields on the Late File Calculation screen. Anytime a return is received prior to the automatic extension date for filing, the Use Extended Due Date should be checked and Extended Due Date should be populated with the automatic extension date for proper calculation of the late file penalty.

2) Interest
The Return Rcvd Date field on the Main screen of the P&I Calculator is also linked to the Rfn Issued field on the Refund screen under the Payment/Refund tab.

The P&I Calculator will not take into consideration any refunds reported on the Refund screen that have a Rfn Issue date prior to any date input in the Return Rcvd Date field when calculating interest.

Since most refunds are not issued prior to receiving a filed return, this is especially significant whenever there are amounts entered on the Refund screen that represent credit carryforwards. Whenever there are refunds that represent credit carryforwards, the Return Rcvd Date should be left blank.

Because of these requirements, it may not be possible to calculate both the proper Late File penalty and bal due interest at the same time. The P&I Calculator would be more useful in calculating the more complex interest issue than a penalty that could be calculated manually.

C. Enter the Amount Due, which is the total tax required to be shown. Again, remember that the Amount Due is the correct tax after the audit is performed (e.g. Column C total tax from EDA-25).
D. Enter any refund under Amount Refunded, which in Example A is zero (see next section for further explanation of the field). Below is a screenshot of the Period Info Section:

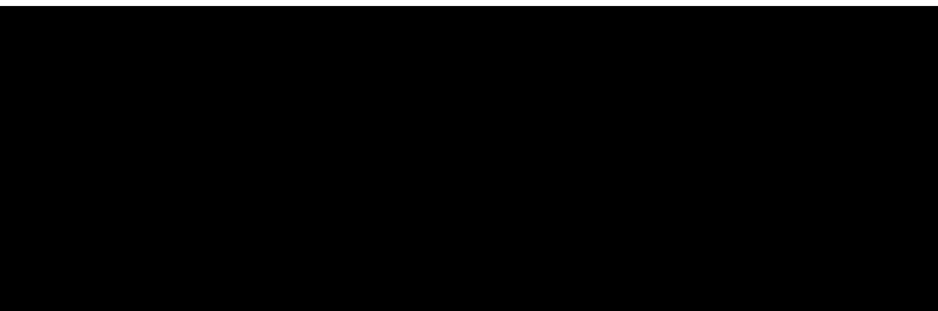
E. The Amount Refunded field is for entering overpayments refunded, offset, or applied as credits to another year or liability. The auditor will have to determine if any refund has been issued and if any interest was included in the refund. The entire amount refunded should be included in the Rfn Amount field less any interest properly due to the taxpayer. Do not use the Rfn Interest field. This will incorrectly increase the late-payment penalty base by the refund interest amount (the calculator "thinks" of refund interest as tax), and you will need to override the penalty base or manually calculate the late-payment penalty. If the overpayment was applied as a credit carryforward, the date the credit carryforward was applied should be entered. The date the credit carryforward was applied can be found under the Transactions tab in the Period springboard for the subsequent year and is the date found in the Effect column. This information should be entered by clicking on the tab labeled Payment/Refund and then the Amount Paid tab. For example, if the original return was filed on 10/15/09, a refund had been issued for $2,017.26 on 9/1/10, and $17.26 was the interest portion, this is what would be entered:



To return to the main screen from any detail screen, click on the Main tab.

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights

The Rfn Issued field is for the date the refund is issued. To find the date the refund was issued, click on the Refund tab in the Period springboard. The Refund Status should show "Issued by Comptroller". Click on the Refund hyperlink. This screen shows the refund issued date. If there is no refund issue date, then the refund has not yet been issued.

Rfn Amount is for the total overpayment refunded, including refund interest net of interest properly due to taxpayer. Again, do not use the Rfn Interest field (it currently leads to incorrect interest calculations because it will double the reclaimed interest in Amnesty situations and not accrue interest on the reclaimed interest). Lastly, the received date of the original return entered on the main screen will also be utilized when overpayments were originally issued in audit liability situations.

An offset to another period, tax, or liability with another agency should also be entered as a refund. If there is a fee, such as a collection fee, then that should be entered as part of the Rfn Amount. Shown below is an offset for an IRS liability. The amount entered in Rfn Amount would be $524, which includes the IRS Intercept fee.

F. Payments can be included by clicking on Amount Paid tab, and then entering each payment manually by entering the payment date (which is the "Effect" date

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. in the Transactions panel) and then the payment amount. If a payment has been entered in error, the box in the Pymt Invalid column can be checked to invalidate the payment, or the amount can be deleted. However, once a payment has been entered, if no payment should have been entered, the Pymt Invalid box should be checked. If you find that this makes the payment screen look cluttered, a date should be left in the Pymt Rcvd field and the Pymt Amount can be deleted. Otherwise, the P&I Calculator will indicate there is an error with the payment information by placing a red exclamation point icon next to the Amount Paid tab. Like refunds, payments cannot be entered on the main P&I Calculator screen since this is not an active field.

For payments and returns processed in GenTax, auditors should be able to search for them in GenTax. For prior years, not all converted taxpayers have payment details, and taxpayer payments not converted will need to be located in IRIS. By clicking the Amount Paid tab you can see the payment detail for any payments you have already entered as well as adjust the payments. Shown below is a screenshot of the Amount Paid screen with several payments entered:

There are a host of different payment types that could be applied to the account. In GenTax, they can be located under the taxpayer's Period springboard under the Transactions tab. Any payment will appear in parentheses under the amount column. For example, below is shown the Transactions panel of a taxpayer.

The taxpayer had a credit carryforward from the previous year and four estimated payments applied to the tax period. The "Trans Type" explains what type of payment it was. Other examples could be an SOA payment, Audit, Misc., or a Xfr- Credit In, etc. The "Effect" date is the payment date that should be used for the P&I Calculator.

EXCEPT for credit carryforwards going to a subsequent period. The date they are needed for the subsequent periods estimated payment(s) obligation should be used.

Individual Income Tax (IIT) and Business Income Tax (BIT) have a major payment difference with GenTax. For BIT, GenTax shows the original tax in the Transactions panel net of credits (investment and income tax credits). For IIT, however, GenTax shows the tax net of credits except for Earned Income Credit (EIC) and withholding. This means that, for IIT audits, the auditor will have to enter any EIC credit and withholding as a payment in the P&I Calculator. An EIC credit should be divided by four and entered quarterly as if it were 4 timely ES payments. For example, an EIC credit of $500 for calendar year 2007 would be entered in the P&I Calculator as four timely $125 ES payments. Withholding should also be divided by four and entered as 4 timely ES payments. Again, GenTax will show these as it would other payments in the Transactions panel, with an “Effect” date and the amount in parentheses. Shown below is an example of an IIT account with an EIC credit and withholding, and how the EIC credit and withholding would be entered as payments and the results on the P&I main screen using the “Original Tax” of $680:

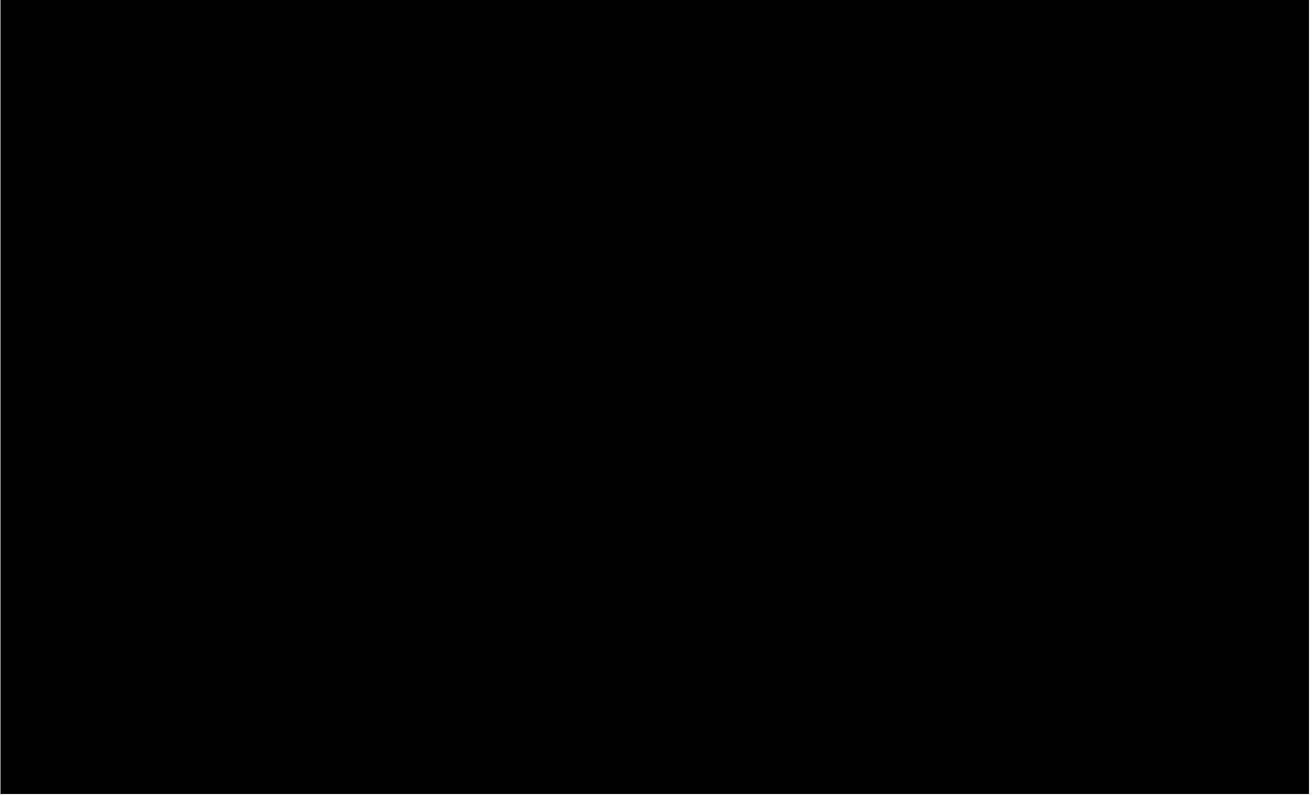
2. Penalty Section

The second section of the P&I Calculator is the Penalty section. For a thorough explanation of the following penalties, please refer to Publication 103 and Penalties section of Chapter 42. Based on the information entered in Example A under "Audit Liabilities", for Company A, the Penalty section will populate as shown below:

More information needs to be input into each penalty so that the correct penalty is calculated. This can be done by clicking the tab or hyperlink for each penalty or selecting the specific penalty by clicking on the paper icon.

A. The Late File detail screen would be completed as follows:



This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights

Original Due Date - links from the main screen, should already be populated if entered on the main screen
Use Extended Due Date - box should be checked
Extended Due Date – enter the extended due date
Date Return Received - links from the main screen, should already be populated if entered on the main screen.

The calculator will then calculate the appropriate late-file penalty, which in this example is now zero. However, a return filed after the extended due date showing an amount due would generate a late-file penalty.

B. The ES Late Pay penalty is the late-payment penalty for underpayment of estimated tax.

   You will need to go to the detail screen by clicking on the tab and selecting the ES detail screen. You must then enter the required quarterly estimated payment under Amount Due. This then multiplies that payment by four and populates the Total ES Base. The P&I Calculator does not allow adjusting required payments if the taxpayer uses the annualized method. In those instances you would have to use the IL-2220 (businesses) or IL-2210 (individuals). IAC. §100.8010(i) requires that ES payments be made for short tax years beginning on or after 1/1/11. This type of situation, also, cannot be computed using the P&I Calculator and should be handled manually on an IL-2220 or IL-2210. After entering the required estimated payment, then you must enter the four ES payment dates. Now the calculator can determine if any ES Late Pay penalty should have been assessed. The ES Late Pay penalty is a complex penalty, so it is recommended that you review Publication 103 and discussions within Chapter 42, and discuss any difficulties with your supervisor and Technical Support. In general terms, to calculate the required quarterly payment, you must calculate the "ES Late Pay base" and divide by four. The ES Late Pay base for BIT accounts is based on the total net income and replacement taxes shown on the original return. The ES Late Pay base for IIT accounts is based on total tax less credits (CR, PT, ED, 1299-C, and EIC credits). The taxpayer must pay the lesser of 100% of the prior year's tax base or 90% of the current year's tax base through timely ES payments.

Back to Example A, assuming this year's tax base is lower and no credits, the ES Late Pay base would be 90% x $10,000, and the required quarterly payment would be $2,250 ($9,000/4). The auditor must input the required quarterly $2,250 ES payment in the Amount Due field, and the four ES payment due dates in the four Pmt Due fields. Remember that fiscal filers will have different ES payment dates (still 15th day of 4th, 6th, 9th and 12th months for corporations and 15th day of 4th, 6th, 9th, and 13th month for individuals). Below is the ES/liability due date chart from Chapter 33(21) of the Audit Manual:

C. Late-Payment Penalty

Based upon the information already input, this penalty should now be calculated using the respective UPIA rate. The Use OverRide Amount box can be selected to change the penalty base amount under the Balance column, if necessary. It is important to remember that for periods during UPIA I-3 (1/1/94-12/31/03), the auditor does not calculate the late-payment penalty for the IL-870.

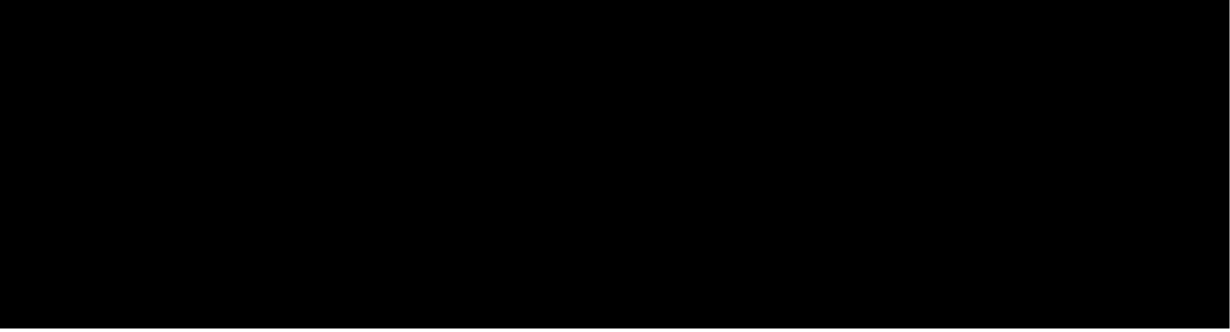
Below is the detail screen for the late-payment penalty:



For UPIA 5 (returns due on or after 1/1/05), the additional audit 5% penalty can be calculated by checking the box under Include Audit Late Payment Penalty. The OverRide Amount Indicator box can be selected to change the penalty base amount under the Balance column, if necessary. Below is the detail screen Audit Late Payment Penalty:

Returning to main P&I Calculator screen, the Penalty section would now look like this:

The total audit late-payment penalty is 15% of the audit liability, and using the calculator you will have to add both the Late Payment and Audit Late Payment Penalty fields to calculate the 15% UPIA 5 late-payment penalty to be shown on the IL-870. For returns due prior to 1/1/05, the Audit Late Payment Penalty field should not be used; it will incorrectly populate with the penalty under Late Payment. That field exists solely to add the 5% additional penalty for payments made after an audit has begun under UPIA 5. For earlier UPIAs, the late-payment penalty was not altered because of an audit initiation, so the Audit Late Payment Penalty field is irrelevant for UPIAs prior to UPIA 5. For those earlier UPIAs, the P&I Calculator will calculate the late-payment penalty based upon the appropriate rates for each UPIA, and populate that amount in the Late Payment field solely.

Also, the Penalty section will calculate what the total penalties should be, including penalties that were already assessed and perhaps paid by the taxpayer. You will have to verify on the GenTax Account springboard what penalties were already assessed and paid. The taxpayer should never be assessed the same penalty on the same penalty basis twice. For example, if in Example A, the taxpayer had made no ES payments and was assessed a ES Late Pay penalty of $900, that $900 should not be proposed on the IL-870. Under such circumstances, you can manually change the penalty bases in the calculator, or simply do your penalty calculations without the P&I Calculator. It is always a good idea to manually calculate the audit penalties to compare to the calculator results. Also, the penalties that are calculated by the P&I Calculator that relate to penalties assessed prior to the audit should equal what would be calculated on the forms IL-2220 and IL-2210. Remember, the only penalties put on the IL-870 should be those associated with the audit liability and protestable. Except in the case of nonfilers, this should only be the appropriate UPIA late-payment penalty for the audit liability.

There are certain fees that are not captured by the P&I Calculator, such as collection, lien, and NSF fees. These would never be assessed by the auditor, but may have penalty and interest that will be calculated by the Account springboard without inputting those fees. Any discrepancy in total balance due because of those fees would only calculate once the account is adjusted by Audit Perfection, and should only be minimal.

3. Interest Section

The Interest section contains the fields to enter the date through which interest is to be calculated, broken down as short-term interest, long-term interest, and total interest.

A. To calculate interest, enter an Interest Thru date. For audit purposes, this will normally be the IL-870 issuance date. Continuing Example A, let us say that the IL-870 issuance date is 6/1/11. That will be the date you enter in the Interest Thru field as shown below and the interest will populate the appropriate fields:

B. You can see the breakdown for short-term, long-term, and total interest by clicking on the respective tab. Below is the detail screen for Total Interest:

Note: The “rate” shown above is the actual interest rate for each period divided by 365 days (366 for leap years starting in 2012, see Paragraph C. below concerning leap years). This yields the daily interest rate for each period. For example, in the interest detail screen shown above, the taxpayer’s daily interest rate from 3/16/09 through 6/30/09 was .00005479, which is the annual rate of 2% divided by 365 (.02/365=.00005479).

C. For leap years 2008 and prior, the P&I Calculator only computes interest based upon the yearly rate divided by 365 days. For 2012 and forward, this problem was fixed and will correctly be calculated dividing by 366 days. Management has determined that the interest difference for past leap years is “de minimis” and can be ignored.

4. Amnesty Section

The last section of the P&I Calculator is Amnesty.

A. Interest on Penalty will automatically be computed on the liability base for returns due on 1/1/94 through 12/31/00. If there is an amount reflected in the Interest on Penalty box, this amount will have to be subtracted from the Total Interest amount to know the amount of interest on tax.

B. If the period is an Amnesty qualified year, a checkmark automatically appears in the Is Amnesty Period checkbox.

C. If the taxpayer failed to participate in Amnesty, checking the Amnesty Denied? checkbox will double all penalty and interest shown on the calculator. You will have to verify if there was any previously assessed penalty and interest, and may have to manually compute the IL-870 amounts that are associated with the audit liability and protestable. Therefore, you should only use the Amnesty Denied? feature when the taxpayer did not have any previously assessed penalty and interest prior to the audit. Otherwise you will overcharge the taxpayer. Shown below is the Amnesty Section:

Note: The Is Amnesty Period box is determined by the date put in the Original Due Date field. That means that fiscal filers with original due dates on 7/1/09 and after will not automatically populate the Is Amnesty Period. For example, taxable year ending 5/30/09 is a period that qualifies under 2010 Amnesty. However, since its original due date would be 8/15/09 (after 7/1/09), the P&I Calculator will not automatically recognize it as an Amnesty year, since it incorrectly compares the Original Due Date to 7/1/09. For FYE 4/30/09, 5/31/09, and 6/30/09, you will have to manually compute the Amnesty impact.

Once everything is calculated, determine the applicable audit portion of Total Penalty & Total Interest figure. The following example continues Example A. It is assumed that the taxpayer did not participate in the 2010 Illinois Amnesty Program, so interest and penalty will be doubled.

In Example A, the taxpayer timely filed and paid its originally filed liability, including estimated tax. The only penalty and interest calculated are for the audit liability. Therefore, we do not have to adjust the interest or penalty calculations and can safely click on Amnesty Denied? to double penalty and interest. If the IL-870 issuance date was the interest date of 6/1/11, then the total audit penalty would be $1,500 (15% x 2 x $5,000) and total interest doubled per Amnesty would be $573.16. If the taxpayer failed to pay within 30 days of 6/1/11, then the taxpayer would be assessed the audit penalty at 40% (20% x 2) when billed from Technical Review and the interest would continue to accrue until the liability is paid. Do not give the taxpayer another IL-870 showing the result of the penalty increasing to 20%.

For returns due on and before 12/31/00 (UPIA 1-2.5), interest accrued on both tax and penalty. When using the calculator for these years, the interest in the Total Interest will include the total of liability and penalty interest. The field Interest on Penalty will show the interest only on penalty. Therefore, to itemize the interest on tax and penalty, the Interest on Penalty should be subtracted from the Total Interest. The Interest on Penalty should not be added to the Total Interest, since it is already included. For example, if in Example A the APE was changed to 12/99 and the previous payments and return were filed timely, then the account would calculate as shown below:

The total interest on both tax and penalties is $9,330.09, which results from doubled penalty and interest for not participating in the 2003 Amnesty. To compute the interest on tax liability, subtract the Interest on Penalty amount from the Total Interest amount. In the above example, the interest on tax liability would be $6,664.98 ($9,330.09-$2,665.11).

The auditor will be expected to save their final GenTax P&I Calculator calculations for each period of the audit as Excel files with the other audit package schedules and as attachments to the taxpayer's GenTax Audit springboard. This must be done for each period with liability interest and refund interest. Attaching the files to the GenTax Audit springboard will save the auditor from having to print dozens of Excel workbook pages to include in the audit file, as well as allowing the rest of the Audit Division convenient access to the auditor's calculations.

To save as an Excel file, you will need to click on the “Export” icon shown on the top right panel bar (shown below) and then under the “Export” menu select “Excel”.

Once exported to Excel, all the available screens on the P&I Calculator can be accessed through different worksheet tabs, with the primary screen being labeled as “Main”. This is shown below:

Here the auditor could print any P&I Calculator screens, if desired. The auditor should now name and save the Excel workbook to the audit file. Once the files are saved, they can be attached to the taxpayer's GenTax Audit springboard. This can be done by following the steps below:

B. Next, click on ADD under the ATTACHMENTS tab shown above. This will open the window shown below

Then, fill in "Short Description" with an appropriate name for the attachment (e.g. 2007 P&I Calculation). Lastly, click on "Save".

C. Calculating Audit Refund Interest

Now that the calculator fields have been described for liabilities, there should be some familiarity with each one. However, calculating refund interest will require a slightly different approach using only certain fields of the calculator. These fields are:

- Original Due Date – Date of overpayment.
- Amount Due – Refund amount accruing interest.
- Interest Thru -- Stop-date for interest, the IL-870 issuance date.

No payments should be entered. Figures that appear in Penalty section should be ignored. The Amnesty section is also unnecessary for calculating refund interest, since refund interest for all Amnesty periods is always single interest. Below are Examples B and C from "Audit Claims" section with screen shots.

Example B: A claim was established in audit after the auditor determined that the tax required to be shown was $7,500, not the $10,000 originally filed by the taxpayer. Since there are no subsequent returns or payments to consider, the auditor needs to calculate interest on the whole overpayment of $2,500 from the date of overpayment to the IL-870 issuance date. Let's assume an IL-870 date of 6/1/11. The date of overpayment is the later of the original return due date without extensions, the date of payment that created the overpayment, or the date the original return was filed. The liability was paid timely (by 3/15/09), the due date is 3/15/09, and return was filed on the extension date of 10/15/09, so 10/15/09 is the date of overpayment and will be entered in the Original Due Date field. Next, without different overpayment dates to consider, the refund can be calculated in one segment, so $2,500 should be entered in the Amount Due field. Lastly, the calculator computes interest through any date entered in the Interest Thru field. For completing the IL-870 and audit, the auditor should use the IL-870 issuance date. In this example, it would be 6/1/11. Below is a screenshot of the Main Screen showing refund interest of $77.33:

Example C: The 2008 IL-1120 tax originally reported was $10,000. The taxpayer then filed an amended return reporting a higher tax of $12,500 and made an amended payment of $2,800 that included penalty and interest on 3/1/10. During the audit the auditor reduced the correct tax to $9,000. This created a tax change of $3,500, and a total overpayment of $3,800. However, the interest for the $3,800 must be calculated in segments because it became overpaid at different times due to subsequent payments. The auditor must work backwards from the most recent payment, which is still following the "date of overpayment" principal. $2,800 of the $3,800 became overpaid on 3/1/10, which was the payment made with the amended return. Interest will need to be calculated on $2,800 from 3/1/10 to the IL-870 date of 6/1/11. Interest on the remaining $1,000 ($3,800-$2,800) was overpaid when the original return was filed, so it will be calculated from 10/15/09 to 6/1/11. Then those two interest amounts should be added together and reported on the IL-870 for APE 12/31/2008. The total interest is $75.50 ($44.57 + $30.93) and is shown on the screenshots below:

D. Penalty and Interest Calculations – GenTax

The following are examples that illustrate using the P&I Calculator and including those amounts on the IL-870 (the "IL870M, Manual Waiver of Restrictions" form found under the GenTax audit letters should be used). The examples are not an exhaustive list of situations that will arise during audits, but will illustrate several possible situations. Further information concerning interest and penalties on overpayments and liabilities can be found in IITA §909, UPIA §3-2, IAC §100.9400, and Publication 103. Any questions concerning these computations and the IL-870 should be discussed with your supervisor and Technical Support.

A comment should be added to the Remarks section for any penalty and interest doubled on a liability for failure to participate in the 2003 and 2010 Amnesty Programs. Also, whenever the amount due or overpayment is different than the IL-870 total, the actual amount owed or to be refunded should be stated in the Remarks section. See the examples for recommended verbiage in various situations.

Each example is labeled with a general description to allow for easier identification for future reference.

1. Audit Liabilities

Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. Its originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 IL-505-B extension payment. Its originally filed 2008 of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely IL-505-B extension payment of $1,200. In 2011, an audit was conducted and established an audit liability for each year, $5,000 in 2007 and $1,000 in 2008. Lastly, Taxpayer did not participate in Amnesty. In preparing the IL-870, the P&I Calculator should be used to determine the penalty and interest due for Taxpayer for each APE. The 2007 OriginalDue Date would be 3/15/08 and 3/15/09 for 2008. The Interest Thru date is the issuance date of the IL-870, or 6/1/11 in this example. Since the interest and penalty will be doubled for failure to participate in Amnesty, the following comment should be added to the Remarks section: “Penalty and interest amounts reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program.” Lastly, since no prior penalty or interest was assessed on the account, the penalty and interest calculated will only be for the audit liability, which will be the amounts to put on the IL-870. Using this information in the P&I Calculator, this is what the GenTax P&I Calculator would show for each year and the completed IL-870 from GenTax:

2. Audit Liability and Audit Claim, Net Liability

The same facts as above for the original returns. In 2011 an audit was conducted and established a $5,000 audit liability for tax year 2007 and a claim of $2,500 for 2008. Taxpayer agrees to audit results. The issuance date for the IL-870 is 6/1/11. Taxpayer did not participate in 2010 Amnesty. Lastly, since there was no previously assessed penalty or interest, no manual calculations will need to be done after using the calculator. The P&I Calculator should be used to determine the interest due on the 2007 underpayment of $5,000 computed using an Original Due Date of 3/15/08 through the Interest Thru date of 6/1/11, the IL-870 issuance date. This would then be doubled for failure to participate in Amnesty. Second, the interest on the 2008 $2,500 overpayment would be calculated using an Original Due Date of 10/15/09 and Interest Thru date of 6/1/11, the IL-870 issuance date. Since no subsequent payments are involved, refund interest only needs to be calculated in one segment, so $2,500 should be entered in the Amount Due field. The P&I Calculator for 2008 and the IL-870 would appear as below:

3. Audit Liabilities, Previously Assessed Penalty/Interest, Refund Previously Issued

Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. For 2007 Taxpayer made 4 timely ES payments of $3,000 each. Its reported tax was $10,000, requesting a $2,000 refund. A refund for $2,031.72 ($31.72 interest) was issued on 9/1/09. For 2008 Taxpayer made no ES payments or timely IL-505-B extension payment for its reported $12,000 tax. It paid $13,305.53 on 10/15/09 with its IL-1120, correctly assessing a ES Late Pay penalty of $1,000, a late-payment penalty of $200, and interest of $105.53. An audit is conducted which increases the 2007 correct tax to $15,000 (creating an audit liability of $5,000), and the 2008 correct tax is increased to $15,000 (creating an audit liability of $3,000).

Since a refund in 2007 was issued, this refund and pertinent information should be entered in the Amount Refunded field detail screen, along with all the other payments and tax. The calculator will compute additional penalty and interest based upon the "reclaimed refund", which is the refund that was issued in error due to the subsequent liability established in audit. The Amnesty Denied? box should be checked to double the penalty and interest calculated for failure to participate in Amnesty on the unpaid tax. However, late-payment penalty should be manually calculated, since the refund interest of $31.72 is incorrectly treated as tax subject to late-payment penalty. Manually calculate the late-payment penalty of 15% x $5,000, and then double it for Amnesty. Secondly, to reclaim the $31.72 that was refunded originally to the taxpayer, this amount should be added to the interest calculated ($946.25), because otherwise this amount will not be collected from the taxpayer. In Amnesty situations, the reclaimed refund interest should not be subject to Amnesty penalty and added back after interest is doubled.

For 2008, the penalty and interest calculations become more complicated. Taxpayer was originally assessed and paid the $1,000 ES Late Pay penalty, $200 late-payment penalty, and $105.53 in interest. The calculator will compute penalties that include the originally assessed penalties. Only the interest and penalties associated with the liability should be put on the IL-870. In this example you should simply calculate the late-payment penalty on the audit liability and double it for Amnesty ($3,000 x 15% x 2). Calculating interest for 2008 is difficult because there was interest assessed and a payment made prior to the Amnesty period. Since the calculator does not recognize paid tax prior to or during Amnesty, it will only calculate single interest on the entire liability, or double that amount if the Amnesty Denied? box is checked. Therefore, the only way to calculate the correct interest to be shown on the IL-870 is to calculate interest on the separate liability amounts that accrue single and double interest.

The correct 2008 tax is $15,000. Single interest will accrue on $13,305.53 from 3/15/09 to 10/15/09 (the date it was paid), because that portion of the tax was paid before Amnesty. However, double interest will accrue on $1,694.47 ($15,000-$13,305.53) from 3/15/09 through 6/1/11 because that is the portion of tax unpaid by the end of Amnesty. By entering each of those amounts in the Amount Due field with the respective Original Due Date and Interest Thru dates (without entering any payments), you should calculate $117.01 in single interest on $13,305.53 and $194.23 ($97.12 x 2) of double interest on $1,694.47. Then you should add those two amounts, and subtract the $105.53 that was previously assessed to arrive at $205.71 in interest to show on the IL-870 for 2008. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

4. Erroneous Refund/Reclaimed Refund Interest

Taxpayer timely filed its 2010 calendar year IL-1120 on 10/15/2011 reporting tax of $300,000. Taxpayer made 4 timely ES payments of $100,000 each, requesting a refund of $100,000. A refund for $100,210.98 ($210.98 interest) was issued on 6/1/2012. An audit is conducted which increases the correct tax to $375,000 (creating an audit liability of $75,000). The IL-870 issuance date is 3/1/2014.

Taxpayer will owe the $75,000 audit liability with interest and late-payment penalty, in addition to any reclaimed refund interest, with interest.

Taxpayer was erroneously refunded $100,000 and applicable interest of $210.98 due to the subseqent increase in tax during audit. Taxpayer should have only received a $25,000 refund and applicable interest. The overpayment interest on the correct refund amount of $25,000 will need to be calculated (from the date of overpayment (10/15/2011) to the date of the refund (6/1/2012)). Interest on the $25,000 refund would have been $52.75. (The penalty section can be ignored in this calculation.)

The reclaimed refund interest amount would then be $158.23 ($210.98 - $52.75) which will need to be returned to the department with interest.

For GenTax to calculate the proper late-payment penalty, and interest on the late payment and reclaimed refund, the payments and refunds will need to be entered. When entering the Refund amount, the entire amount refunded, including interest, less any interest properly due the taxpayer should be entered in the Rfn Amount field ($100,210.98 – 52.75). For the late-payment penalty to properly calculate, the Use Override Amount will need to be checked and the balance updated to reflect the audit liability amount ($75,000). The late-payment penalty can also be computed manually.

5. Audit Liabilities, Individual Non-Filer

An audit is being conducted for an individual for the calendar years 2007 and 2008. For 2007, Taxpayer was a nonfiler. The auditor determines that taxpayer should have reported a tax of $2,000 before applying withholding of $1,600. The total withholding should be divided into 4 parts and entered as timely ES payments. This leaves an audit liability of $400. Although no ES Late Pay penalty will be assessed because the correct tax due was less than $500, late-payment and late-file penalties will apply and be doubled for Amnesty. For 2008, Taxpayer did file a timely IL-1040 return on 4/15/09 reporting a tax of $2,500 before applying $2,000 in withholding. A timely IL-505-I extension payment of $500 was also made on 4/15/09. The auditor disallowed a Schedule CR credit claimed for $800, creating an audit liability. The IL-870 issuance date is 6/1/11. Penalty and interest will be doubled for Amnesty. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Remarks

Penalty and interest amounts reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program.

6. Audit Liabilities, RAR, Net Overpayment:

Taxpayer timely filed its 2006 and 2007 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/07 and 10/15/08, respectively. For 2006, Taxpayer made 4 timely ES payments of $2,500 totaling $10,000 and a timely IL-505-B extension payment of $1,500, paying its $11,500 reported tax. For 2007 Taxpayer made 4 timely ES payments of $3,000 totaling $12,000 and a timely IL-505-B extension payment of $2,000, paying its reported tax of $14,000. Therefore, its return liabilities were timely paid and no penalties or interest were assessed. In 2010 an audit was initiated and continued through 2011. Taxpayer provided the auditor with a signed 2007 IL-1120-X on 2/1/11 for a claim of $8,000, reflecting an unreported RAR finalized in January 2011 with a reduction in federal taxable income. The audit established liabilities of $3,000 for tax year 2006 and $1,000 for 2007. For 2006 and 2007 the auditor will only list the proposed liabilities of $3,000 and $1,000 on the IL-870. The net total liability or refund should be stated in the Remarks section of the IL-870 form due to the RAR claim amount allowed. Taxpayer did not participate in Amnesty, and the issuance date for the IL-870 is 6/1/11. Therefore, double penalty and interest will be calculated through 6/1/11 on $3,000 for 2006. However, for 2007, after taking into account the RAR claim, Taxpayer has a net overpayment of $7,000, so no penalty and underpayment interest should be proposed in 2007. The auditor must also calculate the claim interest on $7,000 from 10/15/08 through 6/1/11. The total 2007 RAR claim will be netted against the IL-870 liability and the total liability or claim explained in the Remarks section. Remarks

Penalty and interest amounts reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program. Execution of this form will allow the approved claim filed on 2/1/11 for Y/E 12/31/07, in the amount of $8,000 (plus $545.99 applicable interest), to be used to offset the above-proposed liability which will result in a net overpayment of $2,498.41.

7. Audit Claim, Participated in 2010 Amnesty:

Taxpayer's income tax return for the calendar year 2005 is under audit during the Amnesty Program Period, but no Established Liability has been created. Taxpayer participates in the Amnesty Program for 2005. After the audit is concluded, the Department determines that Taxpayer has overpaid its 2005 liability by $300. Taxpayer may receive a refund of any payments it made, because only payments of Established Liabilities are subject to limitations on refunds, but no interest is payable by the Department on any refund or credit allowed for a tax and period for which the taxpayer participated in the Amnesty Program (UPIA Section 3-2(h)). However, interest will be allowed on any refund or credit based on a refund claim that was outstanding as of the beginning of the Amnesty Program Period, per Amnesty Rules IAC §520.105(c)(5). Assuming the 2005 return was timely paid and filed on 10/15/06 and the IL-870 was to be issued on 6/1/11, the IL-870 would be presented as follows:

8. Audit Liability and Audit Claim, Participated in 2010 Amnesty, Net Liability

Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. The originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 IL-505-B extension payment. The originally filed 2008 tax of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely IL-505-B extension payment of $1,200. In 2010 an audit was initiated and not going to be completed by the end of the Amnesty Program. The taxpayer filed IL-1120-Xs and made estimated Amnesty payments for both years on 11/08/10 of $7,500 each. The audit was completed in May, 2011 and established an additional $5,000 audit liability for tax year 2007 and a claim of $2,500 for 2008. Taxpayer agrees to audit results. No interest will be allowed on the audit claim. The issuance date for the IL-870 is 6/1/11. In this scenario, only the audit liability should be entered in the Amount Due without entering any payments for 2007. This is because the P&I Calculator will incorrectly calculate penalty and interest on amounts paid during Amnesty. To avoid incorrect penalty and interest, the liability interest should be calculated as in refund situations. In the Remarks section Taxpayer should be advised about the loss of Amnesty benefits for 2007 if the audit liability is not paid within 30 days of the IL-870 issuance date. Shown below are screenshots of the P&I Calculator for 2007 and the IL-870:

Remarks

Penalty and interest amounts for Y/E 12/31/07 reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program. Failure to pay the total liability within 30 days of the issuance date of this form will lead to revocation of amnesty benefits previously allowed for Y/E 12/31/07 and additional penalty and interest will be assessed.

9. Audit Liabilities, RAR:

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. The originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 IL-505-B liability payment. The originally filed 2008 tax of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely liability payment of $1,200. Taxpayer did not participate in Amnesty. Taxpayer provides the auditor a signed 2007 IL-1120-X on 4/1/11 for an unreported RAR finalized on 3/15/2011, which increased federal taxable income and its Illinois tax liability by $5,000. No audit adjustment is found for 2007, and the auditor determines an audit liability of $3,000 for 2008. The net total liability or refund should be stated in the Remarks section of the IL-870 form due to the RAR liability. Since the 2007 RAR liability is a federal change finalized after Amnesty, only single interest should be assessed for not participating in Amnesty. Double penalty and interest would be assessed on the 2008 audit liability. The IL-870 issuance date is 8/1/11. Shown below are the screenshots of the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Remarks Penalty and interest amounts for Y/E 12/31/08 reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program. In addition to above liability, tax ($5,000), penalty ($750) and interest ($595.34) totaling $6,345.34 is also due from the amended return filed on 4/1/11 for the Y/E 12/31/07, which will result in a net liability of $10,624.57 being due.

10. Audit Liabilities, RAR, Participated in 2010 Amnesty:

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. The originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 IL-505-B extension payment. The originally filed 2008 tax of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely liability payment of $1,200.

Taxpayer participated in Amnesty by filing IL-1120-Xs and paying its 2007 and 2008 eligible liabilities (representing the estimated adjustments that could be made in audit) of $10,000 and $12,500, respectively, on 11/8/10. These were not Estimated Federal Change Liabilities. Taxpayer provides the auditor with a signed 2007 amended return on 4/30/11 to report an unreported RAR finalized on 3/15/11, which increased federal taxable income and its Illinois tax liability by $5,000. No audit adjustments are found for the amounts reported on the amended returns for 2007.

Since the liability on the second amended 2007 return is due to a federal change finalized after Amnesty, only single interest should be assessed for not participating in Amnesty, as long as the taxpayer timely pays the assessed 2007 liability within 30 days of the IL-870 issuance date. The net total liability or refund should be stated in the Remarks section of the IL-870 due to the RAR liability.

The auditor determines an additional audit liability of $3,000 for 2008 (total tax due is $27,500). Double penalty and interest would be assessed on the 2008 additional audit liability.

In this scenario (similar to 8), only the audit liabilities should be entered in the Amount Due without entering any payments for 2007 or 2008. This is because the P&I Calculator will incorrectly calculate penalty and interest on amounts paid during Amnesty. To avoid incorrect penalty and interest, the liability interest should be calculated as in refund situations.

If the taxpayer fails to pay the assessed liability within 30 days of the IL-870 issuance date, the taxpayer will forfeit the Amnesty abated penalty and interest on the entire additional tax of $10,000 for 2007 and $15,500 for the 2008 tax year. The IL-870 issuance date is 8/1/11. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

11. Audit Liability and Claim, RAR, Participated in 2010 Amnesty, Net Liability

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. The originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 liability payment. The originally filed 2008 tax of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely liability payment of $1,200. Taxpayer participated in Amnesty by filing IL-1120-Xs and paying its 2007 and 2008 eligible liabilities of $10,000 and $12,500, respectively, on 11/8/10. The 2007 liability was due to an RAR finalized prior to Amnesty. During the audit, an additional liability unrelated to the RAR of $5,000 is established for 2007 and a claim of $3,000 for 2008. The taxpayer is assessed double penalty and interest on the $5,000 audit liability, and no interest will be allowed on the $3,000 claim.

In this scenario (similar to 8), only the audit liability should be entered in the Amount Due without entering any payments for 2007. This is because the P&I Calculator will incorrectly calculate penalty and interest on amounts paid during Amnesty. To avoid incorrect penalty and interest, the liability interest should be calculated as in refund situations.

If Taxpayer fails to pay the IL-870 within 30 days of the issuance date, then Amnesty abatement for 2007 would be forfeited and assessed at the double rate because the payment was related to a federal change finalized prior to the end of Amnesty. The IL-870 issuance date is 6/1/11. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Remarks

Penalty and interest amounts for Y/E 12/31/07 reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program. No interest is payable by the Department on any refund or credit for a tax and period in which the taxpayer participated in 2010 Amnesty Program. Failure to pay the total liability within 30 days of the issuance date of this form will lead to revocation of amnesty benefits previously allowed for Y/E 12/31/07 and additional penalty and interest will be assessed.

12. Audit Liabilities and Claim, RAR/Capital Loss, Net Liability:

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed its 2007 and 2008 calendar year IL-1120s on 10/15/08 and 10/15/09, respectively. Its originally filed 2007 tax of $10,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,250 each, and a timely $1,000 liability payment. Its originally filed 2008 tax of $12,000 was paid by four timely ES payments of $2,700 each, and a timely liability payment of $1,200. Taxpayer did not participate in Amnesty. On 4/30/11 Taxpayer presents the auditor with a signed 2004 IL-1120-X for an unreported RAR finalized on 3/15/11. The adjustment was for an increase in capital losses in 2007, which carried back to 2004 creating an Illinois claim for $3,000. The audit is expanded to include 2004 and no additional adjustment is found in that year to reduce the claim. Audit liabilities of $5,000 and $10,000 are determined for years 2007 and 2008. According to IAC §100.9400(c)(3)(C), interest on the 2004 overpayment due to the federal capital loss carryback is calculated from the date of claim, which would be the processable date for the 2004 IL-1120-X. Since the 2004 overpayment is due to a federal capital loss carryback and will be offset within 3 months of the claim date, then no refund interest should be accrued (IAC §100.9400(c)(3)(C)). Double penalty and interest would be calculated through the IL-870 issuance date for the audit liabilities. The net total liability or refund should be stated in the Remarks section of the IL-870 form due to the RAR overpayment. The IL-870 issuance date is 6/1/11. Shown below are the screenshots of the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Execution of the form will allow approved claim filed on 4/1/11 for Y/E 12/31/04, in the amount of $3,000, to be used to offset the above proposed liability which will result in a net liability of $18,778.08 being due.

13. Audit Liability, INOL Carryback, Restricted Interest:

Taxpayer is being audited in 2011 for their calendar 2000, 2001, and 2002 years, which has been ongoing since 2004 and years have been kept in statute due to signed IL-872s. Taxpayer timely filed and paid liabilities for original 2000 and 2001 returns, and reported a net loss for 2002. The 2002 loss was carried back to 2000, reducing the 2000 liability to $10,000, and a refund was paid. The auditor increased the 2002 Illinois Net Operating Loss (INOL) and increased income in 2000, which resulted in additional tax due of $3,000. After the 2002 INOL is carried back, the 2000 audit liability will be zero. Taxpayer agrees to the audit results. The IL-870 issuance date is 6/1/11. Even though the Illinois Net Loss Deduction (INLD) for 2000 will reduce the audit liability to zero, interest must be calculated from the date the liability was originally due to the last day of the taxable year in which the loss was incurred. “Restricted interest” must be assessed on $3,000 from 3/15/01 through 12/31/02. By entering the $3,000 INLD as a payment with a date of 12/31/02, the calculator will correctly calculate interest from 3/16/01 through 12/31/02.

Also, since the penalty would be a UPIA-3 late-payment penalty, none will be assessed on the IL-870. The Remarks section must explain what Taxpayer’s actual liability is. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Execution of this form will allow approved Illinois Net Operating Loss for Y/E 12/31/02 to offset the above proposed liability, which will result in a net liability of $365.01 being due.

14. Audit Liability, INOL Carryback (Partial Offset), Restricted Interest:

Facts are the same as in Example 12, except that once the 2002 INOL is carried to 2000, a liability of $2,000 remains. Taxpayer agrees to the audit results. This will still leave an unpaid tax balance of $2,000 as of the IL-870 date of 6/1/11. First, since the penalty will be a UPIA-3 late-payment penalty, none will be assessed on the IL-870. Second, the interest must be calculated as two tiers on the $3,000 increase in 2000: first, "restricted interest" on $1,000 from 3/15/01 through 12/31/02; second, interest on $2,000 from 3/15/01 through the IL-870 date of 6/1/11. With all the previous payment and tax liability in the calculator for APE 12/00, by entering the 2000 INLD as a payment of $1,000 dated 12/31/02, the calculator will calculate restricted interest on $1,000 from 3/15/01 through 12/31/02, and interest on $2,000 from 3/15/01 to 6/1/11. This case is unique because all interest associated with the unpaid $2,000 tax must be doubled for failure to have been paid during 2003 Amnesty Program. Therefore, doing a second interest calculation on $2,000 from 3/15/01 to 6/1/11 and adding that to the first calculation will double the interest on $2,000. Enter $2,000 in Amount Due (without any payments) and calculate interest from 3/15/01 through 6/1/11, and manually add this interest amount ($1,158.86) to the interest from the first calculation ($1,280.53). (Note: The restricted interest is not doubled because there is no liability associated with this interest and therefore doubling for Amnesty does not apply.) Lastly, the actual taxpayer liability will have to be stated in the "Remarks" section. Shown below are the screenshots for the P&I Calculator and the IL-870:

Remarks

Interest for Y/E 12/31/00 reflects double rate for failure to participate in 2003 Amnesty Program on the additional unpaid liability of $2,000. Execution of this form will allow approved Illinois Net Operating Loss for Y/E 12/31/02 to partially offset the above proposed liability, which will result in a net liability of $4,439.39 ($2,000 tax and $2,439.39 interest) being due.

15. Audit Claim, Pending Refunds, Net Liability:

Taxpayer makes four equal estimated payments on their due dates for calendar year 2007 totaling $60,000. Taxpayer timely files year 2007 IL-1120 on 10/15/08. The tax reported was $50,000, and a $10,000 refund was requested and is pending. For calendar year 2008, Taxpayer made 4 equal estimated payments on the due dates totaling $80,000. The IL-1120 was timely filed on 10/15/09 reporting tax of $70,000; another $10,000 refund was requested and is pending. An audit was performed in 2011 on the above-mentioned tax years. No audit adjustments were found for 2007, and an audit liability of $25,000 was established for 2008. To calculate the total audit liability, each year's liability must be determined separately, and then offset to determine the final refund or liability. The IL-870 date is 6/1/11. In 2007, although there is no audit change, there is a pending refund. Therefore, you must calculate the appropriate accrued interest so that the total 2007 overpayment can be offset against the 2008 audit liability and either the net overpayment or liability be stated in the Remarks section. For the 2007 pending refund, the date of overpayment is the later of the due date or the date the return is filed, which is 10/15/08 and should be entered in the Original Due Date field. The Interest Thru date will be the IL-870 date of 6/1/11.

For 2008, the auditor must first look at what was timely paid and the tax required to be shown (tax originally filed modified by any audit adjustment). Secondly, any subsequent payments must be accounted for when determining interest. Taxpayer had paid $80,000 by the payment due date, had a pending refund of $10,000, and had an audit liability of $25,000. First, the penalty base should be determined by looking at the tax that was required to be shown on the return, reduced by any part of the tax which was paid on time and by any credit which was properly allowable on the date the return was required to be filed. The tax required to be shown was $95,000, and $80,000 was paid by the payment due date. Since the refund was pending and had not been issued, the penalty base is $15,000. To calculate audit liability interest, the Original Due Date entered is 3/15/09 and the *Interest Thru d*ate entered is 6/1/11. Both penalty and interest must be doubled for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty. Then 2007 and 2008 can be offset and the total liability or refund explained in the Remarks section. Remarks

Penalty and interest amounts for Y/E 12/31/08 reflect double rates for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty Program. Execution of this form will allow pending refunds for Y/E 12/31/07 in the amount of $10,780 (includes interest of $780), and Y/E 12/31/08 in the amount of $10,000, to be offset against the above proposed liability, which will result in a net liability of $10,439.46 being due.

16. Audit Liabilities, Previously Assessed Penalty/Interest, Pending Refund, Net Overpayment:

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer made no ES payments and one timely 2007 IL-505-B extension payment on 3/15/08 of $60,000, and files calendar year 2007 IL-1120 on 10/15/08. The tax reported was $50,000 and was assessed a $4,500 ES Late Pay penalty, with a pending refund of $5,500. For 2008 Taxpayer made no timely estimated or extension payments. The IL-1120 was timely filed on 10/15/09 with a return payment for the tax reported of $70,000. Taxpayer was assessed a ES Late Pay penalty of $5,000, a late-payment penalty of $2,000, and interest of $615.60. Taxpayer made a payment of $7,615.60 on 12/15/09 and had a zero balance.

An audit was performed in 2011 on both periods finding an audit liability of $1,000 for 2007 and $2,500 for 2008. Again, each year should be examined separately and then the results offset for determining the total audit refund or liability. The IL-870 date is 6/1/11. In 2007, although the IL-870 will show a $1,000 audit liability, Taxpayer actually has a net overpayment of $4,500, so there is no penalty base and refund interest will be calculated on $4,500 from 10/15/08 through the IL-870 date of 6/1/11.

For 2008 an audit liability of $2,500 is established. First, to determine the penalty base, the auditor must compare the correct tax required to the tax timely paid. The penalties calculated in this instance will be all penalties assessed on this account. However, the auditor should not propose the portion of penalty that was already assessed (and paid) on the IL-870. Also, using the Include Audit Late Payment Penalty checkbox without overriding the audit late-payment penalty base would incorrectly calculate the additional 5% on $70,000 of the tax base upon which Taxpayer has already been assessed. In this example (with previously assessed penalties), the safest approach is to manually calculate the penalty on the audit liability to be included on the IL-870. That would be 15% on $2,500. Since the correct tax was completely paid by 12/15/09, the penalty should not be doubled for Amnesty.

As in 3, calculating interest for 2008 is difficult because there was interest assessed and a payment made prior to the Amnesty period. Since the calculator does not recognize paid tax prior to or during Amnesty, it will only calculate single interest on the entire liability, or double that amount if the Amnesty Denied? box is checked. Therefore, the only way to calculate the correct interest to be shown on the IL-870 is to calculate interest on the separate liability amounts that accrue single and double interest. In this example, however, the correct tax after audit is $72,500, which is completely paid after the $7,615.60 payment on 12/15/09. Therefore, the interest should not be doubled for Amnesty. For the IL-870 2008 interest, the interest previously assessed (and paid) by the taxpayer must be manually subtracted from the total interest computed by the calculator through 6/1/11. The net result is $26.17 ($641.77-$615.60), which is the Interest associated with the 2008 audit liability. Then, the two years will be offset, and the total liability or refund will need to be explained in the Remarks section.

Remarks

Execution of this form will allow pending refund for Y/E 12/07 in the amount of $5,850.99 (includes interest of $350.99) to be offset against the above proposed liability, which will result in a net overpayment of $1,949.82 being refunded.

17. Audit Liability, Applied Credit Carryforward:

In 2011 Taxpayer is being audited for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed its calendar 2007 IL-1120, having made 4 timely estimated payments of $500 each. The original tax shown was $1,500. Taxpayer requested that the $500 overpayment be applied as a credit carryforward ("CCF") to its 2008 tax liability. For tax year 2008, 3 timely estimated payments of $500 were made for the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th quarters. The 2008 IL-1120 was timely filed, and the original tax shown was $1,750. Taxpayer requested a $250 refund, which was issued in 2009. The auditor determines that there is an audit liability of $1,000 for 2007 and none for 2008. Taxpayer did not participate in the 2010 Amnesty Program. The auditor is going to issue the IL-870 on 6/1/11.

First, the penalty base is determined by checking what the tax required to be shown was less timely payments and credits. For UPIA 5, any credits or refunds allowed are not considered timely paid for late-payment penalty. Since the CCF was applied to the following year, the 2007 penalty base would be $1,000 [$2,500 tax – ($2,000 ES - $500 CCF allowed)]. A UPIA 5 late-payment penalty of 15% will be assessed and doubled for the Amnesty rate.

Next, interest must be calculated for 2007. Although the audit liability is $1,000, Taxpayer had a $500 CCF that was applied to the 2008 year. That CCF was applied to 2008 on the dates needed to satisfy the estimated payment requirements. In this example, the quarterly required 2008 ES payments were $393.75 (($1,750 x 90%)/4). The $500 CCF would have been applied as of the dates needed for the required ES payments. Therefore, $393.75 was applied on 4/15/08, and the remainder ($106.25) was applied to the second quarter payment due on 6/15/08. Interest should only be accrued on the CCF on the dates it was needed. Taxpayer's $500 CCF was applied on 4/15/08 and 6/15/08, so 6/15/08 is the date that the full $1,000 audit liability would be charged interest (because Taxpayer was only underpaid $500 until the additional $500 credit was fully applied). In other words, three tiers of interest must be calculated:

- $500 from 3/15/08 through 6/1/11
- $393.75 from 4/15/08 through 6/1/11
- $106.25 from 6/15/08 through 6/1/11

This can be accomplished with the P&I Calculator by entering all the appropriate payment and tax information, and then entering the 2008 CCF amounts in the Amount Refunded detail screen. Only the Rfn Issued dates (4/15/08 and 6/15/08) and the Rfn Amount ($393.75 and $106.25) should be entered. Do not enter a date in the Return Rcvd Date field in this situation, since no refund interest was involved and the credit carryforward is applied before the date the 2007 return was filed. Now the calculator will correctly calculate interest on the three tiers needed. Interest would also be doubled for failure to participate in 2010 Amnesty. Since there is no 2008 audit liability and the refund has been issued, no additional calculations need to be done for 2008.

18. Audit Liability, Credit Carryforwards, Refund Previously Issued, Amnesty

This is an example of an actual audit situation and the resulting penalty and interest assessment, which an auditor is likely to encounter.

Taxpayer has a fiscal year end of 3/31/2008 and timely filed its 2008 IL-1120 on 11/16/2008. For 2008 taxpayer made two estimated payments ($2,304,000 on 9/9/2007 and $1,081,000 on 6/8/2008). There was a credit carryforward of $4,418,269.76 from 2007 applied on 6/15/2007. The reported tax was $951,146. A refund for $3,666,751.59 ($359,270 interest) was issued on 5/31/2012. An audit was conducted in 2013 which increased the 2008 correct tax to $4,878,392 (creating an audit liability of $3,927,246). Penalties and Interest will be doubled for Amnesty.

Determining Late-Payment Penalty Basis ((3-3(b-20)(2) & (3-3(c)):

The Total Interest calculated, $352,994.43 (the amounts above need to be doubled for Amnesty), reflects interest from 1/15/2009, which is the date on which the account became underpaid due to the credit transfer ($754,725), on the basis of $303,103. The interest basis increased on 5/31/2012 due to the refunds of overpayments of tax ($3,307,481.59) and the associated interest ($359,270). Interest is being calculated through 8/5/2013, the date of the IL-870.

The Total Interest calculated needs to be increased by the interest on erroneous refunds ($359,270) so that those funds are returned, or “reclaimed”, by the Department. This interest is often referred to internally as “reclaimed refund interest”. It is interest that the taxpayer should never have received based upon the corrected tax. Including the reclaimed refund interest increases the final Total Interest to $712,264.43.

The proposed amounts on the IL-870 would be:

		Increase in Tax and Penalties
Year ended	Amount of Tax	Penalty	Interest	Total
03/31/2008	$3,927,246	$90,931	$712,264	$4,730,441
TOTAL:	$3,927,246	$90,931	$712,264	$4,730,441

The above examples are only illustrative of some of the situations that auditors will encounter. Many will simply require calculating interest on the corrected audit tax from the original due date of the return, or refund interest from the later of the filing date of the original return or its original due date, to the IL-870 issuance date. However, care must be taken to account for offsets, original overpayments, previously assessed penalties and interest, subsequent payments, Amnesty years, credits and refunds, RARs, and restricted interest. The examples in this chapter and Publication 103 are a good starting point for explaining more complicated situations, such as restricted interest. Audits involving more complex penalty and interest calculations should be discussed with supervisors and Technical Support to prevent issuing erroneous IL-870s. Lastly, the P&I Calculator can also be useful for providing the taxpayer with penalty and interest projections based upon different refund/liability scenarios.

(1) IL-2220 Computation of Penalties for Businesses

The Late ES Payment penalty for this same example would be calculated on the IL-2220 as follows:

Step 2: Figure your required installments - Form IL-1120 filers only

		A This year	B Last year
5	Write the total net income and replacement tax from Form IL-1120. See instructions. If prior year's tax was zero or you filed a short year return, write "N/A" in Column B.	260,000.00	300,000.00
6	Multiply Column A, Line 5, by 90% (.9).	234,000.00
7	If Column A, Line 5, is $400 or less, write "0" and go to Step 3. Otherwise, write the lesser of Column A, Line 6, or Column B, Line 5. See instructions.	234,000.00
8	Divide the amount on Line 7 by four. This is the amount of each required installment. (If you used the annualized income installment method, see instructions.)	58,500.00

		Quarter 1	Quarter 2	Quarter 3	Quarter 4
9	Write in Quarters 1 through 4, the installment date that corresponds with the 15th day of the 4th, 6th, 9th, and 12th month of your tax year.	04 / 15 / 2007	06 / 15 / 2007	09 / 15 / 2007	12 / 15 / 2007
10	Write the required installment. See instructions.	58,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00
11	Write the amount of credit carried forward from the prior year.	15,000.00	Do not write on this line.	Do not write on this line.	Do not write on this line.
12	Subtract Line 11 from Line 10. If the amount is negative, use brackets. Write in Quarters 2 through 4, the amount from Line 10.	43,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00
13	If the amount on Line 14 of the previous quarter is negative, write that amount as a positive here. Otherwise, write "0."	Skip this line for Quarter 1.	0.00	0.00	0.00
14	Subtract Line 13 from Line 12. If the amount is negative, use brackets.	43,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00	58,500.00

Step 3: Figure your unpaid tax

15 Write your total net income and replacement tax. See instructions. 15 260,000.00

16 a Write the amount of your credit carryforward from the prior year and your total estimated tax payments made this year. 16a 195,000.00

b Form IL-1120 filers only: Write the amount from Line 7, or, if you annualized, the total of Line 10. All other filers, write zero. 16b 234,000.00

Write the greater of Line 16a or Line 16b here. 16 234,000.00

17 Write other payments made on or before your original due date.

a Write the amount and the date of your Form IL-505-B. 17a ________ __/__/____

b Write the amount and the date of any other payment. 17b 65,000.00 03 / 15 / 2008

Add Lines 17a and 17b. 17 65,000.00

18 Add Lines 16 and 17. 18 299,000.00

19 Subtract Line 18 from Line 15. If this amount is —positive, write that amount here. Continue to Step 4 and write this amount in Penalty Worksheet 1, Line 21, Column C.

—zero or negative, write that amount here and, if negative, use brackets. Continue to Step 4, skip Penalty Worksheet 1, and go to Penalty Worksheet 2. You may apply this overpayment to any underpayment when figuring your Penalty Worksheet 2. See instructions. 19 -39,000.00

Penalty Worksheet 2 — Late-payment penalty for underpayment of estimated tax

Note: If you paid the required amount from Line 14 by the payment due date on Line 9 for each quarter, do not complete this worksheet.

23 Write the amount and the date of each estimated income tax payment you made. See instructions.

Estimated income tax payments

III. General Information

A. Withholding Rate

The withholding rate is computed on compensation after adjustment for the number of exemptions claimed. These exemptions (or allowances) are based on the number of allowances that an employee claims as recorded on Form IL-W-4, Employee's Illinois Withholding Allowance Certificate.

The following shows the tax rates per year used when calculating withholding:

YEARS	TAX RATE
From 8/1/69 through 12/31/82	2.5%
From 1/1/83 through 6/30/84	3.0%
From 7/1/84 through 6/30/89	2.5%
From 7/1/89 through 12/31/10	3.0%
From 1/1/11 through 12/31/14	5.0%
From 1/1/15 through 6/30/17	3.75%
Starting 7/1/17	4.95%

B. How to Figure Amount to Withhold

For wages and other compensation, subtract any exemptions calculated based on the number of allowances claimed on Form IL-W-4 from the wages or other compensation paid. Multiply the result by the applicable year's rate as stated above.

When calculating amounts to be withheld, the direct percentage method or the automated payroll method may be used. For details, see Booklet IL-700-T, Illinois Withholding Tax Tables, on the IDOR website at www.tax.illinois.gov.

C. Tax Credits Claimed Against Withholding

There are two tax credits, provided for through the Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity (DCEO), which allow certain eligible taxpayers the election to claim these credits against withholding payments. These two are:

- the Small Business Creation Tax Credit – IITA § 704A(h)
- the EDGE Tax Credit – IITA § 704A(g)

Credits may only be claimed by the eligible taxpayer once the DCEO credit certificate has been received. The taxpayer should provide proof of credit certificate if requested by the Department of Revenue. If the credit amount exceeds the amount of total payments due with respect to amounts withheld during the calendar year, excess credit may be carried forward for five years. Ref: IITA § 704A(g) and (h).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

D. Withholding Concerning Illinois Lottery Winnings

1. Purchasers
   Effective on and after January 1, 2014, a purchaser is required to withhold Illinois income tax from the seller when purchasing the rights to future payments of Illinois lottery winnings and submit this withholding to the Department of Revenue.
   - At the end of the calendar year, the purchaser will provide Form 1099-MISC, Miscellaneous Income, to the seller reporting the purchase price paid as income and the amount that was withheld from the purchase price as the Illinois withholding.
   - Companies who purchase Illinois lottery winnings can be identified in GenTax as their FEIN number will be followed by "999". Example: Taxpayer's FEIN # is 12-3456789-999.

2. Sellers
   Previously, when the rights to Illinois Lottery winnings were "sold", only resident sellers had to pay Illinois income tax on the amount of the sale price received and include it as income on Form IL-1040 when filed. Effective for tax years ending on and after December 31, 2013, nonresident sellers must also pay tax on this income and, for purchases made after December 31, 2013, purchasers are required to withhold Illinois income tax from payments made to the seller.

   - Effective on and after January 1, 2014, Form 1099-MISC provided by the purchaser to the seller, will indicate the income amount (sale price) and the withholding amount withheld by the purchaser. These amounts must be reported on the seller's IL-1040.

- Throughout the chapter this "bullet style" has been used to indicate when an Exhibit should be reviewed at the end of the chapter.

VII. Withholding Audit Procedures

This Section should be utilized by the in-house WIT auditors. Any procedural topic not covered in this section/chapter should be addressed by either the auditor's coach or the supervisor over that unit.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

For in-house WIT auditors doing taxpayer research, the following resources can be accessed, if necessary:

- EFSB-160 – used to find individuals who have filed an electronic W-2
- Data Warehouse
- GenTax – EFWZ Query, Web Documents

Note: Anytime that a number is taken from the Data Warehouse (federal information) and transferred onto Audit documentation (i.e. withholding calculation spreadsheet), it is then considered Federal Tax Information (FTI). The spreadsheet created must be attached to the Electronic Audit under Section 01 Audit Information in the FTI Zipped Audit File Folder: FTI Auditor's WIT Worksheet (Sch A). This will trigger the GenTax Federal Tax Information Banner (see below).

GenTax Federal Tax Information Banner

A message (below) is displayed in GenTax when data is presented that contains Federal Tax Information (FTI). Note: Not all accounts in GenTax will show this banner, only when FTI is present.

The message includes a link (i.e. click here) to the IRS required procedure that must be followed if the screen is printed. Therefore, it is highly recommended that screens only be printed when absolutely necessary.

A. Audits of Bankruptcy Accounts

Auditors should check GenTax on audit assignments as received to see if a bankruptcy exists. It is also recommended that auditors question taxpayers on audit assignments to see whether a bankruptcy filing is involved. See Chapter 20 for information concerning bankruptcy.

B. WIT Unverified Payments

When performing any of the in-house WIT audits listed in Section C that follows, it is important to understand what WIT "unverified" payments indicate. Essentially, the taxpayer has overpaid on a given period (such as when the taxpayer paid twice). If that overpayment is not claimed on the following period, the payment remains on the period where paid. Such a payment is changed in GenTax to “unverified” in the Trans Type as “Adj – Unverified WIT Credit”.

The importance of these “unverified” payments is that they can be used against an audit liability, but in that respective period only (they cannot be moved to another period). In order to utilize such a payment, the “unverified” payment must be reversed. This reversal request must go through the auditor’s immediate supervisor to the Audit Perfection Supervisor, who will reverse the payment so that it can be applied to the audit liability.

Note: The auditor must utilize the payment on the same day that the reversal is completed. This is important because the payment will revert back to “unverified” overnight. During the reversal day, the auditor needs to utilize the payment through the WIT work papers to ensure the correct P&I calculations are applied.

C. In-House Audit Procedures

NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the “Audit Submission and Review” section of that chapter.

Withholding (WIT) audits performed by in-house auditors include:

1. Nonfiler or skip filer audits
2. Monthly or semi-weekly audits [after tax year 2016, semi-weekly audits no longer done]
3. Federal Revenue Auditor’s Report (RAR) audits

For all WIT audits, the following applies:

- Verify that the Audit View has the correct audit periods and filing periods as requested on the SC-137. Screen print examples follow for each type.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

1. Nonfiler or Skip Filer Audit Procedures

a) Initiation Letter

An audit initiation letter (EDA-135 Audit Initiation) must be completed for all Withholding Tax audits and sent to the taxpayer. This letter is required.

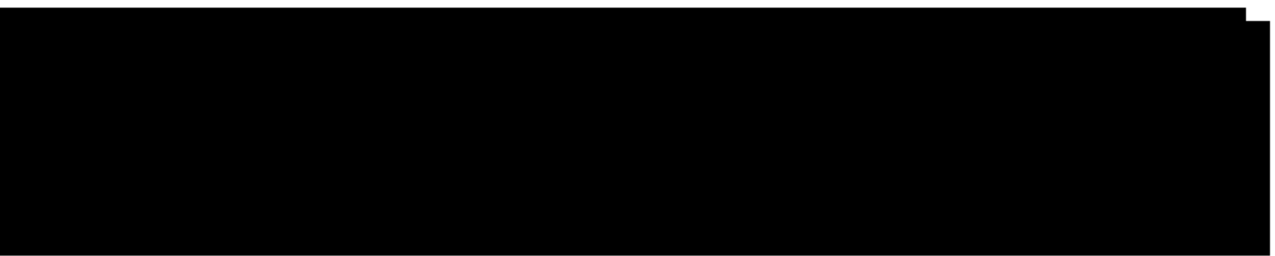
The audit initiation letter is systemically generated from GenTax when the RAS assigns the audit to the auditor [stage – assigned started]. Letters print in the overnight batch process in Springfield and get mailed directly from the mailroom. If there is an issue with the taxpayer's address, the auditor will need to invalidate the audit initiation letter and manually create a new one. The new letter will batch print from Springfield.

- See Exhibit A – How to Create the EDA-135.
  Note: If a second Initiation letter needs to be sent, refer to these instructions.

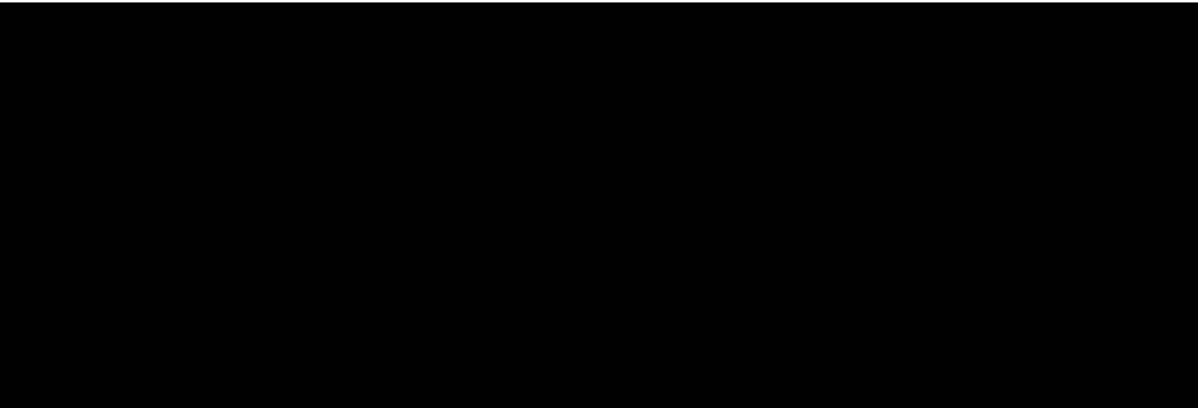
b) Second Request Letter (IDOR8FF)

If the taxpayer does not respond to the Initiation Letter within 30 days, a second request letter will be sent.

While in the Audit View, this letter can be accessed in the Letters sub-tab under the CRM Tab. Click on Add to access this letter in the audit letters listing.

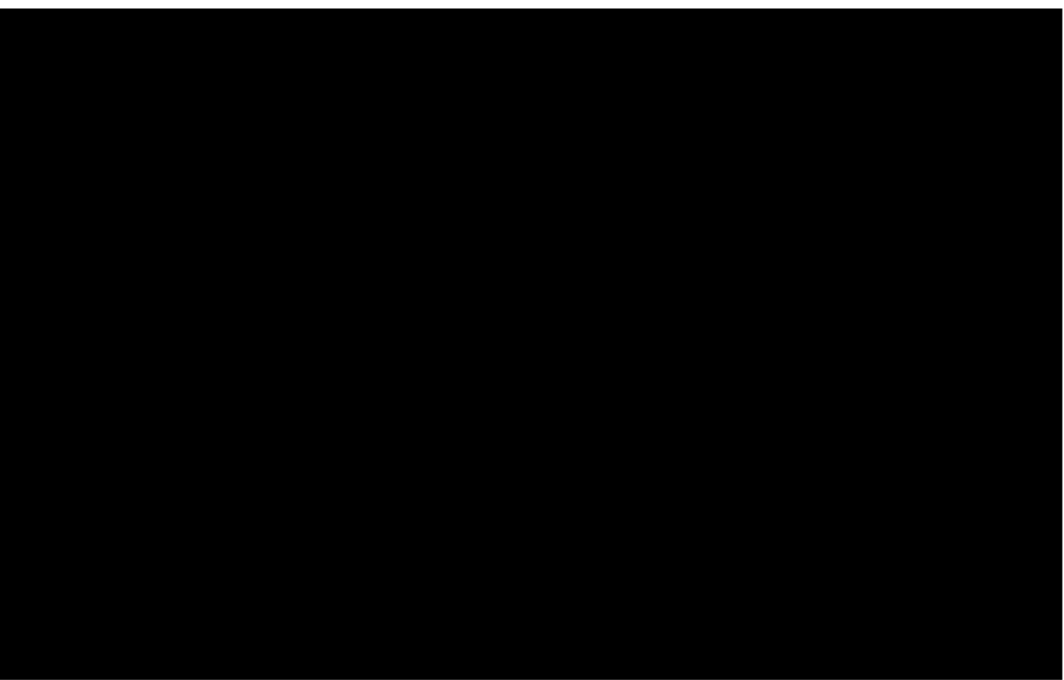


Click on the IDOR8FF title in the Type column.



The user will see this entry screen when accessing the letter. The user enters the data in the custom text box as it should appear in the letter.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.



Preview the letter prior to saving to be sure it looks correct and professional. Once the letter is saved it cannot be edited. If a mistake is found after the user saves it, then a new letter must be created. Be sure to invalidate the incorrect letter.

Reminder: This letter is not to be used as a substitute for the GenTax required letters such as the Initiation or Completion letters.

Do not use this letter to confirm conversations with the taxpayer concerning proprietary information. An example would be the following: at the conclusion of a plant tour, do not use this form to detail your understanding of the taxpayers manufacturing operation. This information should be placed in a private memo generated outside of GenTax.

c) EDA-70, Information Document Request

Whenever an IDOR8FF is sent out as a second request letter, an EDA-70 must be completed and sent with that second request. The EDA-70 can be accessed on the Department's Intranet, under Work Areas, Audit, Forms. This EDA-70 is a savable, fill-in pdf.

d) Form IL-941

A completed and signed Form IL-941 is needed for any nonfiled period. This should be accomplished by the taxpayer preparing its own IL-941(s). However, there are cases in which the auditor will prepare the IL-941(s) – see (2) below.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(1) IL-941 prepared by taxpayer: If no withholding information has been received concerning the taxpayer's taxable wages, the auditor must request the taxpayer to prepare, sign, and submit its own Form IL-941(s) for the missing quarter(s).

(2) IL-941 prepared by auditor: If withholding information has been provided concerning the taxpayer's taxable wages, the auditor will need to figure the quarterly compensation and liability for the nonfiled periods by using that provided information. Based on the quarterly calculations, the auditor needs to prepare Form IL-941 for the missing quarters for the taxpayer to sign. These auditor prepared 941s are only sent with the second request letter, and never with an initiation letter.

NOTE: Form IL-941 is available on the IDOR web site (www.tax.illinois.gov). A copy of each Form IL-941 prepared by the auditor will be needed for the audit file, while a copy of each would be sent to the taxpayer with the second request letter (if applicable).

Once the taxpayer has been sent the initiation letter, two scenarios could result:

(a) The taxpayer submits signed IL-941s for the nonfiled periods.
(b) The taxpayer does not submit signed IL-941s for the nonfiled periods.

NOTE: If the taxpayer submits IL-941s, the IL-941s must be signed. If not signed, then the IDR-916, Signature Declaration, must be issued to the taxpayer. The IDR-916 can be found on the Department's website at www.tax.illinois.gov under Forms, Other.

Each scenario is handled differently as follows:

(a) If the taxpayer submitted signed IL-941s:

- Verify that the taxpayer is properly reporting the withholding due against any information available.
- RAS Review prior to issuing the EDA-143CA
- An EDA-143CA, Notice of Audit Results, must be completed and sent to the taxpayer.
- See Exhibit G – How to Create the EDA-143 Audit Results Letters.

NOTE: If the taxpayer returns the signed IDR-916 (Signature Declaration) in a timely manner, it is considered the signature for the IL-941s and the above procedure can be followed.

(b) If the taxpayer does not submit signed IL-941s or return the IDR-916 in a timely manner, after being provided by the auditor, for the nonfiled periods:

- Create the WIT Audit Working Paper.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- See Exhibit B – How to create the Working Papers. Follow the instructions for nonfiler or skip filer audits.

- Create “the Computation of tax, penalty and interest” letter.
- See Exhibit C – How to create the Computation of tax, penalty and interest letter.

- Create the IL-1904, Results of Withholding Audit.
- See Exhibit D – How to create the IL-1904.
- Create the EDA-27, Explanation of Adjustments.
  - See Exhibit H – GenTax EDA-27 Example, and
  - Exhibit I – How to create the EDA-27

  The EDA-27 will be completed in and generated through GenTax.

- Create the EDA-122, WIT/IIT Notice of Prop Defcy must be completed.
- See Exhibit E – How to create the EDA-122.

  - ICB forms (EDA-122, 123, 124 or 125, whichever is applicable) will be issued for all audits unless the taxpayer has provided the auditor with signed returns. In the case of a WIT audit, the EDA-122 will be utilized.

    NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the “Audit Submission and Review” section of that chapter.

    Supervisors must review all audits prior to the issuance of the ICB forms to ensure that appropriate documentation exists to support the auditor’s positions and to ensure significant audit issues are not missed by the auditor. Any discrepancy with the auditor’s proposal will require that the supervisor discuss further issue development, removal of an issue or request additional documentation be obtained to support the issue. ICB forms cannot be issued until these items are addressed.

    i. Prior to Issuance of ICB forms: The entire audit should be prepared and submitted to supervisor for review. The auditor will notify the RAS that the audit is ready for the RAS Review. The supervisor must agree with the established audit issues.

       Supervisors must make sure all necessary documentation request forms have been utilized prior to issuing the ICB forms. The Informal Conference Board should not be the forum for which an auditor attempts to secure additional documentation for the audit.

    ii. Audit agreement after issuance of ICB forms: If the taxpayer agrees with the audit results after the issuance of the ICB forms and prior to the expiration of the 60 days allowed, they must provide their agreement to

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. the auditor in writing by using the new ICB waiver form. In those instances, the auditor should issue the EDA-143 Notice of Audit Results letter with the IL-870 within 5 days of such notification.

The following items will be mailed to the taxpayer if properly signed IL-941s are not submitted by the taxpayer for the nonfiled periods:

- Computation of tax, penalty and interest for each year in the tax period
- IL-1904, Results of Withholding Audit
- EDA-122, Notice of Proposed Deficiency
- EDA- 27, Explanation of Adjustments

Once mailed to the taxpayer, the taxpayer has 60 days to respond and could respond back in several ways as follows:

(i) The taxpayer submits IL-941s. Follow the procedures above.

(ii) If the taxpayer sends in a signed ICB Waiver or the taxpayer requests an IL-870 within the ICB period (This request must be in writing). Prepare and send the following correspondence to the taxpayer:

- Update the penalty and interest calculation on the WIT Audit Working Paper
- Create "the Computation of tax, penalty and interest" letter. See Exhibit C.
- Create the IL-1904, Results of Withholding Audit. See Exhibit D.
- Create the IL-870, Waiver of Restrictions.
  - See Exhibit F – How to Create the IL-870.
- Create the EDA-143I, Results – IL-870 Information. See Exhibit G.

(iii) The taxpayer pays the amount on the EDA-122 within the ICB period. Prepare and send the following correspondence to the taxpayer:

- Create the IL-870, Waiver of Restrictions, for a signature. See Exhibit F. (In this case DO NOT RECALCULATE penalty and interest as the IL-870 will need to agree with the payment amount shown due on the EDA-122.)
- Create the EDA-143I, Results – IL-870 Information. See Exhibit G.

(iv) The taxpayer does not respond within the ICB period, prepare and send the following correspondence to the taxpayer:

- Update the penalty and interest calculation on the WIT Audit Working Paper
- Create "the Computation of tax, penalty and interest" letter. See Exhibit C.
- Create the IL-1904, Results of Withholding Audit. See Exhibit D.
- Create the IL-870, Waiver of Restrictions. See Exhibit F.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- Create the EDA-143I, Results – IL-870 Information. See Exhibit G.

2. Monthly or Semi-Weekly Audit Procedures

NOTE: After tax year 2016, semi-weekly audits are no longer done.

a) Initiation Letter

An audit initiation letter (EDA-135 Audit Initiation) must be completed for all Withholding Tax audits and sent to the taxpayer. This letter is required.

The audit initiation letter is systemically generated from GenTax when the RAS assigns the audit to the auditor [stage – assigned started]. Letters print in the overnight batch process in Springfield and get mailed directly from the mailroom. If there is an issue with the taxpayer's address, the auditor will need to invalidate the audit initiation letter and manually create a new one. The new letter will batch print from Springfield.

- See Exhibit A – How to Create the EDA-135.
  Note: If a second Initiation letter needs to be sent, refer to these instructions.

(1) If the taxpayer responds to the initiation letter with completed schedules:

(a) If the quarterly withholding tax matches the IL-941s filed:

- Create the WIT Audit Working Paper.
  - See Exhibit B – How to create the Working Papers. Follow the instructions for monthly or semi-weekly audits.

- Create "the Computation of tax, penalty and interest" letter.
  - See Exhibit C – How to create the Computation of tax, penalty and interest letter.
- Create the EDA-27, Explanation of Adjustments.
  - See Exhibit H – Gentax EDA-27 Example, and
  - Example I – How to create the EDA-27

  The EDA-27 will be completed in and generated through GenTax.

- Create the Audit Notice of P&I WIT (EDA-150WA) available in GenTax.
  - See Exhibit M – EDA-150WA.

  Since no additional tax is assessed, penalty and interest is deemed assessed, therefore the EDA-150WA is needed. An IL-870 is not issued to the taxpayer in this case. Two copies of the EDA-150WA will be needed, one for the audit file and one for the taxpayer.

- Create the IDOR-8-FF. See above on how to generate the IDOR-8-FF. Needs sent with the EDA-150.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Also, an EDA-143I will need to be generated in GenTax to set the indicator. However, this 143I will not be sent to the taxpayer.
See Exhibit G on the EDA-143 series.

NOTE: The taxpayer does not get ICB rights as no additional tax is being assessed.

(b) If the quarterly withholding tax does not match the IL-941s filed:

- Correspond with the taxpayer to secure amended returns for any discrepancies in their reporting.
- Once resolved, proceed with the procedure for matching withholding tax above.

(2) If the taxpayer does not respond to the initiation letter with completed schedules:

- A second request letter (IDOR8FF) will be sent after 30 days. See Section C.1.b above for more information on the IDOR8FF. An EDA-70 will also be sent with the second request. See Section C.1.c above.
- Create the WIT Audit Working Paper. See Exhibit B – How to create the Working Papers. Follow the instructions for monthly or semi-weekly audits.
- Create "the Computation of tax, penalty and interest" letter. See Exhibit C – How to create the Computation of tax, penalty and interest letter.
- Create the EDA-27, Explanation of Adjustments. See Exhibit H – GenTax EDA-27 Example, and Example I – How to create the EDA-27. This form will be completed in and generated through GenTax. The auditor will need two copies of the EDA-27, one for the audit file and one for the taxpayer.
- Create the Audit Notice of P&I WIT (EDA-150WA) available in GenTax. See Exhibit M – EDA-150WA. Since no additional tax is assessed, penalty and interest is deemed assessed, therefore the EDA-150WA is needed. An IL-870 is not issued to the taxpayer in this case. Two copies of the EDA-150WA will be needed, one for the audit file and one for the taxpayer.
- Create the IDOR-8-FF. Needs to be sent with the EDA-150. Also, an EDA-143I will need to be generated in GenTax to set the indicator. However, this 143I will not be sent to the taxpayer. See Exhibit G on the EDA-143 series.

NOTE: The taxpayer does not get ICB rights as no additional tax is being assessed.

The taxpayer must respond with payment within 30 days of the issue date of the Notice and Demand. Taxpayer's response could be as follows:

a) The taxpayer provides payment for the Notice and Demand amount. In doing so, the taxpayer is agreeing to the audit, and the audit will be closed as "AP".

b) The taxpayer does not respond. In this case the audit will be closed as "AL".

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

3. Federal RAR Audit Procedures

Changes presented through a federal Revenue Auditor's Report (RAR) may warrant a withholding audit on the RAR adjustment(s). These federal changes could be 3402 or 3509 adjustments, or a combination of adjustments. Dependent upon which type of adjustment has been made different information will be requested from the taxpayer.

Important Note: If there is a combination of 3402 and 3509 adjustments together, separate audit tracks must be set up, as these two issues cannot be processed on the same track. An SC-137 will be completed for a second audit track. Two WIT audits would be needed for that particular taxpayer to address these adjustments separately, as there will be two different penalties – 10% for tax already paid and 15% when tax is due. Exception: If the taxpayer has filed returns, establishing a second audit would not be necessary to address these adjustments (can be accomplished within one track).

- 3402 adjustments consist of: (1) a federal nonfiler or (2) an increase in federal taxable wages (under reporters). The 886A may need to be requested, which shows what adjustments were made.
  - A federal nonfiler – original IL-941s need to be filed. May need to compare the federal Form 941 returns to any IL-941s provided.
  - Under reporters – includes "fringe benefits" not properly reported as income. Fringe benefits may include: phones, cars, gift cards, concert tickets, bonuses, etc. May need a break down of fringe benefits affecting Illinois employees. IL-941-Xs may need to be filed.

- 3509 adjustments consist of: mis-classification of independent contractors, or subchapter S-corporation officers per federal adjustment, are reclassified as employees.
  - Reclassified employees – request SSNs, copies of 1099s. May also need information on the wage adjustment, or a copy of the federal Form1040 returns for these employees.
    Generally, these workers should have reported this income on their IL-1040 returns. Since no additional tax would be required, only penalty and interest would apply. The penalty is 10%, while the interest would be calculated through the April 15 filing date of the next year.
    If these workers did not report this income, the auditor would issue letters to the employer. In such case, the penalty is 15%, while the interest would be calculated through the letter issued date (not April 15).

a) IRS Documentation

IRS documentation provides necessary information for RAR audits. When utilizing this documentation, it is important to realize the following:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Form 4666, Summary of Employment Tax Examination, may provide in the "Other Information" comment section the reasons for reclassifying workers as employees.

b) Initiation Letter

An audit initiation letter (EDA-135 Audit Initiation) must be completed for all Withholding Tax audits and sent to the taxpayer. This letter is required.

The audit initiation letter is systemically generated from GenTax when the RAS assigns the audit to the auditor [stage – assigned started]. Letters print in the overnight batch process in Springfield and get mailed directly from the mailroom. If there is an issue with the taxpayer's address, the auditor will need to invalidate the audit initiation letter and manually create a new one. The new letter will batch print from Springfield.

- See Exhibit A – How to Create the EDA-135.
  Note: If a second Initiation letter needs to be sent, refer to these instructions.

Dependent on the type of adjustment(s) made, the following may need to be prepared. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit flow process. See the "Audit Submission and Review" section in that chapter.

- Workpaper for the audit needs to be completed.
  - See Exhibit B – How to create the Working Papers. Follow the instructions for nonfiler or skip filer audits, and RAR audits.

Note: "Type of Audit" on the working paper will be dependent on the RAR adjustment. For nonfilers and reclassification of workers, the "type" should be "WIT Q Referral". For under reporters, the "type" should be "Fed Rev Agents Report". See specific instructions within Exhibit B on working papers.

- The Computation of tax, penalty and interest letter will be completed.
  - See Exhibit C – How to create the Computation of tax, penalty and interest letter.

- The EDA-122, WIT/IIT Notice of Prop Defcy must be completed.
  - See Exhibit E – How to create the EDA-122.
  - Read the information pertaining to ICB forms in Section 1. (Nonfiler or Skip Filer Audit Procedures) above.

- The Audit Notice of P&I WIT (EDA-150WA) available in GenTax.
  - See Exhibit M – EDA-150WA.

  Since no additional tax is assessed, penalty and interest is deemed assessed, therefore the EDA-150WA is needed. An IL-870 is not issued to

- IDOR-8-FF will need to be sent with the EDA-150.

Also, an EDA-143I will need to be generated in GenTax to set the indicator. However, this 143I will not be sent to the taxpayer.
See Exhibit G on the EDA-143 series.

(1) The following items will be sent to the taxpayer for an adjustment that creates additional tax:

- The Initiation Letter
- Second Request letter (if applicable), along with an EDA-70. See Section C.1.b above on the IDOR8FF and Section C.1.c above on the EDA-70.
- Computation of tax, penalty and interest for each year in the tax period
- EDA-122, WIT/IIT Notice of Proposed Deficiency

If the taxpayer agrees with the audit results, the following must be performed in order to complete the audit process:
- The penalty and interest on the workpaper must be updated. This can be done by opening the workpaper and clicking CALC PNI. This will update the interest through the current date.
- IL-1904, Results of Withholding Audit must be completed. See Exhibit D.
- IL-870, Waiver of Restrictions. See Exhibit F. (The auditor will need to recalculate the penalty and interest, if the IL-870 is being prepared more than one week after the workpapers are prepared.)
- EDA-143I, Results – IL-870 Information. See Exhibit G.

The taxpayer will then be issued a copy of each of the following:
- Results of Withholding Audit (IL-1904)
- Waiver of Restrictions (IL-870)
- Results- IL-870 Information (EDA-143I).

(2) The following items will be sent to the taxpayer for an adjustment that only warrants penalty and interest, no additional tax:

- The Initiation Letter
- Second Request letter (if applicable) with any computation worksheet, along with an EDA-70. See Section C.1.b above on the IDOR8FF and Section C.1.c above on the EDA-70.
- Computation of tax, penalty and interest for each year in the tax period
- EDA-150WA, Audit Notice of P&I WIT.
- IDOR-8-FF. An EDA-143I will need to be generated in GenTax (but not sent to the taxpayer) to set the indicator.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

4. Amended Return Procedures

There are instances in which amended returns (IL-941-Xs) may be received. The three most common are:

- An amended with no original return on file
- An amended with an estimated return
- An amended for claim

The procedures for addressing these returns will vary dependent of the particular taxpayer and any information available on that taxpayer.

D. Amnesty Issues in WIT Audits

There are two issues concerning Amnesty that the auditor should be aware of during a WIT audit.

- When using the GenTax P&I calculator for the 2009 tax year, the calculator does not correctly calculate the second quarter for Amnesty double penalty and interest. The calculation for this quarter must be done manually.

- For RAR audit, if the finalization date falls after November 8, 2010 (the last payment date of the 2010 Amnesty Program), Amnesty P&I does not apply unless the taxpayer was a nonfiler.

E. Taxable Commuter Reimbursement as Wages for TY 2015

Prior to 2016, employers who offered commuter benefits (Illinois Transit Benefit - mass transit/vanpool expenses) to their employees that exceeded the $130 per month limit on tax-free benefits, treated the excess as taxable wages on which withholding was due and would report those wages as taxable on the employees' W-2s.

With the passage of PL 114-113 (in 2016), the tax-free benefits limit was increased to $250 for the period from January 1, 2015 through December 31, 2015 (effectively retroactive). Due to this increase, the employers should have adjusted their reporting of taxable wages, but because the legislation was not signed until 2016, such adjustment was not possible for the 2015 tax year. Concerning these commuter benefits, excess may have been withheld for these employees in 2015.

Since these benefits are not subject to federal income tax or to Illinois income tax (State follows the federal determination), there may be an impact on audits for the 2015 tax year. This benefits change would most likely increase overpayments on returns filed since additional tax would have been withheld on income that has since become non-taxable (the increase in benefits from $130 to $250).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Note: Per this legislation, the applicable statutory monthly limit for 2016 will be $255 per month.

F. Completing the Withholding Audit

In response to the issuance of an IL-870, the taxpayer may:

- sign the IL-870 and pay the amount due
- sign the IL-870 without paying
- not sign the IL-870 but pay the amount due
- ignore the information sent and do nothing. In such a case, if the taxpayer fails to respond to the IL-870 after 45 days, the auditor closes the audit and submits it to the supervisor for review.

How the taxpayer responds determines how the working paper is completed for audit closure.

1. Agreed Audits

- In cases when the taxpayer pays the amount due, whether or not the taxpayer signs the IL-870, the audit is agreed paid (AP).
- If the IL-870 is signed, then the date it is signed will be the statute date that will be entered on the working paper in GenTax.
- If the IL-870 is not signed, then the statute date entered on the working paper in GenTax will be the date the payment was received (envelope date).

The Audit working paper should then be updated based on this information so that the audit can be prepared for closure. The following needs to be performed to change the working paper for an agreed liability.

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. Unagreed Audits

In cases where the audit is unagreed, the IL-870 issued date will be entered as the statute date on the working papers. (See the above screen for adding the statute date). The liability would remain marked as "unagreed liability" and not changed.

3. Closing Letters – Audit Completion Letters (EDA-143 series)

The Audit Completion letter sets the Audit Completion Indicator. The date in the Indicator is used to calculate the UPIA 5 penalties at 20% on additional tax due after an audit has been completed. Without the Indicator the UPIA 5 penalties cannot be calculated correctly. Therefore, all audits must have an Audit Completion Letter (generated through GenTax) sent to set this indicator.

There are several closing letters available in the EDA-143 series dependent on the auditor's needs for withholding audits. These letters are:

- EDA-143CA, Results- Return Approv
- EDA-143I, Results- IL-870 Information
- EDA-143NC, Results- No Liability

Utilization of the EDA-143 has been previously discussed within the audit procedures.

- See Exhibit G – How to Create the EDA-143 Audit Results Letters.

Dependent on the type of WIT audit performed, the documentation required may vary.

- EDA-51 WIT – Withholding Audit Index
  This index provides the listing of documentation that may be utilized in a WIT audit. An EDA-51 WIT should be completed and used as a directory of the documents within the audit. See Exhibit L – Withholding Audit Index (EDA-51 WIT).

    - The EDA-51 WIT Audit Index is available on the Intra-net under Work Areas, Audit, Forms, Income Tax. This EDA-51 is a fill-in pdf, which is savable and printable.

VIII. Exhibits – WIT Audit Procedures

Print as needed to mail, if necessary. (Be Green).

NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the "Audit Submission and Review" section of that chapter.

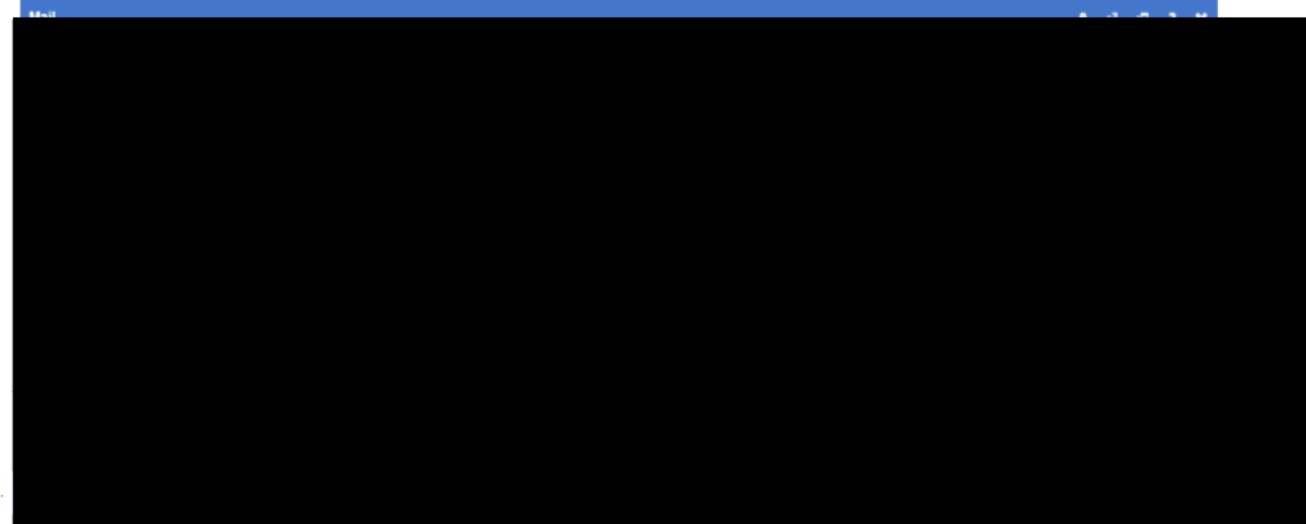
The audit initiation letter is systemically generated from GenTax when the RAS assigns the audit to the auditor [stage – assigned started]. Letters print in the overnight batch process in Springfield and get mailed directly from the mailroom. If there is an issue with the taxpayer's address, the auditor will need to invalidate the audit initiation letter and manually create a new one. The new letter will batch print from Springfield.

A. Exhibit A - How to Create the EDA-135

Note: If a second Initiation letter needs to be sent, refer to these instructions.

When in the Audit View of the audit needing the initiation letter sent, click on the CRM Tab, then the Letters sub-tab. Then to generate the letter, click on "Add".

Click the EDA-135 title in the Type column and complete the initiation letter.



The Audit Initiation Letter screen opens. By clicking on "Quick View" the letter can be reviewed before saving [click on the "Save" button to save this letter].

Invalidating a Letter

To invalidate a letter, open the initiation letter that was just created, by clicking on the letter ID hyper-link under Letter ID.

By clicking on “Next”, a drop-down box opens and to invalidate the letter click on “Mark as Not Valid”.

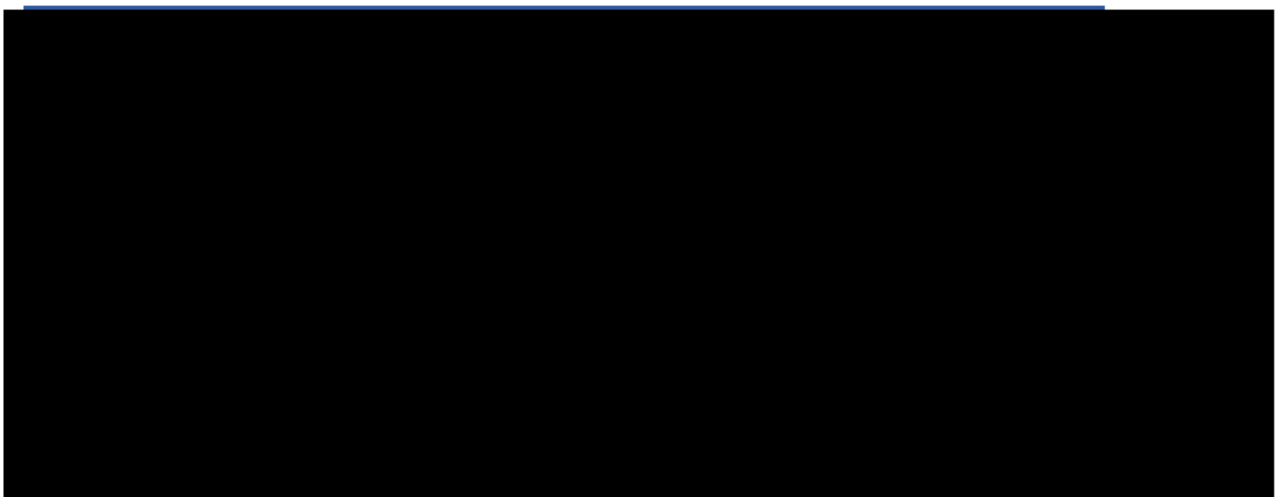
Following the save, the auditor will need to click Calc PNI. The penalty and interest amounts will be added to the audit workpaper.



2. Monthly or Semi-weekly Audits

NOTE: After tax year 2016, semi-weekly audits are no longer done.

First, the auditor will need to complete Working Papers for the audit. A separate workpaper will be needed for each year in the audit. In the Audit View, click on the Working Papers sub-tab under the Audit Tab. Click on Add to add a working paper.

This screen will pull all of the audit periods. Click on the first audit period (3/31/06).

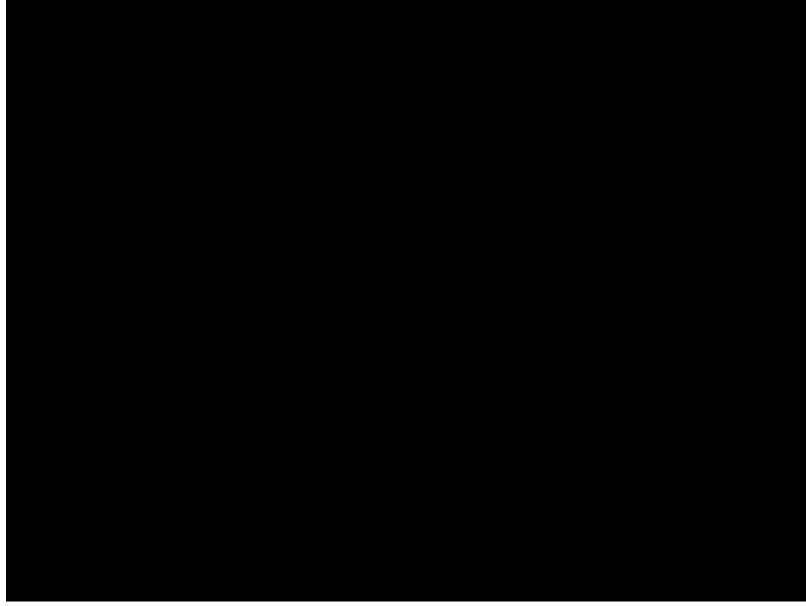
Select the first period of the year for the working paper that is needed. If more than one year in the audit the auditor would need to select the first quarter of each year to complete the working paper for that year.

Select the working paper type, by clicking on the appropriate choice for that particular audit (see screen below).



Both monthly and semi-weekly audits will be an agreed liability as there will be no tax change, only penalty and interest will be assessed. Example - the Semi Wkly Wp screen below. All quarters of the year must have the boxes checked before the working paper is completed.

NOTE: After tax year 2016, semi-weekly audits are no longer done. The below information in a) is being left in this chapter for its historical value.

a) For semi-weekly audits, click on the Semi-Weekly Compliance Q1 tab to begin. Each quarter will have to be opened and completed for each year in the audit.

Complete the Amount Withheld column by entering the Illinois tax liability on the dates the amounts were withheld per the taxpayer's records. (Tax is considered withheld the day the employee is issued a paycheck.) This has to be completed for each quarter in which the taxpayer has withheld Illinois tax.

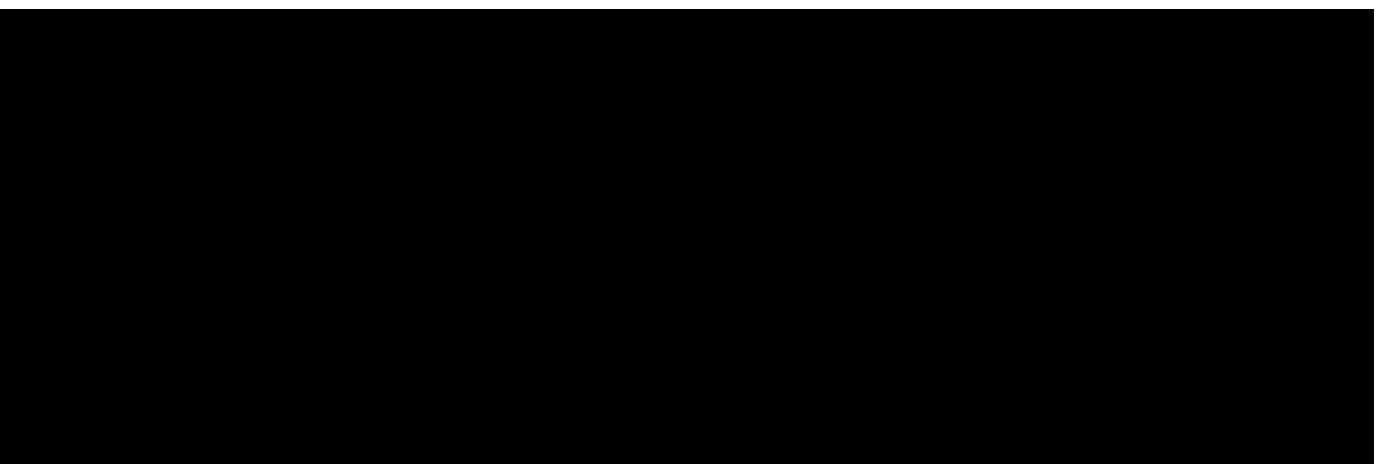
Repeat for each quarter that has data to be completed (click on the Q2, Q3 and Q4 tab for each entry), and enter the tax liability on the dates the tax was withheld. It should be noted that the total tax amounts for each quarter need to match the tax that is reported on the IL-941s for each quarter.



Once the quarters are completed, click on the Main Tab. Check that the figures are correct, then click Save.

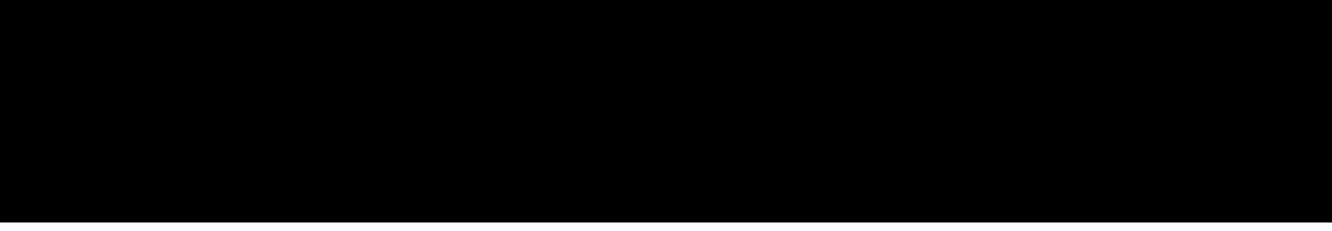
Following the save, the auditor will need to click Calc PNI. When Calc PNI is selected the system will pull all of the payment dates and will properly calculate the penalty and interest for the workpaper.



b) For monthly (Qrt Monthly) audits, the working paper screen is designed differently (than the semi-weekly) as the compliance grid allows for all months to be entered on a single grid. Click on the Quarter Monthly Compliance Grid Tab to open.

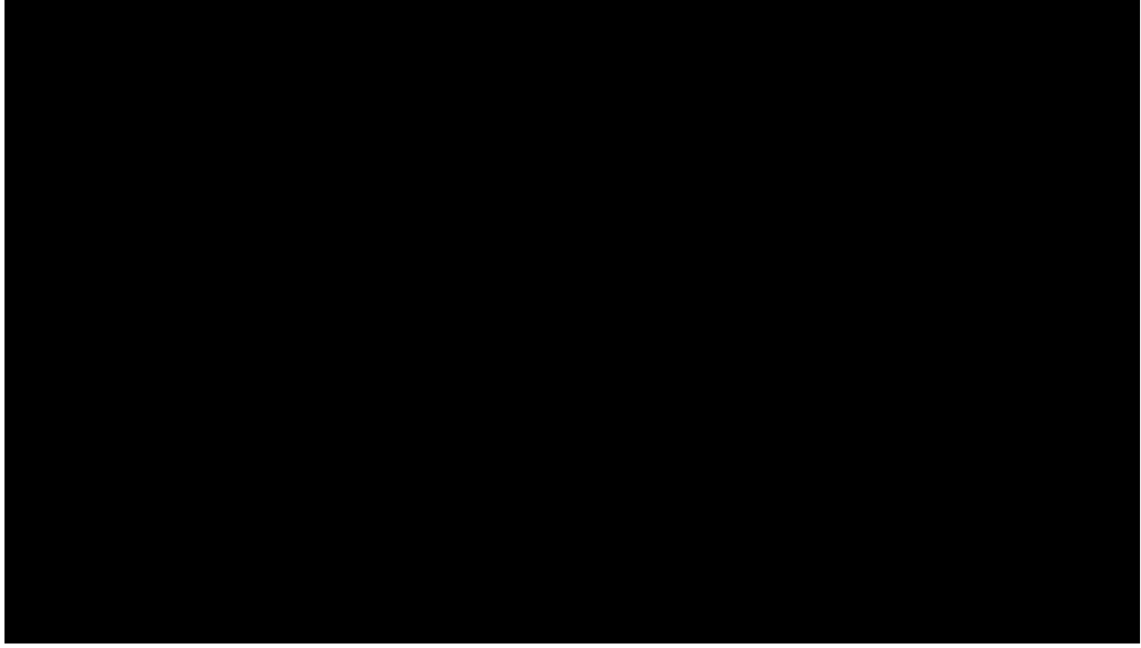
Enter the Amount Withheld for all of the applicable months (January through December). Only January and February are shown on this screen print.



Once amounts have been entered, click on the Main Tab. Check that the figures are correct, then click Save.

Following the save, the auditor will need to click Calc PNI. When Calc PNI is selected the system will pull all of the payment dates and will properly calculate the penalty and interest for the workpaper.

G. Exhibit G – How to Create the EDA-143 Audit Results Letters

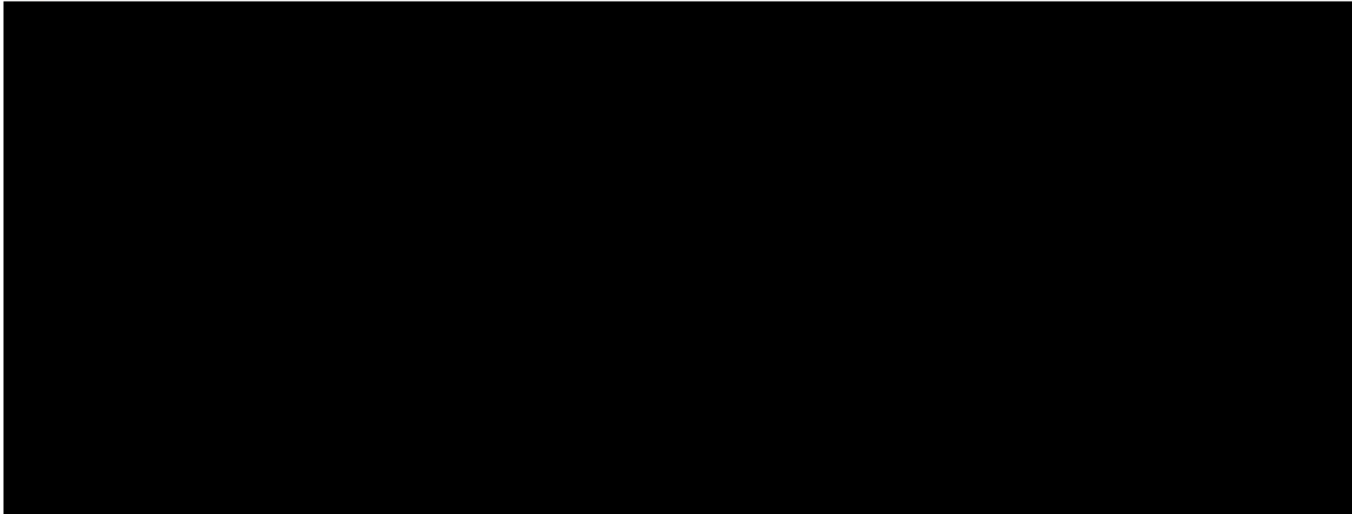
There are several closing letters available in the EDA-143 series dependent on the auditors' needs for withholding audits. These letters are:

- EDA-143CA, Results- Return Approval
- EDA-143I, Results- IL-870 Information
- EDA-143NC, Results- No Liability

All of these closing letters can be accessed as follows:

Click on the Letters sub-tab under the CRM Tab in the Audit View, then click on Add to access the letters.

Choose the appropriate letter by clicking on the letter title in the Type column.



The following screen instructions apply to any of the EDA-143 series letters. However, the EDA-143CA may require additional information input, refer to Audit Manual Chapter 20, Exhibit K for complete details on the completion of the EDA-143CA.

The Input screen opens. Once applicable information has been entered (Completion/Issuance Date is a required entry), click Save.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Two copies of the EDA-143 will be needed, one electronic for the audit file and one paper for the taxpayer.

Each type of EDA-143 letter will be addressed individually as to the proper use.

1. EDA-143CA, Results Return Approval

The EDA-143CA allows for an audit that contains both original and amended returns. Since this letter will summarize the results of multiple years in many instances, it is important to have the details about each year readily available when generating the letter.

NOTE: It is important that this letter (EDA-143CA) NOT be issued until the audit findings are finalized. The issuance of this "results" letter or any of the other "results" letters sets indicators and transactions which can impact the taxpayer's account.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. EDA-143I, Results – IL-870 Information

The EDA-143I is used when issuing an IL-870, Waiver of Restrictions. Also used just to set the indicator (in such a case, the EDA-143I would not be sent out to the taxpayer).

3. EDA-143NC, Results – No Liability

The EDA-143NC is used for audits in which no liability has been assessed.

N. Exhibit N – Employee vs. Independent Contractor Questionnaire

Illinois Department of Revenue

Employee vs. Independent Contractor Questionnaire:

The purpose of this document request is to obtain information for the determination as to whether workers are employees or independent contractors. Mistakenly classifying an employee as an independent contractor can result in significant fines and penalties. The IRS has established 20 factors that are helpful in determining an employer-employee relationship. The Illinois Department of Revenue has based this questionnaire on those same 20 factors. Copies of any documentation supporting answers to these questions, especially including any agreement between the worker and the employer, should be provided when responding back to the below questions.

1. Profit or loss. Can the worker make a profit (other than the wages that would ordinarily accrue to an employee) or suffer a loss as a result of the work?
2. Investment. Does the worker have an investment in the equipment and facilities used to do the work?
3. Works for more than one firm. Does the person work for more than one company at a time?
4. Services offered to the general public. Does the worker offer the same services to the general public?
5. Instructions. Is the worker given instructions about when, where and how to do the work?
   Who determines such work assignments – “employer” or worker?
   Does the “employer” have control over all of the factors concerning the work/job?
6. Training. Is training provided for the worker to do the job in a particular manner as determined by the “employer”?
7. Integration. Are the worker’s services so important to the business that they have become a necessary part of that business?
8. Services rendered personally. Must the worker provide the services personally, as opposed to delegating tasks to someone else?
9. Hiring assistants. Who is responsible for the hiring, supervising and paying of the worker’s assistants?

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of the manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

10. Continuing relationship. In there an ongoing relationship between the worker and the business that hired this worker?
    Does the worker receive benefits, such as insurance, pension, or paid leave?

11. Work hours. Who is responsible for setting the worker's hours?

12. Full-time work. Must the worker spend all of his/her working time on this company's job only?

13. Work done on premises. Must the individual work on the business premises, or is the work route or location where the work must be performed controlled by the business/employer?

14. Sequence. Is the worker dictated to as to the order in which services are performed?

15. Reports. Must the worker provide reports accounting for his/her actions on a job?

16. Pay Schedules. Is the worker paid by the hour, week or month?
    Are Federal and State taxes withheld from the worker's paycheck?
    Is a W-2 or Form 1099 issued to the worker?

17. Expenses. Does the worker pay for his/her own business or travel costs?

18. Tools and materials. Is the worker provided with the equipment, tools or materials needed to perform the job/work?

19. Right to terminate (fire). Can the worker be terminated without violating a contract?

20. Worker's right to quit. Can the worker quit at any time, without incurring liability or violating a contract?

III. GENERAL INFORMATION

Public Act 76-261 established the Illinois Income Tax Act (IITA) effective August 1, 1969. IITA Article 2 Section 201(a) imposes the tax. Individual Income Tax is calculated by multiplying Illinois net income by a flat rate per IITA § 201(b). Tax rates imposed on individual income have varied since the conception of the Illinois Income Tax on August 1, 1969. Rates from prior years to current are represented in the following chart.

Date	Public Act	Years Affected	Tax Rate
August 1, 1969	PA 76-261	8/1/69 to 12/31/82	2.5%
July 1, 1983	PA 83-014	1/1/83 to 6/30/84	3.0% - temporary
September 19, 1985	PA 84-604	7/1/84 to 6/30/89	2.5%
July 5, 1989/ July 1, 1991	PA 86-018/ PA 87-017	7/1/89 to 6/30/91 7/1/91 to 7/1/93	3.0% - temporary/ extended
July 1, 1993	PA 88-089	7/1/93 to 12/31/10	3.0% - permanent
January 13, 2011	PA 96-1496	1/1/11 to 12/31/14 1/1/15 to 12/31/24	5.0% - temporary 3.75% - temporary
July 6, 2017	PA 100-022	1/1/15 to 6/30/17 7/1/17	3.75% 4.95%

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. Generally, IIT audits are conducted in-house and are limited scope audits. Many IIT audits are:

- selected as a result of audits performed on pass-through entities, either for compliance or adjustments to pass-through income, credits, and deductions.
- based around the major issue of residency. Some audits are selected because a compliance check on the pass-through entity suggests that a “nonresident” partner of the entity may actually be a resident and need to file appropriately.
- selected for audit because of special projects, such as “high net earners”.
- referred by Sales Tax.
- referred by the Individual Processing Division, the most common being nonresident taxpayers claiming a federal net operating loss.

- Throughout the chapter this “bullet style” has been used to indicate when an Exhibit should be reviewed at the end of the chapter. Exhibits have been hyperlinked.

IV. APE SPECIFIC LAW APPLICATIONS

A. RETURN DUE DATE

The annual Individual Income Tax return (Form IL-1040) is required to be filed on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the taxable year. Ref: IITA § 505(a)(2) and 86 IAC § 100.5000(a)(1). For calendar year filers, the due date will be April 15. For audit purposes, the federal Form 1040 and Form IL-1040 must be compared and verified as to the filing of either calendar year or fiscal year ending.

- 86 IAC § 100.5000(e)(4) provides that, if the federal due date for a return has been extended by the IRS because of natural disaster, holiday, etc., no late filing penalty will apply to a taxpayer who files his or her equivalent Illinois return by the extended federal due date. 86 IAC § 100.6000 provides that, if the federal due date for payment is extended by the IRS because of natural disaster, holiday, etc., the due date for payment of the equivalent Illinois tax receives a similar extension.

B. POSTMARK DATE

The general statutory rule is that the postmark date establishes the legal filing date for an item of mail passing through the U.S. Postal Service. Ref: 5 ILCS 70/1.25. If the due date for any return, other report, or payment falls on Saturday, Sunday, or a holiday, filing by the next business day is deemed to be timely for those documents submitted either through mail or in person. Ref: 86 IAC § 100.5000(b).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

[Note – Rubloff CB Machesney, LLC v. World Novelties, Inc., 363 Ill.App.3d 558, 844 N.E.2d 462 (2nd Dist. 2006) held that Section 1.11 of the Statute on Statutes applies only to determining the end of a period (such as the 60-day period to file a protest) and not when the due date is a specific date. 86 IAC § 100.5000(b) has been amended to delete the provision based on the Statute on Statutes and to piggyback on the IRC, which deems filing by the next business day to be timely, rather than changing the due date). This difference in rules has no effect on timeliness of a return filed on April 17 when April 15 is a Saturday but has the consequence that a six-month extension of the filing date will start on April 15, rather than April 17.]

C. EXTENSION FOR FILING

All taxpayers are automatically granted an extension of six months (seven months for corporations) to file their Illinois income tax return (except the IL-941) without requesting it or submitting an application for extension. Ref: IITA § 505(a)(2) and 86 IAC § 100.5020(b).

- This directly impacts the way the statute of limitation dates are calculated for the issuance of a Notice of Deficiency or the filing of a claim for refund. For purposes of issuing a Notice of Deficiency or filing a Claim for Refund, the time a return is deemed filed, if filed before the extended due date, is the last day of the automatic extension period. Ref: 86 IAC §§ 100.9320(h) and 100.9410(e).

Note: An extension to file a return does not grant an extension to pay if a tax liability exists. Ref: 86 IAC § 100.5020(a).

D. PAYMENT DATE FOR TAX OWED

Payment for tax owed is required on the original return due date of April 15 or the next business day if the 15th falls on a weekend or holiday for calendar year filers. Fiscal filers would pay on the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of their taxable year.

- If the taxpayer decides to utilize the automatic extension, payment of the tax owed must be submitted with Form IL-505-I, Automatic Extension Payment for Individuals, by the original filing due date in order to avoid penalty and interest on tax not paid timely. Ref: IITA § 602(a) and (b).

E. STATUTE DATES

For audit purposes, knowing the correct due date of a return is important when determining the statute of limitations. Due dates and extensions generally affect the statute of limitations for issuing a Notice and Demand, Notice of Deficiency, or the filing of a claim for refund, and the filing of liens.

Refer to Chapter 21 for additional information on statute dates.

F. EXTENSION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

The statute of limitation date should be identified at the beginning of an audit and is crucial so that the audit may be successfully completed and processed before the statute closes. Extending the statute of limitations by waiver (Form IL-872) is a vital part of proper audit procedures.

Form IL-872 is normally used to extend the statute of limitation for the issuance of a Notice of Deficiency for a year or years involved in an audit. Under IITA § 905(f), a Notice of Deficiency may be issued at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon on Form IL-872. Both the taxpayer and the Department, prior to the expiration of the previous statute of limitation, must execute the extension.

Per IITA § 905(f), the IL-872 and ICB-1 are both viable vehicles to honor this statute for extension.

905(f) Extension by agreement. Where, before the expiration of the time prescribed in this section for the issuance of a notice of deficiency, both the Department and the taxpayer shall have consented in writing to its issuance after such time, such notice may be issued at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. In the case of a taxpayer who is a partnership, Subchapter S corporation, or trust and who enters into an agreement with the Department pursuant to this subsection on or after January 1, 2003, a notice of deficiency may be issued to the partners, shareholders, or beneficiaries of the taxpayer at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. Any proposed assessment set forth in the notice, however, shall be limited to the amount of any deficiency resulting under this Act from recomputation of items of income, deduction, credits, or other amounts of the taxpayer that are taken into account by the partner, shareholder, or beneficiary in computing its liability under this Act. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

V. FILER GUIDELINES

A. ILLINOIS RESIDENT

The determination of whether or not an individual is a "resident" of the state of Illinois is important because a resident is taxed on all (100%) of his income, even if it is derived from sources outside of Illinois. If other states are entitled to tax some of the income of an Illinois resident, then that individual may file Schedule CR, Credit for Tax Paid to Other States (discussed later in this chapter).

An Illinois resident must file a Form IL-1040 if:

1) They are required to file a federal income tax return; or

2) They are not required to file a federal return, but Illinois base income on Form IL-1040 is greater than the Illinois exemption allowed.

1. RESIDENCY

Residency can be a complex audit issue, especially in light of the Tyler Cain court case decision [2012 IL App (1st) 112833]. See Audit Manual Chapter 49, Court Cases, for information on residency issues.

The following help to define or explain terms concerning “residency”:

a. IITA § 1501(a)(20) defines the term “resident”. Also see 86 IAC § 100.3020(i).

b. 86 IAC § 100.3020(b) explains residency pertaining to individuals.

c. 86 IAC § 100.3020(c) examines “temporary or transitory” through examples.

Determining Residency

Determining residency requires thorough analysis when the taxpayer has multiple residences, personal accounts, and spends time between different states. The auditor’s job is to determine the taxpayer’s state of residency.

- An auditor can request any relevant evidence to help determine residency. The amount and type of substantiating documentation will be unique to each situation.
    - Some types of supporting evidence may be (but not limited to):
        - voter registration
        - automobile or driver’s license
        - filing status for other states’ tax returns
        - home ownership/rental agreements
        - telephone/utility usage over a period of time
        - organizational membership.
- Taxpayers will often try to claim residency in a state where their tax obligation is lower.

  Example: Issue is stock options. An Illinois resident worked for an Illinois company. After he retired he moved to Florida and cashed out his stock options in the company. The company gave the former employee a W2-C allocating all of the stock option distribution to Florida and none to Illinois.

- o Qualified employee benefit plans, including 401(k) plans, are not taxed by Illinois under IITA § 301(c)(2). A qualified employee benefit plan is defined in IRC §§ 402 through 408. If a plan is qualified, the employee's W-2 will have the code for a qualified retirement plan.

- o Federal law P.L. 104-95 (4 USC 114) limits the power of states to impose income taxation on certain nonresident pension income for amounts received after December 31, 1995. This limitation also impacts income received by a nonresident in the form of distributions from many deferred compensation plans. For example, a deferred compensation plan paid out over at least 10 years is a non-qualified plan under IITA § 301(c)(2) but Illinois cannot tax the distributions per P.L. 104-95. IAC § 100.3120(b)(1).

- o The allocation of distributions to nonresidents which are not covered under P.L. 104-95, including severance pay and stock options, are governed by IAC §100.3120(b)(1). Where compensation is paid to a nonresident for past service, such compensation will be presumed to have been earned ratably over the employee's last 5 years of service with the employer. Severance and stock options earned over the last 5 years of employment are taxed based on the residency over the last 5 years. If the taxpayer worked in Illinois the last 5 years, no matter where they move, the severance and stock options are taxable to Illinois. If they moved for 3 years and were in Illinois for 2 years, the payout is allocated appropriately. Residency at payout is not a factor.

- Some taxpayers will file "zero" returns with Illinois to start the Statute of Limitations.

See 86 IAC § 100.3020(f) – presumption of residence, and 100.3020(g) – proof of residence or nonresidence for guidance.

2. DOMICILE

Closely tied to residency is domicile. Domicile is the other important factor in determining whether an individual is a resident or nonresident of Illinois. See 86 IAC § 100.3020(d) for an in-depth definition of "domicile".

- Military personnel will continue to be domiciled in Illinois even if their assignment to duty is in other states for long periods of time. Ref: 86 IAC § 100.3020(h).

- Often, individuals who leave Illinois during winter months ("snow birds"), students studying out-of-state, individuals working in a foreign nation, and military personnel stationed out-of-state incorrectly file as part-year or nonresidents. These are generally temporary absences, where their domicile remains in Illinois and they have not abandoned it and intend to return.

- The instructions to Form IL-1040 state:

  You are an Illinois resident if you were domiciled in Illinois for the entire tax year. Your domicile is the place where you reside and the place where you intend to return after temporary absences. Temporary absences may include duty in the U.S. Armed Forces, residence in a foreign country, out-of-state residence as a student, or out-of-state residence during the winter or summer.

- A taxpayer, regardless of the number of homes owned, may only have one domicile. This is the place that the taxpayer ultimately considers “home” and to which he or she intends to return.

  - A taxpayer loses his Illinois domicile by:

    1) locating elsewhere with the intention of establishing the new location as his domicile and
    2) abandoning any intention to return to Illinois.

a) Thomas E Brew, Jr. v. Commissioner of Revenue

The Massachusetts court case, Thomas E Brew, Jr. v. Commissioner of Revenue (8/24/10), is illustrative of what auditors may encounter concerning domicile. An excerpt follows:

> The taxpayer (petitioner) had maintained his domicile in Massachusetts for many years, with only a short stay in Washington, D. C. working for the IRS. He was offered a job with Florida and accepted, with the idea that he would commute for a while and eventually relocate with his family. The family had owned rental property in Florida but sold it except for a condominium where the taxpayer stayed while in Florida. His employer agreed to allow him to commute until his child graduated from high school. He stayed in his minimally furnished condominium while in Florida and returned on average every other weekend and holidays to Massachusetts.
> There was detailed information on his social life in Massachusetts, but little in Florida. He had a Florida driver’s license and had registered there to vote but conducted most financial matters from and listed his primary address as Massachusetts. A critical piece of the case was that the couple expanded one of their Massachusetts homes and the taxpayer waived relocation benefits to continue to receive travel reimbursement.

Noting that a domicile, once established, continues until abandoned (and a new one acquired), the board determined that the taxpayer did not intend to abandon his Massachusetts domicile, and was domiciled in Massachusetts, not Florida.

This decision is consistent with a longstanding legal position concerning domicile in Illinois from an Illinois Supreme Court decision, Holt v. Hendee (1911):

> [I]n order to effect a change of domicile, there must be an actual abandonment of the first domicile coupled with an intention not to return to it, and there must be a new domicile acquired by actual residence within another jurisdiction coupled with the intention of making the last acquired residence a permanent home. In order to bring about a change of residence, it is necessary that there be not only an intention to change the residence, but the change must actually be made by abandoning the old and permanently locating in the new place of residence.

In addition to court cases (see Audit Manual Chapter 49), there are also many Administrative Hearing decisions, General Information Letters, and Private Letter Rulings concerning residency questions (e.g. IT 10-02, IT 09-08, 09-0042-GIL, 08-0026-GIL) available at http://tax.illinois.gov/LegalInformation/index.htm.

b) How to Determine a Taxpayer did not Abandon Their Domicile

Overseas/Foreign Employment: at issue is when a taxpayer is either a non-filer or files as a nonresident. Auditor needs to ask the taxpayer for:

- A copy of their employer's General Employment Policy (agreement) covering extended overseas/foreign employment (exceeding one year). Items that the auditor may need to look for in the "agreement":
  - The employer (company) does not help the employee establish foreign residency
  - The employer (company) tells the employee to retain their home residency in Illinois
  - The employer (company) strongly encourages the employee not to sell their home due to tax consequences (capital gains)
  - The employer (company) strongly encourages the employee to take vacations back to the US (Illinois) to maintain a balanced life
  - The employer (company) strongly encourages the employee not to purchase a home in the foreign country

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- A copy of the Letter of Understanding (contract) for that taxpayer.

Taxpayers with employment contracts with a specified return date or contract time (3 years, or 18 months, etc.) are Illinois residents. The contract is written for them to return. If the employment contract is open ended or undetermined, the taxpayer can be considered a nonresident of Illinois. Additionally, if the employee is overseas and their company has no intent for them to return, the company does not have to withhold Illinois income tax.

Taxpayers claiming the homestead exemption on their Illinois residence intend to return and are residents.

When assignment time and residency is in question, the auditor can ask for the employment contract, residency questionnaire, and questions such as:

- ✓ Did your family go with you?
- ✓ Did you sell your house or rent it out?
- ✓ If the APE is later than 2013, is the Illinois property owner claiming the homestead exemption?
- ✓ Are they returning to the same employer when they come/came back from overseas?

Note: There appears to be an ongoing issue with some major Illinois companies that have employees that they send overseas. The companies are issuing Illinois W-2s, and when the employee files taxes and wants their withholding back, the company is issuing a corrected W-2. Since many of these taxpayers are Illinois residents, each case should be reviewed to make a residency determination concerning the withholding.

Example #1: The taxpayer was on a 2-3-year assignment in another country. The taxpayer kept their home in Illinois and planned to return. Their company withheld Illinois income (WIT), and the taxpayer is trying to get it refunded back.

Determination was that the taxpayer is an Illinois resident based on (1) their employment contract with a specified contract time, and (2) the fact that they claimed the Illinois homestead exemption on their home. The Illinois tax withheld should not be refunded.

Example #2: Grede Court Case from DuPage County [2013 ILApp(2d) 120731-U] – the taxpayer's original contract was for 2 years in Singapore. There was incentive for that person to stay longer overseas. The judge decided it was an ongoing overseas employment and that the person was a nonresident.

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example #3: The taxpayer worked overseas with an original contract of 18 months, extended 5 more months, then returned to the US (Illinois) working for the same company. He did not sell his house and claimed the Illinois homestead exemption. The taxpayer is not contesting domicile but is contesting residency. It appears that this taxpayer would be considered an Illinois resident.

3. VETERANS BENEFITS AND TRANSITION ACT OF 2018

The federal Veterans Benefits and Transition Act (VBTA) of 2018 expanded upon the protections originally extended by the Military Spouses Residency Relief Act to spouses of military member's effective beginning with the 2009 tax year. The Veterans Benefits and Transition Act of 2018 took effect for tax year 2018. Under this act, the state of residence of a military member's spouse does not change when the spouse accompanies the service member to a military assignment located in another state. Beginning in the tax year 2018, the spouse is also allowed to elect to use the same residence as the military member for purposes of taxation. The election is applicable to the entire tax year of the marriage. An exception would be if both the service member and spouse choose to establish residency in another state.

This legislation provides that the spouse's employee wages will be taxable only by the state of residency rather than by the state in which the service member and spouse are stationed. For this legislation to apply:

- The spouse's income (wages) must be earned in the same state where the couple is being stationed; but
- In the case of a spouse who has elected to use the same residence as the military member for tax purposes, the spouse's income (wages) are not required to be earned in the same state where the service member is stationed.
- The spouse and service member must share the same state of residency.

Example: Captain John Doe and his wife, Jane, are residents of Illinois. When John received military orders to be stationed in North Carolina in 2009, Jane moved with him. Once in North Carolina, Jane started a part-time job at the local pizza parlor in March (2009). Per this new legislation, Jane's wages earned in North Carolina should be taxable by Illinois, not by North Carolina. For tax year 2009, Jane would need to file an income tax return with North Carolina requesting a refund, and then also file an income tax return with Illinois showing the income that she made in North Carolina in order to pay any tax due to Illinois.

Example: Private Jane Doe is a resident of Florida. Jane received orders to be stationed in Illinois in 2016. In April of 2018, Jane marries John, an Illinois resident and college student who works part time for a shipping company. After the wedding, for tax purposes, John elects to use Jane's Florida residency. In November, Jane receives orders to be stationed in Minnesota. John remains in Illinois to finish school. For tax year 2018, John would not file an income tax return in Illinois for the income he made within Illinois because it is only taxable in Florida.

Service Income:
50 US Code 4001 Part C states: Income of a military spouse: Income for services performed by the spouse of a servicemember shall not be deemed to be income for services performed or from sources within a tax jurisdiction of the United States if the spouse is not a resident or domiciliary of the jurisdiction in which the income is earned because the spouse is in the jurisdiction solely to be with the servicemember serving in compliance with military orders.

The Code states income, which includes but is not limited to compensation, for services performed is not taxable. However, if the income is for anything else other than services performed, it is should be taxable.

Example: The spouse of a military service member assigned to Scott AFB is an independent contractor who received compensation for services performed during the year as a home caregiver. This is reported on a 1099-MISC. This would be deductible because the spouse was only in IL as the spouse of military personnel stationed at Scott AFB.

However, if the spouse received a 1099-MISC that reported royalty income (these royalties constitute IL income under IITA § 303), this would be taxable because this has nothing to do with the military assignment and the fact that the spouse was in IL.

a) Schedule MR- Military Spouse Relief

The form Schedule MR, Military Spouse Relief, should be completed and attached to the 2009 Form IL-1040, Individual Income Tax return. Schedule MR was only used for the 2009 tax season.

For nonresidents who are stationed with their military spouse in Illinois, box 1 on the Schedule MR should be checked. The two-letter abbreviation for the couple's state of residency must also be entered.

For residents of Illinois who are stationed with their military spouse in another state, box 2 on the Schedule MR should be checked. When filing a 2009 Form IL-1040 paper return, the taxpayer should write "Military Spouse" in red ink across the top of the Form IL-1040 front page.

b) Form IL-W-5-NR- Employee's Statement of Non-Residence in Illinois

In order for non-residents to receive exemption from Illinois withholding under the Veterans Benefits and Transition Act of 2018 or the Military Spouses Residency Relief Act, the affected spouse must complete Form IL-W-5-NR and file this form with his or her Illinois employer.

For more information concerning Military Personnel, see Publication 102, Illinois Filing Requirements for Military Personnel, at: http://tax.illinois.gov/Publications/Pubs/Pub-102.pdf

B. RECIPROCAL STATE AGREEMENTS

Illinois has a reciprocal agreement with Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, and Wisconsin in which these states do not tax the compensation paid to Illinois residents that work in these states per IITA § 701 and 86 IAC § 100.7090.

Illinois residents who work in Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, or Wisconsin must file the Form IL-1040, as the compensation paid by employers in those states is taxed by the State of Illinois. Note that if the employer withheld state tax from compensation within any of the reciprocal states in error, the Illinois resident should file the correct W-2 form with that state to claim a refund. Tax withheld erroneously by other states cannot be used as a credit on the Illinois return.

> Example: Bill Smith is an Illinois resident, but works for a company in Madison, Wisconsin. Since his employer is aware of the reciprocal state agreement, tax on compensation is correctly withheld as taxed by Illinois and not Wisconsin. John should therefore file the Form IL-1040 with his home state of Illinois.

Residents of Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, or Wisconsin who work in Illinois must file Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR if:

- Income was received in Illinois from sources other than wages, salaries, tips, and commissions; OR
- A refund is desired on any Illinois Income Tax withheld in error.

> Example: Ann Jones is a resident of Iowa, but in January of 2009, she started working for a company in Rock Island, Illinois. Unfortunately, her new employer was not aware of the reciprocal state agreement and had erroneously withheld Illinois tax on Ann's wages in 2009. For that tax year, Ann would need to file Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR for a refund of the Illinois tax withheld.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Based on the reciprocal state agreements, employers in Illinois should not withhold Illinois taxes on these reciprocal state residents per IITA § 302(b). The employees would need to file Form IL-W-5-NR, Employee's Statement of Non-residence in Illinois, with their employer to be exempt from the Illinois Income Tax withholding.

Withholding Issues

It is common for residents of states with reciprocal agreements with Illinois to not complete a Form IL-W-5-NR, or to claim that the employer would only withhold to Illinois. This leads to the taxpayer being taxed on Illinois earnings in their home state without the proper withholding in their resident state.

- Processing requires that the nonresident file an Illinois return with a Schedule NR to get a refund of that withholding.
- An auditor would want to verify that the taxpayer truly is a resident of that reciprocal state, and should request relevant information to substantiate that, such as copies of the Form W-2, resident state tax return, and driver's license.

C. PART-YEAR RESIDENT

The definition for "part-year resident" can be found in IITA § 1501(a)(17). Part-year residency only applies to taxpayers who have moved into Illinois and established domicile during the current tax year or moved out of Illinois and established domicile in another state during the current tax year, and not for temporary or transitory purposes.

Taxpayers often claim to be part-year residents when they are full-year residents. They assume that their absence from Illinois for a period of time classifies them as part-year residents, and they allocate less income to Illinois.

> Example: Some retired taxpayers who spend part of the year in Florida ("snow birds") will file every year as part-year residents. They should actually file as full-year residents every year, because their domicile has not changed, and they are gone for only temporary or transitory purposes and intend to return.

Auditors should always verify the residency status of a taxpayer. One red flag for residency would be noting many consecutive years where the taxpayer has filed as a part-year resident, since abandoning and establishing a new domicile yearly would be unlikely. After a legitimate change in domicile has occurred, it is fair to question residency if it continues to be part-year in subsequent tax years.

Part-year residents must file Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR if:

- Income was earned from any source while an Illinois resident;
- Income from Illinois was earned when not a resident; or
- A refund is desired from any Illinois Income Tax withheld.

As a part-year resident, the rules used to determine Illinois income and tax depend on whether or not the person was an Illinois resident when the income was earned.

- If the person was an Illinois resident when the income was received, 100 percent of the income will be taxed (within certain limitations), regardless of the source of that income.
- If the person was a nonresident when the income was received, only the income received from Illinois sources will be taxed.

D. NONRESIDENTS

Nonresidents must file Form IL-1040 if:

- Enough taxable income was earned from Illinois sources to have a tax liability (i.e., the taxpayer's Illinois base income from Schedule NR is greater than their Illinois exemption allowance on Schedule NR); or
- A refund is desired for any Illinois Income Tax withheld in error.

E. NONRESIDENT ALIEN

Nonresident aliens must file Form IL-1040 if income is taxed under federal income tax law.

U.S. 1040NR or U.S. 1040NR-EZ

When filing Form IL-1040, a completed copy of either the federal Form 1040NR, U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return, or federal Form 1040NR-EZ, U.S. Income Tax Return for Certain Nonresident Aliens with No Dependents, must be attached.

- Returns are due the 15th day of the fourth month after the end of the tax year. For calendar year filers, the due date is April 15th.

- If a nonresident is exempt from income tax and had withholding from wages, he must file a Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR and provide a copy of his complete federal return and tax treaty indicating exempt status to receive a refund of Illinois withholding. Standard Individual Income Tax (IIT) processing procedure will adjust the return and tax the nonresident alien on Illinois W-2 wages and notify him of the adjustment and the support required if he is exempt and wants a refund of withholding.

F. NONRESIDENT PROFESSIONAL ATHLETES

Compensation paid to nonresident professional athletes is covered under IITA § 304(a)(2)(B)(iv), in which "duty days" are utilized in determining the Illinois portion of the total compensation for services performed. Per IITA § 304(a)(2)(B)(iv)(c)(3), the term "duty days" means all days during the taxable year from the beginning of the professional athletic team's official pre-season training period through the last game in which the team competes or is scheduled to compete (except as provided in items (C) and (D) of this same subpart).

The proper calculation of duty days is important in determining the amount of income allocable to Illinois. The number of duty days spent within this State (Illinois) is divided by the total number of duty days spent both within and without this State. This percentage will then be multiplied by the taxpayer's total compensation to determine the portion attributable to Illinois. (Ref: IT 07-0029-GIL).

Example: Joe Ballplayer is a catcher for a Major League Baseball Team located in Illinois. In order to determine the portion of his total compensation to be allocated to Illinois for the 2016 tax year, the following information should be taken into account to determine Illinois duty days and Total duty days. Preseason training camp, which is 45 days long, is always held in Arizona and will be included in the total duty days. Any post season games must also be accounted for, if played. The team that Joe plays for did not make the playoffs in 2016.

The total duty days, including the 45 training camp days, was 230. The Illinois duty days ("the number of duty days spent within this State, performing services for the team") was 125. Joe's total compensation for 2016 was $2,642,354. To calculate the Illinois portion, the number of Illinois duty days is divided by the number of total duty days (125/230 = 54.35%). This percentage is then multiplied by the total compensation to determine the Illinois portion (54.35% X $2,642,354 = $1,436,119.) $1,436,119 would be allocated to Illinois.

Total Duty Days	Illinois Duty Days	Total Yearly Compensation	Illinois Portion Percentage	Illinois Portion of Compensation
230	125	$2,642,354	125/230 = 54.35%	54.35% X $2,642,354 = $1,436,119

VI. PERSONAL INFORMATION

A. SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER

The Social Security numbers (SSNs) must be provided in the order in which they appeared on the federal return. Both filer and spouse SSNs are required even if married filing separate returns. Note that if a taxpayer does not qualify for a SSN and was issued an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) by the IRS, this number should be used in place of the SSN.

If a taxpayer is not registered in GenTax, or the SSN appears to be "invalid" (was not verified by the IRS), a temporary SSN can be assigned in GenTax.

When tracking taxpayer information in GenTax, all married filing jointly and married filing separately taxpayers are linked in GenTax. A link is a reference between two taxpayer records that indicates that the two taxpayers have some type of relationship, such as husband and wife. Payments must be verified under both taxpayers' SSNs utilizing this link.

Taxpayers who do not have a valid SSN are eligible to obtain an Individual Tax Identification Number (ITIN) from the IRS and file using that number. This can be obtained by filing a federal Form W-7. These numbers commonly begin with the number "9" for individuals. Groups that are required to file a federal tax return but are ineligible to obtain an SSN must obtain an ITIN, and then file with that number. If the taxpayer happens to be an illegal alien, he may continue to work under a false name and SSN and continue to receive W-2s under the false identity. Nevertheless, the taxpayer is expected to file federally and with Illinois under the ITIN and name associated with the ITIN. For more information concerning ITINs, visit http://www.irs.gov/ and search "Forms and Publications" for Form W-7.

Note: Per confidentiality guidelines, all "manual" correspondence distributed by the Department should be in the "XXX-XX-1234" format in order to protect the taxpayer's personal information.

B. NAME AND ADDRESS

If married and filing a joint Form IL-1040 return, the names must appear in the order as filed on the federal return. If married and filing separate returns for Illinois tax purposes, the taxpayer's name and the spouse's name are both required on both IL-1040 forms.

Name, address, zip code, and social security numbers provided on the Form IL-1040 should be compared to the federal return for audit purposes. Any discrepancies should be verified by the taxpayer and the corrected information detailed in the audit report.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

C. FILING STATUS

Filing status for the Form IL-1040 may be any of the following:

1) Single or head of household
2) Married filing jointly
3) Married filing separately
4) Widowed

In general, the same filing status that was checked on the federal return should be used on the Form IL-1040 per IITA § 502(c)(1). An exception to this rule is when a joint federal return is filed, and one spouse is a full-year Illinois resident and the other is a part-year resident or a nonresident (e.g., military personnel). Such a couple may choose to file “married filing separately” for Illinois purposes as provided in IITA § 502(c)(3).

Civil Unions

Beginning with the 2011 tax year, a check box was added to the Form IL-1040 for couples in Civil Unions. Complete details for proper return filing are included in the Form IL-1040 instructions, which should be referenced for years 2011 through 2013.

- For tax year 2011, the taxpayer had to file the Form IL-1040 return on paper, rather than electronically.
- For tax years 2012 and 2013, the Form IL-1040 can be filed electronically. Also, for these tax years, Schedule CU, Civil Union Income Report, must be completed and included with the Form IL-1040 when filed.
- For tax years 2014 and forward, the check box and Schedule CU were eliminated. All taxpayers are required to follow the filing status on the federal return.

Public Act 98-0597 (Same-Sex Marriage)

Passage of PA 98-0597 created the Religious Freedom and Marriage Fairness Act, allowing for same-sex marriages. The effective date of this legislation is June 1, 2014. This Act provides for newly instituted same-sex marriages and for conversions of existing civil unions (as of that date) into marriages.

1. INJURED SPOUSE

An injured spouse is a person who could request tax relief when that person was not responsible for the outstanding debt of the other spouse. Outstanding debt could include: past due federal or state income tax, child support, spousal support, or certain federal debts such as student loans.

> Example: John and Jane were married in 2008. The couple both worked for a manufacturing company as accountants. When they filed their joint state income tax return the next spring expecting a refund, the entire refund amount was taken to cover John’s unpaid child support from previous years. Since Jane was not responsible for her husband’s outstanding debt, she applied for injured spouse relief to recover her portion of the 2008 tax refund.

For taxable years ending on or after December 31, 2009, if a joint federal income tax return is filed and there is an injured spouse, separate Illinois returns should be filed using “married filing separately” as the filing status. This election to file separately must be made on or before the return due date (including extensions) and once made is irrevocable for the tax year. If a joint Illinois return is filed, the entire refund may be used to pay the outstanding liability owed by the other spouse.

Civil Unions would be treated the same for Injured Spouse purposes. If one taxpayer has obligations subject to offset (i.e. child support, tax debt, unemployment, etc.) they would need to file separate returns upfront, so that the injured spouse’s portion of the refund isn’t offset. If they file a joint return and the refund is offset to any other agency besides Revenue, they would have to deal with that agency to recover the offset refund.

For taxable years prior to December 31, 2009, the injured spouse needed to comply with the following injured spouse relief requirements.

Injured spouse relief could be applied for if:

1) The taxpayer had filed a joint Form IL-1040 with the spouse for a tax year;
2) The other spouse had unpaid debt which the injured spouse is not legally obligated to pay; and
3) All or a portion of the joint Illinois Individual Income Tax overpayment (refund) may be used to offset the spouse’s unpaid debt.

   - To apply for injured spouse relief for the years prior to December 31, 2009, no special form is provided by the State of Illinois. The injured spouse must file an original Form IL-1040 using the “married filing jointly” filing status and write “Injured Spouse” in red ink across the top of the front page of the Form IL-1040.

     - If injured spouse relief was applied for with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) using federal Form 8379, Injured Spouse Allocation, a copy of that form must be attached to the Form IL-1040.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

- If a joint Illinois return was already filed, and all or a portion of the refund is being offset to satisfy the spouse's unpaid debt, the injured spouse may request a refund of his or her portion of the overpayment by filing Form IL-1040-X, Amended Individual Income Tax return. The injured spouse must show the separate tax liability on the Amended return and write "Injured Spouse" in red ink across the top of the front page.
    - Also required to be attached are: a copy of the joint federal tax return, any W-2 and 1099 forms, and federal Form 8379 (if filed).

2. INNOCENT SPOUSE

Spouses may be entitled to relief from some or all liability of a joint Form IL-1040 return under the Innocent Spouse provision in IITA § 502(c)(4) and 86 IAC § 100.5040. Innocent spouse relief may be requested when a spouse believes that the sole responsibility for paying the tax liability on a joint Form IL-1040 falls on the other spouse.

> Example: During their marriage, Bill was a vice president in a local mining company and his wife, Sue, stayed at home to raise their three children. In 2011 the mining company determined that Bill had been embezzling money from the company during the past two years, 2009 and 2010. This information was turned over to the IRS, which assessed deficiencies against the couple based on the embezzled figures determined by the mining company. For 2009, this amount increased the couple's income by $60,000, and for 2010, by $50,000. Based on this information provided by the IRS, the IDOR also assessed deficiencies for the two years, showing this increase in base income. Since Sue was unaware of her husband's illegal activity, she applied for innocent spouse relief from the entire assessed liability (both federal and state). Ref: IT 01-0004-GIL.

Innocent spouse relief may be applied for if:

1) A joint return was filed with your spouse for a tax year;
2) At the time the return was signed, the innocent spouse was unaware that the other spouse had omitted income, claimed false deductions or credits, or otherwise had prepared an erroneous return; and
3) The innocent spouse believes that the tax liability was the other spouse's sole responsibility.

Starting in tax year 2000, Illinois required the new Form IL-8857, Request for Innocent Spouse Relief, to be completed when applying for innocent spouse relief. To apply for this relief, Form IL-8857, Request for Innocent Spouse Relief, must be completed for each year that relief is being requested.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In addition to IL-8857, the following forms (if applicable) must be provided:

a) A copy of the original federal and Illinois income tax returns;
b) A copy of any amended federal and Illinois income tax returns;
c) A copy of federal Form 8857, Request for Innocent Spouse Relief, if filed with the IRS;
d) Any final determination of the federal or Illinois tax liability that was received from the IRS, Illinois Department of Revenue, or a court of law, including any grant or denial of innocent spouse relief; and
e) Any other supporting documentation that would be helpful in determining eligibility for innocent spouse relief.

There is no time limit for making an innocent spouse claim. However, a refund will only be issued for a tax year if: Form IL-8857 is received within three years after the extended due date of the original Form IL-1040, or three years after the date the original Form IL-1040 was filed, or one year after the Illinois tax was paid, whichever is latest.

VII. FEDERAL INCOME

A. ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME (AGI)

The starting point for determining Illinois personal income tax for resident individuals, nonresident individuals, and part-year residents is federal Adjusted Gross Income (AGI).

LINE 1 ADJUSTMENTS DURING AN AUDIT

During the audit process, an auditor may make the determination that adjustments are necessary to the reported IL-1040 Line 1 figure – Adjusted Gross Income (AGI).

Current audit policy dictates that auditors must submit a request for Illinois Line 1 change approval. This approval must be submitted through the auditor's supervisor, who will then forward the request to the appropriate ADM (field) or DM (in-house). Appropriate supporting documentation must be provided with the Line 1 adjustment request at the time of submission.

When submitting such a request, proper statute control procedures must be followed. Submission of a Line 1 change request needs to be made as early as possible in the audit. If needed, a properly executed IL-872 needs to be on file to support the time required for approval. Reminder: Per Management Expectations, audits are required to be sent to Audit Review with a minimum of four months left on the statute.

Audit changes made based on the federal tape match information are not affected by this new policy. Also, not at issue would be when auditors question federal items that

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. only affect the Illinois items outside of Line 1, such as modifications, apportionment, and credits.

1) The Form IL-1040 Line 1 amount should reconcile to the federal AGI. Any variance in these figures must be researched and explained in the audit report.

    - The auditor should always vouch and verify the AGI reported on the Form IL-1040 with the taxpayer's federal return, regardless of any suspicion of an incorrectly reported AGI. This is critical, since the correctness of tax liability assessed per return or audit depends on the correctness of what is reported on Form IL-1040 Line 1.

2) Only "properly reportable" AGI can be accepted. This may be challenged by an auditor, even if Form IL-1040 Line 1 is the same AGI that was reported federally. See IITA § 203(e)(1).

    The taxpayer may assert (especially in individual audits) that the auditor cannot audit "above" the AGI, that is, the federal income and deductions that lead to the federal AGI. Taxpayers often have a misconception that only the IRS can change federal items, including the AGI, and that the auditor must start with AGI, with a scope limited to state items. However, audit policy now dictates that the approval process as stated above must be followed before any Line 1 adjustments are made.

3) Additionally, if there is a change necessary, but the IRS decided not to act, it does not mean the Department is barred from correcting the return. However, audit policy now dictates that the approval process as stated above must be followed before any Line 1 adjustments are made.

    Example: An individual had sold her lottery winnings and reported it incorrectly to the IRS. The taxpayer's attitude was "well, if the IRS did not change it, then you (IDOR auditor) cannot. ICB concurred that even if the IRS decided not to pursue (collectability, etc.), IDOR auditor could still make changes to correct the return.

4) If an IRS transcript needs to be requested, the taxpayer is able to access account information and get a transcript almost instantly on line. If the auditor does not want to wait through the Department's regular Fed/State disclosure channels, the auditor should present this option to the taxpayer (if that taxpayer is cooperating with the auditor).

B. FEDERAL NET OPERATING LOSS (NOL), Individuals

Note: The following sections on federal/Illinois losses are based on 86 IAC § 100.2410 that became effective on January 12, 2004, although this legislation was retroactive for all tax years.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A taxpayer (individual) may report a Federal NOL occurring that year on Line 1 of the Form IL-1040, and this figure must be shown as a negative amount. However, this amount must be reduced by any NOL that is carried back to prior years.

Generally, for federal income tax purposes, individuals must carry back an NOL 2 years, then carry forward the remaining NOL for up to 20 years.

- Taxpayers may make an election to forego the carry back and just carry forward the loss 20 years as long as the election is made by the extended due date of the return.

- The Federal Job Creation and Worker Assistance Act of 2002 temporarily changed the carry back from 2 years to 5 years for NOL's in tax years 2001 or 2002. Individuals qualified for the benefit of this 5 year carry back since they are allowed to take the federal NOL deduction in computing their Illinois net income.

1. FEDERAL FORM 1045 AND FORM 1040-X

For federal purposes, taxpayers may carry back an NOL by using either Form 1045 or Form 1040-X.

Note: Federal Form 1045 is used by an individual, estate, or trust to apply for a quick tax refund resulting from the carryback of an NOL, the carryback of an unused general business credit, the carryback of a net Section 1256 contracts loss, or an overpayment of tax due to a claim of right adjustment under Section 1341(b)(1).

Form 1045

Form 1045 must be filed within 1 year after the end of the year in which an NOL arose.

Form 1040-X

Taxpayers may file Form 1040-X within 3 years of the due date (or extended due date) of the loss year return.

2. SCHEDULES A AND B OF FEDERAL FORM 1045

Schedule A

Individuals calculate the amount of their federal NOL carrybacks by using Schedule A of federal Form 1045.

Schedule B

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The amount of NOL available to carry to subsequent years is calculated on Schedule B of federal Form 1045 even when a Form 1040-X is used to carry back the loss.

- The amount of loss available to carry to subsequent years is reported on Line 9 of the Schedule B (2000 and subsequent forms) or Line 8 of the Schedule B (1999 and prior forms).
- The amount of NOL used in a particular year is the amount shown on Line 1 of the Schedule B minus the amount available to carry to subsequent years.
- Federal NOL carryforwards are shown as a negative amount on the "Other income" line of the federal Form 1040 (line 21). Form 1040 requires only that a taxpayer attach a schedule showing the computation of the NOL available to carry into the year. These computations can be checked using Schedule B of Form 1045.

Form 1045 Schedule B starts out with adjusted gross income (AGI), minus the itemized deductions, and modified to eliminate items not allowed in the computation of the NOL. In general, the following items are not allowed when figuring an NOL:

- Any deduction for personal exemptions
- Capital losses in excess of capital gains
- The IRC § 1202 exclusion of 50% of the gain from the sale or exchange of qualified small business stock
- Non-business deductions in excess of non-business income
- Net operating loss deduction
- The domestic production activities deduction

Schedule B can be used to figure the modified taxable income for carryback years and the carryover from each of those years. As for carrybacks, in any given tax year, the NOL can only be consumed to the extent of modified taxable income with the excess applied to the next succeeding year.

The computation of the federal NOL can be very complex. IRS Publication 536, Net Operating Losses (NOLs) for Individuals, Estates, and Trusts, provides complete information on NOLs. Find IRS Publication 536 at: www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p536.pdf

3. DETERMINING PRORATED CAPITAL LOSSES FOR FEDERAL & ILLINOIS RETURNS

The federal limitation on capital losses is governed by IRC § 1211. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges, plus (if such losses exceed such gains) the lower of:

1) $3,000 ($1,500 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return), or
2) The excess of such losses over such gains.

Since Illinois follows this same federal limitation of ($3,000) on net capital losses, it is important to properly prorate such capital losses for both federal and Illinois returns, where warranted. The following presents an example of proration for federal determination first and then for the Illinois return.

a) Federal Proration

In determining the prorated losses for Illinois, the Schedule K-1-P amounts (Column A) must be used for the capital gains and losses to calculate the percentages used federally for prorating those losses. Schedule K-1-P Column A lines concerning capital gain or loss are: 16, 17, 18, 26 and 27. Below shows the partner's share taken from Column A for John and Jane Taxpayer (married filing jointly) for the three listed partnerships.

FEDERAL LIMITATION IS ($3000) - TOTAL GAIN $38631 MUST BE OFFSET BY LOSSES - LOSS AMOUNT USED IS ($41631) AS [(41631) = (38631) + (3000)]
PRORATED LOSS CALC FEDERAL	($41631) X 0.9215 = ($38364)	($41631) X 0.0785 = ($3267)	($193) USED 100%

1) The taxpayers get to use 100% of the ($193) in short term loss for GHI LLC. Only the long-term losses for both ABC LLC and DEF LTD are partially used and must be prorated.

2) To calculate this proration, the loss percentage must be determined. The total short and long-term loss is ($145,611). However, of that total amount, ($193) is already accounted for – used 100%. That leaves ($145,418) to be accounted for [145,611 – 193 = 145,418]. The loss % for the other two partnerships is figured as follows:

a) ABC LLC: ($134,006) ÷ ($145,418) = 0.9215
b) DEF LTD: ($11,412) ÷ ($145,418) = 0.0785

3) In determining the total short/long term gain amount of $38,631, the short-term gains and losses are netted first yielding $35,816, which is then added with the long-term gains [$1,290 and $1,525]. This total gain amount, $38,631 must be offset by losses, and losses are used to generate the ($3,000) net federal capital loss deduction allowed. Therefore, the amount of available loss to be used will be ($41,631). [($41,631) - $38,631 = ($3,000)].

4) The ($41,631) is multiplied by each loss % as follows:

a) ABC LLC: ($41,631) X 0.9215 = ($38,364)
b) DEF LTD: ($41,631) X 0.0785 = ($3,267)

The loss amounts utilized federally should be: ($38,364) for ABC LLC, ($3,267) for DEF LTD and ($193) for GHI LLC.

b) Illinois Proration

The Illinois portion of the losses actually used is then determined by multiplying each loss used by the percentage of that loss sourced to Illinois. The Illinois losses and percentages are:

Partnership	ABC	DEF	GHI
Short-Term Loss
Federal Amount			$193
Illinois Amount			$193
Illinois Percentage			100%
Long-Term Loss
Federal Amount	$134,006	$11,412
Illinois Amount	$23,472	$4,312
Illinois Percentage	23,472 ÷ 134,006 = 17.52%	4,312 ÷ 11,412 = 37.78%

a) ABC LLC: ($38,365) X 0.1752 = ($6,722)
b) DEF LTD: ($3,267) X 0.3778 = ($1,234)

Total Illinois loss used was therefore $8,149 = $193 + $6,722 + $1,234

C. ILLINOIS NOL

Individuals were never allowed Illinois loss carry-backs or carryovers under IITA § 207 because there is no reference to § 203(a) for individuals. However, individuals, resident and nonresident, were always allowed a federal net operating loss if it was allowed in computing adjusted gross income because the Illinois taxable base starts out with federal AGI.

Under IITA § 203(a) and (h), an individual starts the computation of Illinois base income with his or her federal adjusted gross income for the year and makes only the modifications specified. Therefore, the federal net operating loss deduction that goes into the computation of Illinois base income is going to be exactly the amount that is used for federal income tax purposes in that year.

In applying NOLs for federal income tax purposes, the only things that matter are:

1) whether there is sufficient NOL to reduce taxable income to zero and

2) if so, how much NOL remains available to carry to other years.

ILLINOIS DOUBLE DEDUCTION RULE

The IRC contains no definition of how much NOL is actually deducted in a year in which the NOL is great enough to reduce taxable income to zero, and the federal forms contain no place for computing that amount. It is often the case that taxpayers will report to the IRS an NOL deduction as reducing adjusted gross income to zero or even a negative number, and the IRS will make no correction.

- 86 IAC § 100.2410 provides that the amount of NOL deduction actually taken for a taxable year is the amount available for deduction in that year minus the amount available to carry to subsequent years, because IITA § 203(g) prohibits double deductions of the same carryover.

  Example: An individual, resident or nonresident has a federal NOL of $20,000. The taxpayer is a full-year Illinois resident in the carry back year and has reported an AGI of $10,000 and itemized deductions of $6,000; so only $4,000 of the NOL may be used federally in the carry year. For Illinois purposes in the carry year the taxpayer reported $10,000 on the Form IL-1040, Line 1. The taxpayer may reduce his Illinois Line 1 by the same $4,000 amount that was allowed federally. To allow more than the $4,000 could result in a future double deduction not allowed under IITA § 203(g). Ref: 86 IAC § 100.2410(a)(1).

- Under Madison Park Bank v. Zagel, 97 Ill.App.3d 743 (1981), aff'd 91 Ill.2d 231 (1982), the deduction of the same NOL in more than one year is not allowed for Illinois income tax purposes.

D. ILLINOIS NOL CARRYBACKS & CARRYOVERS

Again, since IITA § 207 contains no provision for individual net operating losses, we can only allow a federal NOL in the year that the NOL is used in the computation of federal AGI.

For Illinois purposes the NOL is always shown as a change to federal AGI; it is never shown as a subtraction modification.

- For Illinois residents any federal carryback or carryforward is allowed as an adjustment to AGI on Line 1 of the Form IL-1040-X.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- At the top of the Form IL-1040-X in Step 1 there is a box that the taxpayer checks to indicate there is a federal NOL along with a place for a date on when the federal NOL was accepted.

- If the amended return results in a refund, the taxpayer has two years and 120 days after the federal finalization date to file the Form IL-1040-X.

- Taxpayers are required to attach to their Form IL-1040-X:

  - A copy of the federal Form1040X (or Form 1045)

  - A copy of the notification received from the IRS that they accepted the changes shown on the federal Form 1040X. This notification could be a copy of either a refund check, "Statement of Account" agreement, or judgment order.

  - If some of the NOL carried to the taxable year remains available to carry to the next taxable year, Form 1045 Schedule B (whether or not Form 1045 was filed). Ref: Form IL-1040-X Instructions.

Note: If a taxpayer is a full-year resident during the year, they are allowed to deduct the full amount of an NOL that was deducted federally in the carry year, even if the NOL came from a year in which the taxpayer was a nonresident.

NOL CARRYBACK BREAKDOWN ANALYSIS

When addressing the carryback of losses, it may be necessary to complete a breakdown analysis, especially if dealing with losses reported from multiple entities. The following breakdown for John and Jane Taxpayer will be used in this explanation, which involves the 2010 losses that were carried back to 2008.

NOL Percentage = $4,794,266/$6,319,238 = 75.87% (h)

According to IAC Section 100.2410(b), the Net Operating Loss Deduction can only reduce Illinois income based on the Illinois portion of the loss for the entity and its apportionment to Illinois in the carry back year.

*L PROPERTIES, LLC is a sole proprietorship which did not apportion any Schedule C income to Illinois in 2008.

1) In determining “Losses Reported” in Column (a), these amounts may be found on different forms (i.e. Schedule C, Schedule E, Schedule 4797, etc.) dependent upon the reporting entity. These amounts should be added together for a “Total Loss” amount, in this case $6,319,238. This amount is then entered Column (b) – Total Loss.

2) The “Loss Ratio” in Column (c) is determined by dividing the “Losses Reported” in Column (a) by the “Total Loss” in Column (b). This represents the percentage of the total losses for each entity. Example from above: $4,749/$6,319,238 = 0.08%.

3) The “Total amount of Loss from 2010” is reported in Column (d). The “Allocated NOL” amounts in Column (e) are determined by multiplying the “Losses Reported” in Column (a) by the NOL percentage which is (h) – 75.87% in this example. (h) is calculated by dividing the Allocated NOL [$4,794,266] by the Total NOL reported [$6,319,238].

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

4) The “Illinois Carryback Year (2008) Business Apportionment Factor” in Column (f) will be needed for determining the amount of “Illinois NOL”. This apportionment factor in (f) is multiplied by the “Allocated NOL” in Column (e) to determine the amount of Illinois NOL in Column (g). Example from above: 0.032960 X $4,519,195 = $148,953.

5) All of the Illinois NOL amounts in (g) will then be added together for the total Illinois NOL that is available. In this case, that amount is $157,819.

E. NOLS – APPORTIONMENT

1. RESIDENTS

Under IITA § 301(a), a resident allocates to Illinois “[a]ll items of income or deduction which were taken into account in the computation of base income.”

- The entire NOL deduction allowed to a resident is allocated to Illinois, even if the NOL is from sources outside Illinois and was incurred while the individual was a nonresident.

2. NONRESIDENTS

- Nonresidents allocate and apportion all items of income and deduction according to the facts and circumstances of the year in which the items are taken into account.

- A nonresident must use his or her apportionment factor for the year of the deduction to apportion that deduction, even if he or she was a resident in the year the loss was incurred and even if the apportionment fraction for the year of the deduction is different from the fraction for the year the loss was incurred.

- Nonresidents report a federal NOL on the line for “Other Income” on Schedule NR. This line on the NR is intended to coincide with the “Other Income” line on the federal Form 1040.

    - On an NOL carryover the taxpayer attaches Schedule NR, showing the NOL carryover, to his Form IL-1040.

    - On an NOL carryback, the taxpayer attaches a revised Schedule NR to his Form IL-1040-X.

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. Nonresident Sole Proprietorship, Partnership (or an S Corporation)

1) A loss from a sole proprietorship, partnership or an S corporation is allocated to Illinois to the same extent that business income from that entity is apportioned to Illinois for the carry year. This is the exact opposite of how Illinois net losses are applied under IITA § 207, which expressly provides that those losses are computed after apportionment in the loss year and are applied to reduce income after apportionment in the carryover year.

   Example: A nonresident individual conducts a business as a sole proprietorship. During 2008, the individual apportions 20% of his business income from the proprietorship to Illinois pursuant to IITA § 304(a). In 2010, the business is conducted entirely outside Illinois and has no Illinois apportionment factor. If the individual incurs a net operating loss in 2010 from the sole proprietorship and carries the loss back to 2008, 20% of the loss will be apportioned to Illinois.

2) A nonresident may have losses from one or more business entities doing business in Illinois, which is partially offset by other income. This results in a federal NOL that is less than the business loss incurred by an Illinois business entity. In this case the net federal NOL is allocated among the entities in a prorated manner; then carried back or forward and the deduction is allocated to Illinois based on the extent of Illinois activity in the carry year. Ref: 86 IAC § 100.2410(b)(2).

   Example: In 2002, Taxpayer, a nonresident individual, has $20,000 in federal net losses from Partnership A and $180,000 in net losses from Partnership B. Taxpayer has $100,000 in income from other sources. Taxpayer's adjusted gross income for 2002 is a net operating loss of $100,000. $10,000 of the loss [$100,000 loss, x ($20,000 in Partnership A loss divided by $200,000 in total losses)] is attributed to Partnership A and $90,000 of the loss [$100,000 loss, x ($180,000 in Partnership B loss divided by $200,000 in total losses)] is attributed to Partnership B. Taxpayer carries the entire 2002 loss of $100,000 back to 2000, when Partnership A's Illinois apportionment factor is 30% and Partnership B's apportionment factor is zero. In determining Taxpayer's Illinois net income for 2000, if the entire $100,000 loss deduction is used in that year, the portion of the loss apportioned to Illinois is $3,000, which is 30% of the $10,000 Partnership A loss plus 0% of the Partnership B loss. If only $30,000 of the loss is used in 2000, the Partnership A loss used in the year is $3,000 [$30,000 in losses used, x ($10,000 Partnership A loss divided by $100,000 total loss carried into the year)], and the amount apportioned to Illinois is $900 (30% of $3,000). Ref: 86 IAC § 100.2410(b)(2).

3) The allocation of losses can result in a nonresident's income being less than zero, but in no case can such an amount be carried forward or back under IITA § 207.

   Example: For federal income tax purposes, a nonresident individual has positive adjusted gross income for a taxable year. For that year, the individual has $200,000 in base income from sources outside Illinois and a $20,000 loss, all of which is allocable to Illinois. The individual's Illinois net income for the year is therefore less than zero. Because IITA Section 207 does not apply to individuals, and there is no other provision for carryovers of losses or deductions, the individual may not carry that negative amount over to any other taxable year. Ref: 86 IAC § 100.2410(c)(3).

F. ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS

Schedule A (Form 1040), Itemized Deductions, is an important element when determining the amount of Net Operating Loss (NOL) on Schedule A- NOL (Form 1045), and when figuring the modified taxable income for each carryback year (and any amount to be carried over from those years) on Schedule B- NOL Carryover (Form 1045). For an audit that involves a federal NOL, a potential area of concern should be the proper application of the itemized deductions by the taxpayer (individual).

1. SCHEDULE A- NOL (FORM 1045)

Non-business deductions (line 6) on Schedule A (Form 1045) includes deductions not connected to the taxpayer's trade/business or employment. These deductions include:

- Alimony paid,
- Deductions for contributions to an IRA or a self-employed retirement plan,
- Health savings account deduction,
- Archer MSA deduction,
- The additional exemption amount for providing housing to a Midwestern displaced individual from Form 8914, line 2,
- Most itemized deductions (except for casualty and theft losses, state income tax on business profits, and any employee business expenses), and
- The standard deduction (except the amount of any net disaster loss from Form 4684, line 18a).

Not to be included is the deduction for personal exemptions for the taxpayer, spouse, or any dependents.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. SCHEDULE B- NOL CARRYOVER (FORM 1045)

Adjustments to Itemized Deductions (line 7) on Schedule B (Form 1045) will be used in calculating the modified taxable income (line 9). When modified taxable income is subtracted from the NOL deduction (line 1), the amount of NOL carryover (line 10) is determined.

For a complete examination of Schedule, A and B (Form 1045), see either the instructions for Form 1045, Application for Tentative Refund or Publication 536, Net Operating Losses (NOLs) for Individuals, Estates, and Trusts at: http://www.irs.gov/

G. PASS-THROUGH INCOME ENTITIES

Income (and/or gains, losses, deductions, and credits) passes through from Partnerships, S Corporations, and Trusts or Estates to the individual partners, shareholders, or beneficiaries.

When auditing a return with a federal NOL, it is important to check Schedule A- NOL (Form 1045) line 7, Non-business Income. Included in this figure should be an individual's share of any non-business income passed from partnerships and S Corporations.

For Illinois income tax purposes, partners/shareholders are deemed to have received their entire distributive shares of partnership/S corporation income (loss) on the last day of the partnership's/S corporation's taxable year. A partner/shareholder will be determined to be a resident or a nonresident as of the end of the partner's/shareholder's tax year, in relation to the tax year end of the partnership/S corporation.

If the partnership's/S corporation's tax year end is within the portion of the tax year that the partner/shareholder was a resident, then all income received is taxed based on IITA 301(a). Column B must be completed to provide residents with information needed for the Schedule CR.

If the partnership's/S corporation's tax year end is within the portion of the tax year that the partner/shareholder was not a resident, then all income passed through to the partner/shareholder is taxed only to the extent it is allocated or apportioned to Illinois.

1. PARTNERSHIPS

The income, gains, losses, deductions, and credits of a partnership are passed through to the partners based on each partner's distributive share of these items, which is based on the partnership agreement. This distributive share must be reported on the partner's individual income tax returns (federal and state) regardless of whether or not there was an actual distribution by the partnership. Note that the distributive share of partnership losses is limited to the adjusted basis of the partnership interest at the end of the partnership year in which the loss occurred.

The partner's individual Income Tax return (Federal 1040) should be reflective of the partnership in that:

1) If the partnership had a capital gain, the partner would report the distributive share on Schedule D (Form 1040), Capital Gains and Losses
2) If the partnership had generated operating income, the partner would report their distributive share of this income on Schedule E (Form 1040), Supplemental Income and Loss.
3) A partner would report the distributive share of non-operating income of a partnership (such as interest and dividends) on his Form 1040 as if he had received that income directly rather than through the partnership.

For state return purposes (Form IL-1040), a partner should receive a completed Schedule K-1-P, Partner's or Shareholder's Share of Income, Deductions, Credits, and Recapture, from the partnership. This Schedule K-1-P will show the partner's specific share of each item to be reported on the partner's Individual Income Tax return. A copy of this K-1-P must be attached to the Form IL-1040 when filed.

2. S CORPORATIONS

An S Corporation functions primarily as a conduit for transferring the income (and/or losses, deductions, and credits) directly to the shareholders. The shareholders will then report these items on their Individual Income Tax returns based on that shareholder's percentage of stock ownership (shareholder's pro rata share) for that taxable year.

Note that S Corporation distributions are generally a nontaxable return of the shareholder's basis in the corporation stock. However, in certain cases, part of the distribution may be taxable as a dividend, or as a long-term or short-term capital gain, or both.

For state return purposes (Form IL-1040), a shareholder (individual) should receive a completed Schedule K-1-P, Partner's or Shareholder's Share of Income, Deductions, Credits, and Recapture, from the S Corporation. This Schedule K-1-P will show the shareholder's specific share of each item to be reported on their Individual Income Tax return. A copy of this K-1-P must be attached to their Form IL-1040 when filed.

SCHEDULE D (FORM 1040), CAPITAL GAINS AND LOSSES

When S Corporation distributions to shareholders are recognized as either long-term or short-term capital gains, or both, Schedule D figures will be reported on Line 13 of the Federal 1040. Again, as this amount is included in AGI, an audit review is important in determining proper shareholder pass-through for Illinois tax purposes.

3. TRUSTS OR ESTATES

Income from a trust or estate is often passed on to the beneficiaries who must report this income on their Individual Income Tax returns.

For Form IL-1040, a beneficiary should receive a completed Schedule K-1-T, Beneficiary's Share of Income and Deductions, from the trust or estate. This Schedule K-1-T will show the beneficiary's specific share of each item to be reported on their Individual Income Tax return. A copy of this K-1-T must be attached to their Form IL-1040 when filed.

a) SCHEDULE E (FORM 1040), SUPPLEMENTAL INCOME AND LOSS

The figures compiled on Schedule E will be reported on Line 17 of the Federal 1040 which is included in the AGI total. Since the starting point for Illinois Income Tax determination is AGI, a review of the Schedule E information is important when recognizing any income or loss passed-through from a partnership, S Corporation, Trust, or Estate.

b) SCHEDULE K-1-P OR K-1-T

These schedules reflect the specific share of the partner's, shareholders or beneficiary's income (and/or gains, losses, deductions, and credits) passed through from the partnership, S Corporation, or Trust or Estate. A copy of the K-1-P or K-1-T must be attached to the Form IL-1040 when filed.

4. DISREGARDED ENTITIES AND GRANTOR TRUSTS

a) DISREGARDED ENTITIES

Under Treasury Regulations § 301.7701-2(a), a business entity with a single owner is either classified as a corporation or is disregarded as an entity separate from its owner. 26 CFR 301.7701-2(a). If a business entity is disregarded as an entity separate from its owner, then its activities are treated in the same manner as a sole proprietorship. In such a case, the items of income, gain, loss, and deduction of the disregarded entity are considered the items of the owner, which are taken into account in computing the federal taxable income (Form 1040) of the owner. Unless a single member LLC elects to be treated as a corporation, it is considered a "disregarded entity" by the IRS.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Under IITA § 102 and § 203, the federal treatment of a disregarded entity and its owner applies for Illinois income tax purposes. An entity that is disregarded for federal income tax purposes is disregarded as an entity for Illinois purposes, and the items of base income of the disregarded entity are considered the items of the owner and are taken into account in computing the Illinois base income of the owner. The same treatment extends to the determination of the apportionment factor of the owner of a disregarded entity. The activities of the disregarded entity are considered the activities of the owner for purposes of applying the apportionment provisions of Article 3 of the IITA.

In the case of an individual, as owner of the disregarded entity, sole proprietorship (sole prop) rules would apply. Items of income, gain, loss, and deduction of the disregarded entity should be reported by the owner (individual) on federal Schedule C, Profit or Loss from Business, when filing Form 1040.

> Example: A single individual owned a real estate company (LLC), which is classified as a disregarded entity. When computing his federal taxable income for federal Form 1040, Schedule C would need to be completed to report the items from the LLC, which are considered items of the owner (sole prop). Since the owner is an Illinois resident, the federal application as to the disregarded entity and its owner applies for Illinois income tax purposes.

b) GRANTOR TRUSTS

A Grantor trust is any trust which, under IRC §§ 671-677 and §679, is taxed as if owned in whole or in part by the trust's creator (grantor). The grantor retains certain powers over the trust which includes: power to revoke (amend or terminate) the trust and control over the property inside the trust. With this type of trust, all items of income and deduction are declared through the grantor's Form 1040.

c) SCHEDULE K-1-P AND SCHEDULE K-1-T – DISREGARDED ENTITY OR GRANTOR TRUST

If the partner, shareholder or beneficiary listed in Step 2 on the K-1-P/K-1-T is a Disregarded Entity or Grantor Trust for federal and Illinois income tax purposes, the applicable box on Schedule K-1-P (Line 9b) or Schedule K-1-T (Line 8b) would need to be checked by the disregarded entity, and the name and identification number completed with the taxpayer who is the "responsible reporting party". A copy of this K-1-P/K-1-T should be provided to the named individual (or entity) that would then be responsible for reporting the amounts presented (items of income, gain, loss, etc.). For an individual, these would be reported through his/her individual income tax return.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Note: The above line references for both schedules (K-1-P/K-1-T) are for 2013. The same schedules for previous years may present with different line numbers.

Example: For tax year 2013, Company A issues a K-1-P to Company B. Since Company B is a Disregarded Entity, the K-1-P is passed on to an individual (owner of Company B). To do this, Company B checks the appropriate box (Disregarded Entity), writes in the name and identification number (SSN) of the individual (in Line 9b) and sends it on to that individual, who will then report (on their individual income tax return) the income/loss or claim any payments made on behalf of Company B. In this situation, the taxpayer listed on Step 2, Line 5 of the K-1-P (Company B) would not claim the income/loss/payments since it is a disregarded entity.

For an in-depth examination of pass-through entities, see Audit Manual Chapter 28 - S Corporations, Partnerships, IL-1041 Trusts and Estates, Composite and PTE Returns.

VIII. ADDITION MODIFICATIONS

IITA § 203(a)(2) allows for the modification of AGI by additions and subtractions.

A. FEDERALLY TAX-EXEMPT INCOME
IITA § 203(a)(2)(A)

Any federally tax-exempt interest and dividend income must be added back on line 2 of the Form IL-1040.

The amount of federally tax-exempt interest and dividend income can be vouched from the U.S. 1040 or 1040A, Line 8b, or U.S. 1040EZ. This may be from municipal bonds, a mutual fund, or a regulated investment company. Each payer should send the taxpayer a Form 1099-INT, entering the tax-exempt income in box 8.

Note that any distributive share of federally tax-exempt interest and dividend income received from a partnership, an S corporation, an estate, or a trust is added back on Schedule M, Other Additions and Subtractions for Individuals, Line 2. This amount should be found on the taxpayer's Schedule K-1-P or Schedule K-1-T.

B. ILLINOIS INCOME TAX DEDUCTED IN COMPUTING AGI
IITA § 203(a)(2)(B)

The total amount of any Illinois Income Tax that was deducted from gross income on the federal 1040 must be added back. Because individual Illinois income tax is a federal itemized deduction, this subtraction would be for deductions for replacement taxes of a partnership or S corporation and passed through to the individual.

C. OTHER ADDITIONS TO INCOME

Certain income additions require the completion of Schedule M, Other Additions and Subtractions for Individuals, which correspond to IITA § 203(a)(2)(C) through (D-24). The total of the additions on Schedule M is then carried to Line 3 of the Form IL-1040.

Note: The list of additions on Schedule M can change per tax year, therefore, check each individual tax year for changes.

Per the form IL-1040 return instructions for tax year 2018, a taxpayer would complete Schedule M if they have any of the following items:

- your child's federally tax-exempt interest and dividend income as reported on federal Form 8814
- a distributive share of additions you received from a partnership, S corporation, trust, or estate
- Lloyd's plan of operation loss, if reported on your behalf on Form IL-1065, and included in your adjusted gross income
- earnings distributed from IRC Section 529 college savings and tuition programs and ABLE plans if these earnings are not included in your adjusted gross income, Line 1
- an addition amount calculated on Form IL-4562, Special Depreciation
- business expense recapture (nonresidents only)
- recapture of deductions for contributions to Illinois college savings plans and ABLE plans transferred to an out-of-state plan
- credit received on Schedule 1299-C for student-assistance contributions made as an employer on behalf of your employees
- deductions claimed in prior years for college savings plan and ABLE plan contributions if you made a nonqualified withdrawal this tax year
- A Domestic Production Activities Deduction (DPAD) amount from fiscal-year pass-through entities included on federal Form 1040, Schedule 1, line 36.
- any other amounts that you are required to add to your federal adjusted gross income

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Schedule M must be completed, with any required supporting documents (U.S. Form 8814, Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T, Form IL-1023-C, or Form IL-4562), and must be attached to the Form IL-1040. For more information, click on the Schedule M instructions under the specific current or prior year at http://tax.illinois.gov/taxforms/individual.htm.

Note: PA 100-022 provides for the following addition: for tax years ending on or after December 31, 2017, the Domestic Production Activities Deduction allowed under Section 199 of the Internal Revenue Code must be added back to the adjusted gross income (for individuals).

IX. SUBTRACTION MODIFICATIONS

The Base Income section of the Form IL-1040 allows for subtraction modifications to the total income per IITA § 203(a)(2)(E) through (HH).

A. FEDERALLY TAXED SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS AND CERTAIN RETIREMENT PLANS

Most retirement income may be subtracted if it is included in the Form IL-1040 Line 1 amount. This includes income from:

- qualified employee benefit plans (including railroad retirement and 401(K) plans) and Individual Retirement Accounts or self-employed retirement plans reported on federal Form 1040, Line 4b.
- Social Security and railroad retirement benefits reported on federal Form 1040, Line 5b.
- government retirement and government disability plans and group term life insurance premiums paid by a qualified retirement plan reported as wages on your federal Form 1040, Line 1.
- state or local government deferred compensation plans reported on federal Form 1040, Line 1 or 4b.
- certain capital gains on employer securities reported on federal Form 1040, Schedule 1, Line 13.
- certain retirement payments made directly to retired partners reported on federal Form 1040, Schedule 1, Line 17.

Page 1 of the federal Form 1040 (or 1040A) and any W-2 and 1099 forms are required attachments for these subtractions. The simplest retirement income to verify is IRAs, qualified employee benefit plans, and Social Security reported on Lines 15b, 16b, and

- Retired partners sometimes claim their Form IL-1040 retirement subtraction and only provide a copy of their federal return, which is not sufficient to identify and verify this income. Retired partners must provide, in addition to a copy of page 1 of their federal Form 1040, their Schedule K-1-P, Schedule K-1-T, or any other notification identifying their share of the income received from the partnership, S-Corp, trust, or estate, which includes the payer's name and federal employer identification number (FEIN).

- Reviewing the taxpayer's Schedule E would also be a good idea. The main purpose behind reviewing this subtraction is to make sure that it was included in the taxpayer's subtraction, because taxpayers will often try to subtract all retirement income, whether it was included in their AGI or not. Taxpayers cannot deduct federally tax-exempt retirement that is reported on Lines 15a, 16a, and 20a, since this is already tax-exempt at the state level by not being included in their AGI.

The retirement subtraction is found on Line 5 of Form IL-1040.

PAYMENT OF BENEFITS IN EXCESS OF IRC SECTION 415 LIMITATIONS

IITA § 203(a)(2)(F) permits taxpayers to deduct distributions from retirement plans- including all retirement or disability plans of government agencies- that are included in federal adjusted gross income (AGI). It is the general practice of the Illinois Department of Revenue to disallow the deduction for any distribution that is not reported on a Form 1099-R, "Distributions from Pensions, Annuities, Retirement or Profit-Sharing Plans, IRA's, Insurance Contracts, etc."

However, distributions by the Illinois Teachers Retirement System in excess of IRC Section 415 limitations (Excess Benefit Fund payments) are distributions from a retirement plan of a government agency, regardless of how they are reported. Due to federal law requirements, such benefit payments (distributions) are reported on a Form W-2, "Wage and Tax Statement", rather than on a Form 1099-R. Although reported on a W-2, such distributions are deductible for purposes of the IITA.

These payments from the Excess Benefit Fund should be an allowable deduction from the taxpayer's AGI reported on the Form IL-1040 Line 1. This issue affects taxable years 2007 and subsequent years. Taxpayers must provide copies of their federal return and Form W-2 identifying this income and that it is included in their AGI.

B. ILLINOIS INCOME TAX OVERPAYMENT

The total amount of any Illinois Income Tax overpayment reported as income on the federal Form 1040, Line 10 may be subtracted per IITA § 203(a)(2)(H).

Note that this overpayment amount does not include any refund from other states. These refunds are subtracted on the Schedule M if the tax being refunded was an itemized deduction on the federal return. Also, this subtraction may not be taken if a federal Form 1040A or 1040EZ return was filed.

This subtraction is recorded on Line 6 of Form IL-1040.

C. MILITARY PAY EARNED

Note: For the taxable years 2008 and forward, Military pay earned was moved from the Base Income section of the Form IL-1040 to the Subtraction section of the Schedule M. This subtraction is recorded on IL Schedule M and subsequently on Line 7 of Form IL-1040.

Per IITA § 203(a)(2)(E), for the taxable years ending on or after December 31, 2007, the amount of military pay that was received from the U.S. Armed Forces or the National Guard of any state may be subtracted. For the taxable years ending on or after December 31, 2001, the military pay that could be subtracted was received from the U.S. Armed Forces or the Illinois National Guard.

The following are not allowed to be included in the subtraction:

1) Combat pay that was not included in the AGI on line 1
2) Pay that was received
   - Under the Voluntary Separation Incentive
   - From the military as a civilian
   - Under the Ready Reserve Mobilization Income Insurance Program
   - For duty as an officer in the Public Health Service

The W-2 form showing Military pay must be attached to the Form IL-1040 for the subtraction to be allowed. A common error of taxpayers is to subtract military pay received as a civilian. Auditors should review the W-2 to make sure that it indicates military and not civilian pay. Generally, military W-2s have these characteristics:

  Denver, Colorado — Air Force
  Cleveland, Ohio — Marines and Navy

D. U.S. TREASURY BONDS, BILLS, NOTES, SAVINGS BONDS, AND U.S. AGENCY INTEREST

Note: For the taxable years 2008 and forward, the subtraction for U.S. Treasury bonds, bills, notes, savings bonds, and U.S. agency interest was moved from the Base Income section of the Form IL-1040 to the Subtraction section of the Schedule M.

Income included in Line 1 of the Form IL-1040 that was received from U.S. Treasury bonds, bills, notes, savings bonds, and U.S. agency interest income may be subtracted per 86 IAC § 100.2470(a).

Proper verification attachments for the Form IL-1040 should include (if applicable):

- a copy of the U.S. 1040, Schedule B or U.S. 1040A, Schedule 1
- a copy of any mutual fund statement
- any worksheets that identify U.S. obligation interest.

Note: As of tax year 2009, the federal Schedule 1 is obsolete. All taxpayers will use the Schedule B for both the U.S.1040 and 1040A.

Certain federal interest income is not exempt from Illinois income taxation per 86 IAC § 100.2470(h). This would include:

- income from securities known as GNMA "Pass-Through Securities" or GNMA "Mortgage-Backed Securities"

- income from debentures, notes, and bonds issued by the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA). Also, not exempt is the income received from the holding of Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac) obligations.

1) Subtracting interest from any municipal bond, especially if it is some type of Illinois bond.

   - Only interest from statutorily listed bonds can be subtracted, as seen on Schedule M.
   - Other state municipal bonds cannot be subtracted, nor can most Illinois municipal bonds, unless it is shown on the Schedule M. Since there is no line for unauthorized bonds, the taxpayer often just includes them in the total with a description (e.g. "Other" or "Exempt Bond Interest") and maybe attaches a schedule to identify them.

   Example: Taxpayer claims $5,000 in interest from Illinois municipal bonds on the 2010 Schedule M, but does not identify as shown on Lines 32a-m or 33a-f. Instead, the amount is included on the total line with a description "Bond Interest Subtraction-Schedule 4." On Schedule 4, the following bonds are identified:

O'Hare Revenue Authority	$2,000
CTA Finance Authority	$1,500
Wisconsin Development Finance Authority	$1,000
Illinois Development Finance Authority	$500

   The only statutorily allowable municipal bond to claim (assuming it was added back on Form IL-1040 Line 2) an interest subtraction that is found in Publication 101 and 86 IAC § 100.2470 is $500 from Illinois Development Finance Authority, which should be identified on Schedule M Line 32c, h, or j. The others should be disallowed.

2) Subtracting interest from statutorily allowable bonds that are owned through a mutual fund. While this is allowable for U.S. obligation interest and certain other income exempt from Illinois Income Tax by federal statutes, it is not allowable for income from other statutorily allowable municipal bonds. 86 IAC § 100.2470(f).

   - If the distribution is from a mutual fund, this subtraction deduction can only be the income attributable to U.S. government obligations and other income exempt by federal statutes. These are listed in 86 IAC § 100.2470(b) and (c).

     - If the fund contains only tax-exempt obligations, then the entire distribution may be subtracted.

     - If the mutual fund contains both exempt and non-exempt obligations, only the percentage amount of exempt obligations can be used. This percentage may be provided by the fund or required to be calculated by the taxpayer. The calculation is a fraction comprised of the numerator (fund amount of exempt obligations) and denominator (fund's total investment amount). See 86 IAC § 100.2470(d).

- It is extremely important to verify that exempt income that the taxpayer is trying to subtract was either included in AGI or was added back on Line 2 of the Form IL-1040. Method for computing the subtraction of exempt income is stated in 86 IAC § 100.2470(i).

Example: Taxpayer claims $5,000 on 2010 Schedule M Line 32f, "Illinois Sport Facilities Authority bonds," and attaches a mutual fund statement showing amount invested with the fund, shares owned, the fund's percentage ownership of different bonds, etc. This subtraction should be disallowed because indirect ownership of bonds through a mutual fund does not qualify for the subtraction. The bonds must be directly owned. Do not confuse that with U.S. obligations and other income exempt from Illinois Income Tax by federal statutes that can be owned through a mutual fund.

E. OTHER SUBTRACTIONS TO INCOME

Other items of income are allowable subtractions on the Schedule M. The total of these subtractions from Schedule M is then carried to Line 7 of the Form IL-1040.

Note: Subtraction modifications on Schedule M can change per tax year; therefore, check each individual tax year for changes.

To claim any of the "other" subtractions, the Schedule M must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040. Supporting documents (Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T, Form IL-4562, U.S. 1040 Schedule B, U.S. 1040A Schedule 1, Schedule F, or Schedule 1299-C) may also be required attachments per the Schedule M instructions. For details, click on the Schedule M instructions under the specific current or prior year at:
http://tax.illinois.gov/taxforms/individual.htm

Taxable income as modified from additions and subtractions cannot be less than zero. This amount is the Illinois base income, which is reported on Line 9 of Form IL-1040.

X. EXEMPTIONS

ILLINOIS EXEMPTION ALLOWANCE

The number of exemptions claimed on Form IL-1040 should match the number reported on the federal return (box 6d). The exemption amount has changed throughout the years, which is provided for in IITA § 204(b).

IITA § 204(b) Standard Exemption Basic Amount

For taxable years ending on or after	Basic Exemption Amount – per person
December 31, 1998 and prior to December 31, 1999	$1,300
December 31, 1999 and prior to December 31, 2000	$1,650
December 31, 2000 and prior to December 31, 2012	$2,000
December 31, 2012 and prior to December 31, 2013	$2,050
December 31, 2013 and prior to January 1, 2024	$2,050 plus cost-of-living adjustment [§204(d-5)] – See Note 1 below
For taxable years beginning on or after
January 1, 2017	See Notes 2 and 3 below

Note 1: Based on the provisions under § 204(d-5), for the 2013 tax year, the exemption amount was $2,100. For the 2014 tax year, the amount was $2,125. For the 2015 tax year, the amount was $2,150. For the 2016 and 2017 tax years, the amount was $2,175. For the 2018 tax year, the amount will be $2,225.

Note 2: Changes to Standard Exemption through PA 100-0865:
The standard exemption calculation including the cost-of-living adjustment has been extended to taxable years ending on or before December 31, 2023.

Note 3: Changes to Standard Exemption through PA 100-022:
For tax years beginning on or after January 1, 2017, the personal exemption allowance may not be claimed if the taxpayer's adjusted gross income (AGI) for the taxable year exceeds $500,000 for returns with a federal filing status of married filing jointly, or $250,000 for all other returns. This would also apply to the other exemptions allowed for under IITA Section 204, which includes being age 65 or older, or being legally blind. None of the exemptions under Section 204 can be claimed if the taxpayer(s) are over the AGI limitations for tax years beginning on or after January 1, 2017.

1. AGE 65 OR OLDER

IITA § 204(d)(1)(A) and (B) provide for an additional exemption of $1,000 for a taxpayer or spouse 65 years of age or older.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. LEGALLY BLIND

IITA § 204(d)(2)(A) and (B) provide for an additional exemption of $1,000 for blindness of the taxpayer or spouse.

On Form IL-1040, these exemptions are found on Line 10.

XI. NET INCOME

Net income is defined in IITA § 202 and 86 IAC § 100.2050(a) provides additional language.

A. ILLINOIS RESIDENTS

Net income is determined when the exemption allowance is subtracted from the Illinois base income. For Illinois residents, per IITA § 301(a), all Illinois net income earned by the taxpayer, regardless the source and whether earned within or without Illinois, will be allocated to and taxable by Illinois. The net income amount may not be less than zero.

B. NONRESIDENTS AND PART-YEAR RESIDENTS

On the Form IL-1040, the applicable box for nonresident or part-year resident must be checked, and Schedule NR (Nonresident and Part-Year Resident Computation of Illinois Tax) must be completed and attached. This information is recorded on Line 12 of Form IL-1040.

Schedule NR will be used to determine the income that is taxed by Illinois for that tax year and to calculate Illinois Income Tax (before any recapture of investment credits for tax year 2008 and after). Illinois base income determined on the Schedule NR will be written in the Net Income section of the Form IL-1040 for nonresidents and part-year residents only. This amount may not be less than zero.

SCHEDULE NR COMPLETION

Schedule NR, Nonresident and Part-year Resident Computation of Illinois Tax, must be completed and submitted with the Form IL-1040. Schedule NR is used to determine the income that is taxed by Illinois during the year and to figure the Illinois income tax.

a) Schedule NR Step 3

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

To determine the Illinois portion of the reported federal adjusted gross income (AGI), Step 3 of Schedule NR must be completed by the part-year resident or nonresident.

- Column A is used to report the amounts shown on the federal return.
- Column B is used to report the portion of Column A that is taxed by Illinois (the Illinois portion).

Amounts present on certain lines within Schedule NR Step 3 may need to be examined and verified by the auditor. Note: Line references that follow are for taxable years 2008 and forward. For years prior to 2008, the Schedule NR line numbers may be different.

(1) Line 5, Column B – Illinois portion of wages:

Part-year residents or nonresidents may try to allocate a different amount of wages to Illinois on the Schedule NR than are shown on the Form W-2 and will claim the full amount of Illinois withholding. This is often the case because the taxpayer is claiming that the employer continued to withhold to Illinois after the taxpayer moved to another state.

- The Department generally uses what is shown on the Form W-2 as the correct Illinois wages and withholding. If the Illinois wages and/or withholding are incorrect, the auditor must be provided with a Form W-2C (corrected W-2) or an employer letter on company letterhead stating the correct amount of wages allocable to Illinois. A letter from the taxpayer's tax representative is not acceptable support. If the employer is unwilling or unable to supply the correct information, other proof of the correct amount of Illinois wages may be used.

(2) Line 15 –

This information is reported from federal Form 1040, Line 17, - rents, royalties, partnerships, S corporations, estates, and trusts.

- If income is received from an Illinois partnership or S corporation, that information should be provided on an Illinois Schedule K-1-P, Partner's or Shareholder's Share of Income, Deductions, Credits, and Recapture.

- If income is received from an Illinois estate or trust, that information should be provided on an Illinois Schedule K-1-T, Beneficiary's Share of Income and Deductions.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

(3) Line 17 –

Unemployment compensation, Alaska Permanent Fund dividends, and jury duty pay:
As a nonresident, these were not taxed by Illinois. However, with the passage of PA 97-0709 (effective July 1, 2012), unemployment compensation received from the Illinois Department of Employment Security is now allocable to this state for tax years 2012 and forward, which includes nonresidents receiving this compensation. Alaska Permanent Fund dividends and jury duty pay remain as not taxed by Illinois for nonresidents.

(4) Line 19 –

"Other income", which comes from the federal Form 1040 Other Income line (line number may vary based on year), requires careful scrutiny.

- Illinois Lottery winnings must be allocated to Illinois in Column B whether a part-year or nonresident (even if a resident of a reciprocal state). Other Illinois gambling is allocated to Illinois only if a taxpayer is a part-year resident who receives the income while he or she is a resident, but not if a nonresident.

- The amount received from the sale of Illinois State Lottery installment payments must be allocated to Illinois in Column B for tax years ending on or after December 31, 2013, whether a part-year or nonresident (even if a resident of a reciprocal state), but only amounts received by a part-year resident while he or she is a resident are allocated to Illinois for earlier years.

- Federal net operating losses (NOLs) are also reported on this line. For example, the taxpayer should record on this line a business net operating loss (NOL) from an earlier year that is being carried forward. If the loss was derived from

    - a partnership or an S corporation, the loss is allocated to Illinois to the same extent that business income from that entity is apportioned to Illinois on the Illinois Schedule K-1-P for this year.
    - a business conducted entirely within Illinois, the entire amount is allocated to Illinois.
    - a business conducted inside and outside Illinois, figure the Illinois portion on the IAF Worksheet found in the Schedule NR instructions, and include the amount from Line 3 of the worksheet

For further information on NOLs, refer to the Federal AGI section in this chapter, as well as 86 IAC § 100.2410.

b) Schedule NR Step 4

Once the Illinois portion of the federal adjusted gross income has been calculated, Step 4 of Schedule NR should be completed to determine the Illinois portion of allowed adjustments (both additions and subtractions).

- Column A is used to report the total amounts from Form IL-1040. The taxpayer is required to complete Lines 1 through 10 of the Form IL-1040, as if they were a full-year Illinois resident. Column A total amounts come from these reported Form IL-1040 figures.

- Column B is used to report the Illinois portion of the additions and subtractions. The Schedule NR step-by-step instructions should be followed when figuring each line for the Illinois portion. Instructions provided with Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T will also aid in the completion of this step.

c) Schedule NR Step 5

Step 5 of the Schedule NR will then be completed to determine the Illinois net income and the tax before recapture of investment credits.

- See Exhibit A – Schedule NR – Part-year Resident Example.
- See Exhibit B – Schedule NR – Nonresident Example.

XII. TAX

A. ILLINOIS RESIDENTS

Net income will be multiplied by the tax rate for that taxable year. Tax rates are provided for in IITA § 201(b). Also, see the reference chart in the General Information Section of this chapter.

B. NONRESIDENTS AND PART-YEAR RESIDENTS

Schedule NR is used to determine Illinois Income Tax (before any recapture of investment credits for 2008). The last line of the tax calculation section of the schedule will be the tax amount (before recapture) that will be written on the Form IL-1040 for nonresidents and part-year residents.

C. RECAPTURE OF INVESTMENT TAX CREDITS

If an investment tax credit was claimed in a previous year, and the property considered in the computation of the investment credit was disqualified within 48 months after being placed in service, Schedule 4255, Recapture of Investment Tax Credits, must be completed for the recapture amount to be determined.

The investment tax credits affecting an individual (Form IL-1040) as found on the Schedule 4255 are:

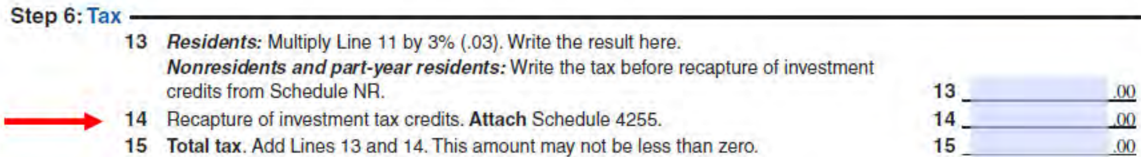
1) The Enterprise Zone or River Edge Redevelopment Zone
2) The High Impact Business
3) The Angel Investment Credit – Note that this recapture applies if the investment is held less than three years. The 48 months as stated above does not apply to this credit.

RECAPTURE OF INVESTMENT TAX CREDITS

Credit	IITA §	IAC §
Enterprise Zone or River Edge Redevelopment Zone	201(f)	100.2110(g)
High Impact Business Investment	201(h)	100.2130(h)
Angel Investment	220(d)	100.2171(e)

1. TAX YEARS 2008 AND FORWARD

The total recapture amount from Schedule 4255 is carried over and entered on the Form IL-1040, Line 14 (recapture of investment tax credits) - no worksheet calculation is required as in previous tax years.



Step 6: Tax

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. TAX YEARS PRIOR TO 2008

The total recapture amount from the Schedule 4255 will be carried to the Schedule 4255 Recapture Worksheet, where the Form IL-1040 tax can be calculated and then moved to the tax line on the Form IL-1040. Below is the worksheet as taken from the 2007 Form IL-1040 instructions:

Schedule 4255 Recapture Worksheet

Write the amount from Schedule 4255:

1	Step 4, Line 16, Column A.	1 _________|____
2	Step 4, Line 16, Column B.	2 _________|____
3	Illinois residents - Multiply Form IL-1040, Line 13, by 3% (.03). Nonresidents or part-year residents- Write Schedule NR, Line 56.	3 _________|____
4	Add Lines 1, 2, and 3. Write here and on Form IL-1040, Line 15.	4 _________|____

Attach Schedule 4255 (not this worksheet).

The appropriate Recapture worksheet can be found in the instructions of Form IL-1040 for each applicable year. Note that both the Schedule 4255 and the worksheet are year specific as to the line numbers. Whenever recapture of these investment credits is calculated, each year should be addressed with the appropriate Schedule 4255 and worksheet, if required.

Schedule 4255, Recapture of Investment Tax Credits, must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040. The worksheet must be completed but is not a required attachment.

XIII. TAX AFTER NONREFUNDABLE CREDITS

For tax years 2008 and after, credits have been divided into two sections- nonrefundable and refundable credits. The nonrefundable credits are as follows:

A. CREDIT FOR INCOME TAX PAID TO OTHER STATES

Residents and part-year residents who pay income tax on income both in Illinois and another state or states can claim a credit against this “double-taxed income.” Nonresidents may not claim this credit. IITA § 601(b)(3) provides the basis for this credit.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

86 IAC § 100.2197(b) addresses the definitions needed for the credit.

- The qualified tax for this credit must be "imposed upon or measured by income" which is paid by an Illinois resident (or part-year resident during the taxpayer's Illinois residency) and paid to another state on income which is also subject to Illinois income tax.

- The qualified income that is included in the other state's tax base must be part of Illinois base income according to IITA § 203.

- The other states may be any state of the U. S., Puerto Rico, any U.S. territory or possession, Washington D. C., or any political subdivision of the aforementioned. "State" does not mean any foreign nation or a political subdivision of that country. That distinction is important because sometimes taxpayers do try to claim the Schedule CR credit on foreign-taxed income.

1. SCHEDULE CR, CREDIT FOR TAX PAID TO OTHER STATES

The Schedule CR form guides the taxpayer in the amounts to consider in determining the eligible credit. This credit is the most complex in calculating, especially if the taxpayer is taxed by multiple states, has multiple components of income and deductions, and/or is only a part-year resident.

The auditor will find it useful to review 86 IAC § 100.2197, Publication 111 that provides the equivalency chart for the specific year/states in question, and the Schedule CR form and instructions for that specific tax year.

2. SCHEDULE CR, 2009 AND FORWARD

The format of the Schedule CR changed significantly for years 2009 and forward. For those years, the limit on the credit is equal to the Illinois tax multiplied by a fraction equal to the taxpayer's base income that would be sourced to other states if all states used Illinois' allocation and apportionment rules, divided by total base income. How much income is actually sourced to other states using their allocation and apportionment rules is totally irrelevant. The form is set up similarly to the Schedule NR, where there are two columns; lines are identified for each federal and Illinois income and deduction component as they appear on each respective return.

- Column A represents the income from all sources received by the taxpayer while he or she was a resident. For full-year residents, Column A, Step 2 will match the federal return.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- Column B represents the portion of Column A income earned outside of Illinois during the period he or she was a resident, determined using Illinois allocation and apportionment rules.

One recurring problem taxpayers have is with the sourcing of employee compensation. For employees providing services in multiple states, Illinois sources all employee compensation to one state, usually the state in which the employee's base of operations is located. For residents, this is usually in the state of residence, so that none of the employee compensation should be included in Column B. However, many taxpayers will include employee compensation in Column B if it is taxed by another state, even though that is incorrect. A similar problem occurs with gambling winnings (other than state lottery winnings), which Illinois sources to the state of residence. This means that none of the winnings should be included in Column B even when they are from another state's casino and the other state taxes them.

- See Exhibit C – How to Complete Schedule CR – 2010 Example

3. SCHEDULE CR, 2008 AND PRIOR

For tax years prior to 2009, the limit on the credit is equal to the Illinois tax multiplied by a fraction equal to the taxpayer's base income that is taxed by both Illinois and another state, divided by the total base income. This determination is extremely complicated and requires careful attention to the Publication 111 for the taxable year. Also, employee compensation again has special treatment for most periods:

Tax Years Beginning 1/1/06

86 IAC § 100.2197(b)(4), which addresses compensation, marked a major change in calculating the Schedule CR credit. Beginning 1/1/06, compensation paid in this state which is received by a resident and double-taxed can be considered for the Schedule CR credit.

Tax Years Prior to 1/1/06

For taxable years beginning prior to 1/1/06, no compensation "paid in Illinois" could be claimed for the Schedule CR credit, even if it was double-taxed by another state. Ref: IITA Section 601(b)(3).

Note: Several examples on determining "double-taxed income" can be found in 86 IAC § 100.2197(b)(4).

The auditor must take care in particular with part-year residents, especially when the taxpayer is taxed in several states. It may not be possible to verify from the returns and the Schedule CR what the correct double-taxed income is, and the taxpayer should provide any additional documentation, schedules, and income break-downs to assist the auditor in determining the correct credit.

To assist taxpayers with determining the correct double-taxed income includable in Illinois base income and the associated tax, Publication 111 was created. It provides Comparison Formulas to determine the income equivalent to enter on the Schedule CR, Column B that is double-taxed income, and tax equivalent to enter on the Schedule CR, Column C. Comments for special rules are also included. Note below the 2006 Comparison Formula for Indiana:

Comparison Formulas for Schedule CR
Information is based on 2006 forms and Regulation Section 100.2197

State	Necessary Attachments to CR Schedule	Income Equivalent to Enter in Schedule CR, Column B	Tax Equivalent to Enter in Schedule CR, Column C	Comments
Indiana	IT-40PNR Schedule A Schedule D	IT-40PNR, Line 3 Plus Schedule D, Lines 1, 2, 9, and any human services deduction (#605), Indiana partnership long-term care policy premiums deduction (#608), and medical savings contributions (#612) on Line 11 Minus Schedule A, Line 24B Minus any valuation limitation or ridesharing income on IL-1040, Line 9, and included in IT-40PNR, Line 3,	IT-40NPR Line 17 Minus Lines 14, 15, 16, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25

- Formulas are provided for each state and are available on the IDOR website under Publication 111, which go back to 2002.

- For forms 1997-2008 available on the IDOR website, the form changed little, and the credit was essentially calculated in this same fashion.

- The taxpayer must compute the double-taxed income and associated tax being claimed for each state based on these formulas, and the auditor should use the formulas to determine the allowable credit.

See Exhibit D – How to Complete Schedule CR – 2006 Example

- The taxpayer may claim a local tax (county, city, local) on earnings that is double-taxed. Wages are the common form of income where this is an issue.

  - The taxpayer will have a tax imposed on the same wages by another state and a municipality within that state. The taxpayer is entitled to claim the taxes paid on Illinois base income for the other state and municipality but may only claim the higher of double-taxed wages for the same income. The taxpayer must provide a local tax return, or if one is not required, a copy of the W-2 showing income taxed and paid.

Local Tax Examples

Example 1: Mr. Smith filed a 2006 Schedule CR with a Missouri return and a W-2, claiming double-taxed wages of $73,000 for Column B and income tax paid of $2,700 for Column C of the 2006 Schedule CR. The Missouri return is included with a Missouri W-2. Publication 111 and the W-2 both only support Missouri wages taxed and allowable of $70,500 and Missouri state tax paid of $2,200. However, the W-2 included local wages (St. Louis) of $73,000 taxed and $500 in local tax withheld. The taxpayer can claim the higher of the double-taxed wages ($73,000), and the local taxes paid ($500) plus the allowable state taxes paid ($2,200), so the amounts originally claimed by Mr. Smith would be correct.

Example 2: Ms. Smith filed a 2008 Schedule CR claiming double-taxed local wages for Louisville, Kentucky. While state income tax on wages is disallowed for the Schedule CR credit because of the reciprocal agreement for Kentucky, local taxes paid on double-taxed wages can be claimed. No Louisville return was required to be filed, but Ms. Smith provided a 2008 W-2 identifying $140,000 in wages and $2,100 in taxes paid to Louisville. These amounts should be allowed on Columns B and C of the Schedule CR.

B. ILLINOIS PROPERTY TAX CREDIT

IITA § 208 established the Illinois Property Tax Credit. Beginning with tax years ending on or after December 31, 1991, every individual taxpayer shall be entitled to a tax credit equal to 5% of real property taxes paid by such taxpayer during the taxable year on the principal residence of the taxpayer. 86 IAC § 100.2180(b) and (c) further clarifies this credit. Also, see Publication 108, Illinois Property Tax Credit for additional information.

This property tax credit applies only to Illinois residents and part-year residents. A credit for the Illinois property taxes paid may be figured on the taxpayer’s principal residence (not a vacation home or rental property). When figuring the credit, property tax you paid on an adjoining lot to your principal residence can be included, if it is used for residential purposes. These taxes apply to the time the residence was owned and lived in during the previous tax year. For example, property taxes paid in 2010 would apply to the time the resident owned and lived in the home during 2009.

Note: Changes to the Illinois Property Tax Credit through PA 100-022:
For tax years beginning on or after January 1, 2017, the Illinois Property Tax Credit is not allowed if the taxpayer’s adjusted gross income for the taxable year exceeds $500,000 for returns with a federal filing status of married filing jointly, or $250,000 for all other returns.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

The auditor should also review Publication 108, Illinois Property Tax Credit, which provides an explanation of the credit and what expenditures are eligible towards calculating the credit. This is available at: http://tax.illinois.gov/Publications/Pubs/Pub-108.pdf

Although the computation and amount of credit has remained essentially the same since its inception, how the credit is reported has changed. These changes can be viewed for periods of 2007 and prior, 2008, and 2009 forward.

1. PROPERTY TAX (PT) WORKSHEET (FOR USE IN TAX YEARS 2007 AND PRIOR)

Illinois residents and part-year residents must complete the Homeowner's Property Tax (PT) Worksheet to determine the credit amount if they are eligible for this property tax credit. The appropriate property tax worksheet can be found in the instructions of Form IL-1040 for each applicable year. Below (as an example) is the worksheet taken from the 2007 Form IL-1040 instructions:

Homeowner's Property Tax (PT) Worksheet

You must complete this worksheet if you are eligible for the Illinois Property Tax credit. Nonresidents may not claim this credit.

Note Be sure to keep this worksheet, proof of your property tax paid, and copies of any closing statements with your income tax records. You must submit this information to us if we request it.

This worksheet was not required to be attached to the return, and the credit was simply recorded on the return, along with the qualified property taxes paid. Since the only refundable credit is the Earned Income Credit, the worksheets and schedules are designed to reduce the credits so that they do not exceed the tax due.

The following is the order of importance for credits being reduced: Schedule CR credit, Property Tax credit, Schedule ED credit, and 1299-C credit. This means that the 1299-C credits will be applied only after the first three have been applied to the tax, the ED credit after the first two are applied to the tax, and the Property Tax is applied after any Schedule CR credit is applied. Therefore, the Property Tax Worksheet above shows that the credit allowed is the lesser of the Lines 4 and 7, which takes into account the tax due reduced by any Schedule CR credit.

On the 2007 Form IL-1040, the qualified property taxes paid are recorded on Line 20a), and the allowable credit is recorded on Line 20b) shown below:

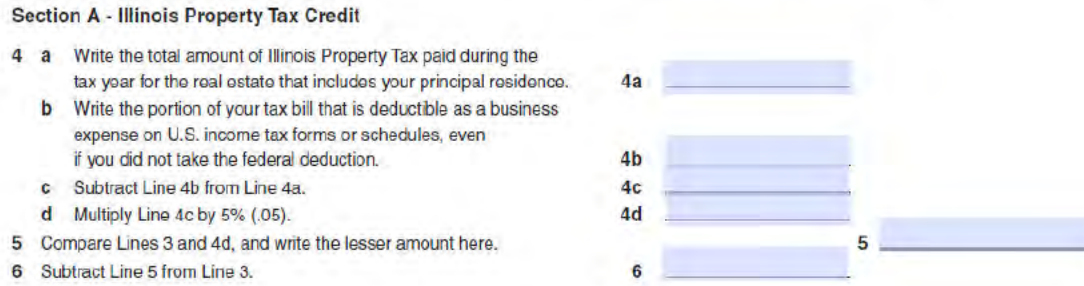
2. PROPERTY TAX CREDIT (2008)

Beginning tax year 2008, the Schedule ICR was introduced. This new form combined the reporting of three credits: Property Tax, Education Expense, and Earned Income Credit (EIC). Property Tax and Education Expense are both nonrefundable credits, while EIC is a refundable credit. To claim these credits, Schedule ICR must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040. Section A of the Schedule ICR is for reporting the Property Tax Credit, which is still computed in the same fashion as prior years (2007 and earlier). Note Section A of the 2008 Schedule ICR:

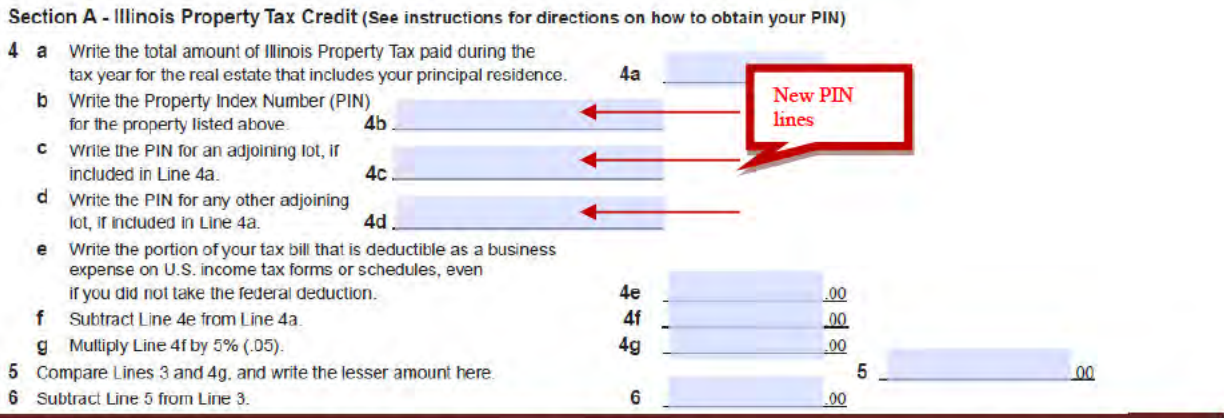


Section A - Illinois Property Tax Credit

4 a Write the total amount of Illinois Property Tax paid during the tax year for the real estate that includes your principal residence. 4a
b Write the portion of your tax bill that is deductible as a business expense on U.S. income tax forms or schedules, even if you did not take the federal deduction. 4b
c Subtract Line 4b from Line 4a. 4c
d Multiply Line 4c by 5% (.05). 4d
5 Compare Lines 3 and 4d, and write the lesser amount here. 5
6 Subtract Line 5 from Line 3. 6

3. PROPERTY TAX CREDIT (STARTING IN 2009)

Starting in tax year 2009, the taxpayer is required to provide the Property Index Number (PIN) for the principle residence and any adjoining lots being claimed. Note the modified form below:



Section A - Illinois Property Tax Credit (See instructions for directions on how to obtain your PIN)

4 a Write the total amount of Illinois Property Tax paid during the tax year for the real estate that includes your principal residence. 4a
b Write the Property Index Number (PIN) for the property listed above. 4b c Write the PIN for an adjoining lot, if included in Line 4a. 4c d Write the PIN for any other adjoining lot, if included in Line 4a. 4d
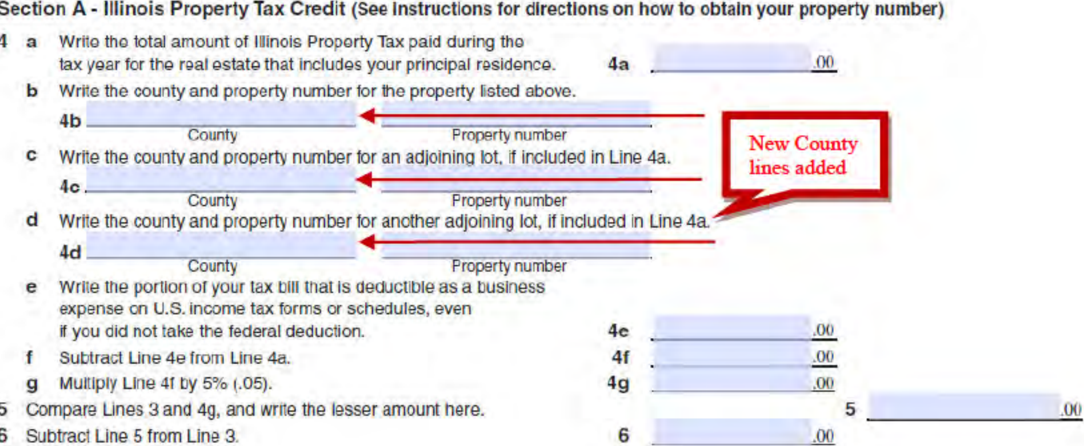
e Write the portion of your tax bill that is deductible as a business expense on U.S. income tax forms or schedules, even if you did not take the federal deduction. 4e .00
f Subtract Line 4e from Line 4a. 4f .00
g Multiply Line 4f by 5% (.05). 4g .00
5 Compare Lines 3 and 4g, and write the lesser amount here. 5 .00
6 Subtract Line 5 from Line 3. 6 .00

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The “PIN” number often referred to as the “parcel number” or “permanent number”, should be located on the property tax bill or assessment notice. If the taxpayer pays property tax through a mortgage, the mortgage statements will probably not identify the PIN number, and the taxpayer should contact their lender or county assessor’s office.

4. PROPERTY TAX CREDIT (STARTING IN 2013)

Starting in tax year 2013, the taxpayer is required to also provide the County in which the property is located.



Section A - Illinois Property Tax Credit (See instructions for directions on how to obtain your property number)

4 a Write the total amount of Illinois Property Tax paid during the tax year for the real estate that includes your principal residence. 4a .00

b Write the county and property number for the property listed above.
4b County Property number c Write the county and property number for an adjoining lot, if included in Line 4a.

4c County Property number

d Write the county and property number for another adjoining lot, if included in Line 4a.
4d County Property number

e Write the portion of your tax bill that is deductible as a business expense on U.S. income tax forms or schedules, even if you did not take the federal deduction. 4e .00

f Subtract Line 4e from Line 4a. 4f .00

g Multiply Line 4f by 5% (.05). 4g .00

5 Compare Lines 3 and 4g, and write the lesser amount here. 5 .00

6 Subtract Line 5 from Line 3. 6 .00

Audit Issues

1) When auditing this credit, a PIN number with property tax written on the Schedule ICR does not substantiate the credit being claimed. The taxpayer must be able to provide the documentation to support this credit if requested, such as the property tax bill and record of payment.

2) Another audit concern is with a taxpayer who files as “married filing separately”. If the spouse is also an Illinois filer, the auditor must verify that the taxpayer and spouse are not claiming the same credit amount. The two filers can divide the credit in any portion they wish, but they cannot claim an amount that exceeds the total allowable credit as if they filed jointly. This is true for all of the Illinois credits.

Example: Taxpayer A, files “married filing separately” and claimed a property tax credit of $500 on a qualified property tax paid of $10,000 for property X. Taxpayer B, the spouse of Taxpayer A, also filed “married filing separately” and claimed a property tax credit of $500 on a qualified property tax paid of $10,000 for property X. Both taxpayers may divide the $500 any way they wish between themselves but may not claim together more than the allowable $500. For instance, the two could both claim a credit of $250.

3) Circumstances may arise where each spouse maintains a separate principal residence, which may be due to their career requirements, a pending divorce, or another justifiable reason. This would allow the credit to be claimed for two properties on a joint return and for each spouse to claim the credit on his or her principal residence on a married filing separate return. This situation is referenced in Publication 108.

When two residences are claimed on a joint return, the taxpayers must support the claim with appropriate documentation. The 2012 Schedule ICR specifically instructs the taxpayers to identify the PIN for the second property on Line 4c if both property tax amounts were included on Line 4a.

C. K-12 EDUCATION (ED) EXPENSE CREDIT

A nonrefundable credit for qualified education expenses may be claimed by parents or guardians according to IITA § 201(m), while 86 IAC § 100.2165 defines and explains the key terms and provisions of the credit. Also, see Publication 119, Education Expense Credit General Rules and Requirements for Home Schools, and Publication 132, Education Expense Credit General Rules and Requirements for Parents and Guardians, for additional information.

To generally summarize the credit, it is a credit for qualified expenses incurred by parents or guardians in excess of $250 for the pupil during the regular school year. The final credit may not exceed $500 for tax years ending before December 31, 2017 (see Note below as to the increase to $750). The credit is computed by multiplying the qualifying expenses in excess of $250 times 25%. This determination is compared to $500, and then the lesser amount is allowed as the education expense credit.

Example: In 2015, the taxpayer incurred $2,000 in qualified education expenses (tuition and lab fees) during the regular school year on behalf of a pupil. In calculating the credit, Taxpayer cannot claim the first $250 in expenses, so she subtracts $250 from $2,000. Then, she multiplies the remainder, $1,750 times 25%, which equals $437.50, which will be allowed as the education expense credit.

Total Incurred Expenses	Qualified Expense Amount	Allowed Expense Credit
$2,000	$2,000 - $250= $1,750	$1,750 X 0.25= $437.50

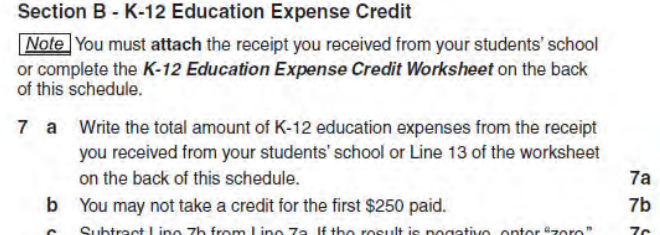
Note: Changes to the K-12 Education Expense Credit through PA 100-022:
For tax years ending on or after December 31, 2017, the maximum amount of the K-12 Education Expense Credit has been increased to $750 per family. The K-12 Education Expense Credit is not allowed if the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for the taxable year exceeds $500,000 for returns with a federal filing status of married filing jointly, or $250,000 for all other returns.

See additional examples in 86 IAC § 100.2165(b)(4)(C) in evaluating and determining the Education Expense Credit.

1. K-12 EDUCATION (ED) EXPENSE CREDIT (TAX YEARS 2008 AND FORWARD)

Like the Property Tax credit, for tax years 2008 and forward, the education expense credit is recorded on the Schedule ICR under Section B, shown below:



Section B - K-12 Education Expense Credit

Note You must attach the receipt you received from your students' school or complete the K-12 Education Expense Credit Worksheet on the back of this schedule.

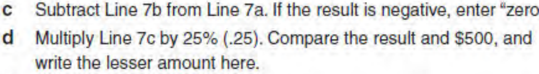
7 a Write the total amount of K-12 education expenses from the receipt you received from your students' school or Line 13 of the worksheet on the back of this schedule. 7a

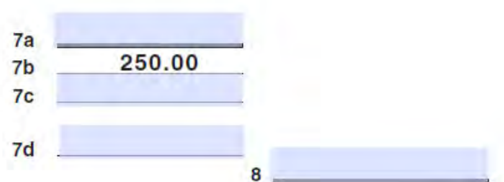
b You may not take a credit for the first $250 paid. 7b



c Subtract Line 7b from Line 7a. If the result is negative, enter "zero." 7c

d Multiply Line 7c by 25% (.25). Compare the result and $500, and write the lesser amount here. 7d

8 Compare Lines 6 and 7d, and write the lesser amount here. 8



7a ____

7b 250.00

If the taxpayer has a complete Qualified ED receipt, then it should be attached to the back of the Schedule ICR. If the taxpayer did not receive a Qualified ED receipt, then the ED worksheet (which now resembles the former Schedule ED) should be completed on page two of the Schedule ICR. Tax year 2010 requires that the taxpayer complete the ED worksheet on the Schedule ICR and attach the Qualified ED receipt if received.

2. K-12 EDUCATION EXPENSE CREDIT WORKSHEET (TAX YEARS 2007 & PRIOR)

To determine the credit for education expenses when the taxpayer has received a school receipt of expenses, the K-12 Education Expense Credit (ED) Worksheet must be completed, and the school receipt must be attached to the Form IL-1040.The appropriate worksheet can be found in the instructions of Form IL-1040 for each applicable year. Below is the worksheet taken from the 2007 Form IL-1040 instructions:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Note Be sure to keep this worksheet with your income tax records. However, you must attach the receipts you received from the school to your Form IL-1040.

Schedule ED (for Use in Tax Years 2007 and Prior)

To determine the education expenses when no expense receipt is obtained from the school, Schedule ED, Credit for K-12 Education Expenses, must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040. To access Schedule ED for the appropriate year, go to the link that follows then select the desired year, then Schedule ED: http://tax.illinois.gov/taxforms/prioriit.htm

Audit Issues

1) A common problem with the Qualified ED receipts is that they do not contain all the information that is required as explained in Publication 112, which is located at http://tax.illinois.gov/Publications/Pubs/Pub-112.pdf. Often, the schools will not include the SSN or grade level of student. This is not acceptable as the form must contain all of the required information as listed in PUB 112, or the taxpayer should provide a completed Schedule ED.

2) When a taxpayer home schools children, Schedule ED must be completed and any receipts that are applicable to home school education should be retained for the tax year. Taxpayers must provide the auditor with sufficient documentation to substantiate qualified education expenses incurred, which should clearly identify the type of expense and its payment. The taxpayer is instructed by the Form IL-1040 to complete a Schedule ED and attach the receipts.

3) An audit situation could arise where the custodians file separately. Although both custodians could split the eligible credit according to the qualified expenses incurred, they are not allowed to both claim expenses incurred by the other custodian or in total more than the allowable credit, or "double-dip".

Example: Taxpayer A and Taxpayer B file "married filing separately" and both incurred $5,000 each for qualified expenses on behalf of their child. Since ($10,000-$250) X .25= $2437.50, the maximum credit they could claim in total is $500. However, both taxpayers claimed $500 each (or $1,000 in total) for one qualified pupil. The credit should be disallowed for the taxpayer under audit, and the spouses will have to prorate the credit and file amended returns to claim the proper credit.

4) Although the credit is allowed for kindergarten expenses, the credit is allowed only for attendance at a school that meets the requirements of the truancy laws. Prior to the 2014-15 school year, attendance at a kindergarten was not mandatory, only grades 1 through 12 were mandatory. Accordingly, kindergarten attendance at a school that did not include higher grades would not qualify for the credit. For the 2014-15 school year and subsequent years, attendance at kindergarten is mandatory for 5-year-olds, and the credit is allowable for schools that provide only kindergarten and pre-kindergarten classes.

D. CREDIT AMOUNT FROM SCHEDULE 1299-C

Schedule 1299-C, Income Tax Subtractions and Credits for individuals, is used to determine the following amounts:

1) Total dividend subtraction allowed for the Schedule M line pertaining to Enterprise Zone (or River Edge Redevelopment Zone) and High Impact Business (within a Foreign Trade Zone or sub-zone) and

2) Total credit allowed for taxpayers who are eligible for credits on Schedule 1299-C.

Note: For tax year 2018, major changes were made to Schedule 1299-C. Also new for tax year 2018 is the Schedule 1299-I, Income Tax Credit Information to be used with Schedule 1299-C.

Most of the subtractions and credits on the Schedule 1299-C also appear on Schedules 1299- A, B, and D, which are used by businesses, and the format of the Schedule 1299-C also resembles those other forms.

- The Schedule 1299-C instructions provide a description and required attachments for each credit. Each subtraction or credit is calculated on the Schedule 1299-C.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- It is important to realize that changes occur frequently, sometimes yearly, to the Schedule 1299-C, and the auditor should refer to the form instructions.

- The instructions for the Form IL-1040 in the "What's New" section would also highlight any 1299-C changes for that year.

1. SUBTRACTIONS

The subtractions will be reported on Schedule M. For tax years starting 2013, the Enterprise Zone Dividend Subtraction has been eliminated.

2. CREDITS

Unlike the other individual credits, the 1299-C credits can be carried forward.

- The first two credits listed, TECH-PREP Youth Vocational Programs Credit and Dependent Care Assistance Program Credit, are carried forward two years.

- The remainder, Film Production Services Tax Credit through New Markets Credit, can be carried forward five years.

- Step 5 of the Schedule 1299-C is to be completed by the taxpayer in order to properly carry the credits. The auditor should review the credits to make sure that they were carried properly.

See Exhibit E – Schedule 1299-C, Step 5 (2013 tax year)

For the taxpayer to properly claim 1299-C subtractions and credits, the Schedule 1299-C and any supporting documents must be attached to the Form IL-1040. When performing an audit, the Schedule 1299-C taxpayer information may be found in GenTax by the auditor.

See Exhibit F – Schedule 1299-C in GenTax – 2013 tax year

The following table lists Schedule 1299-C Income Tax Subtractions and Credits and their legislative source, which should be cited for any discrepancy with the taxpayer and referenced for further details of each credit beyond the Schedule 1299-C instructions. New for tax year 2018 is the Schedule 1299-I, Income Tax Credit Information to be used with the 1299-C.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. Notes: The Jobs Tax Credit was repealed by Public Act 98-0109. The Enterprise Zone Dividend Subtraction has been eliminated by Public Act 97-0905. Both have been removed

* The sunset date for the Veterans Jobs Credit for “qualified veterans” was January 1, 2015. This credit should not be claimed for tax years beginning on or after January 1, 2015. However, the credit for “qualified unemployed veterans” is still allowed, as it is not affected by this sunset date.

(1) – R&D Credit – this credit expired with a sunset date of “for tax years ending prior to January 1, 2016”, but due to changes through PA 100-022, the Research and Development Credit has been reinstated and is retroactive for the 2016 tax year. This credit has been extended through tax years ending prior to January 1, 2027 by PA 101-0207.

(2) – Historic Preservation Credit – this credit has expired with a sunset date of “for tax years ending on or before December 31, 2015”.

3. PASS-THROUGH INCOME

If a partnership or S corporation qualifies for either the dividend subtractions or certain credits, any distributive share of income is passed on to or flows-through to the partners or shareholders. The subtractions and credits that can flow-through are noted in the above chart by “Yes” in the pass-through column.

There are a few credits that individuals qualify for and pass-through entities do not, such as the Jobs Tax Credit. Likewise, there are some credits on the Schedule 1299-A for pass-through entities that cannot be claimed by the individual on the 1299-C, such as Historic Preservation Credit.

- If the credit does not appear on the 1299-C, it is not allowable, even if it was reported to the taxpayer on his Schedule K-1-P. For any pass-through subtraction or credit, the taxpayer must have Schedule K-1-P(s) to support any distributive share of subtraction or credit.

XIV. OTHER TAXES

A. HOUSEHOLD EMPLOYMENT TAX (TAX YEARS 2011 AND FORWARD)

Starting in tax year 2011, if Illinois Income Tax was withheld from a household employee, Form IL-1040 could be used to report and pay the tax withheld. Household employers who filed annually in past years on Form UI-WIT, Combined Return for Household Employees, should use Form IL-1040 to report Illinois Income Tax withheld starting in 2011. Form UI-WIT is no longer available.

If household employee withholding was already reported or paid using Form IL-941, Illinois Withholding Income Tax Return, or Form IL-501, Payment Coupon, it should not be reported on the Form IL-1040.

B. USE TAX (TAX YEARS 2010 AND FORWARD)

Starting in tax year 2010, if a taxpayer owes $600 or less in use tax for that tax year, it may be reported and paid on the Form IL-1040 rather than with the filling of Form ST-44, Illinois Use Tax Return.

Public Act 096-1388 established that for taxable years ending on or after 12/31/2010, the Department was required to put a line on the Form IL-1040 return for Use Tax. The intention was to follow other states that have done the same and make Illinois citizens aware of their requirement to file and pay Use Tax. This also could facilitate compliance by allowing the taxpayer to pay the Use Tax with income tax, as opposed to filing a separate Form ST-44.

1. WHAT IS ILLINOIS USE TAX?

Illinois Use Tax is a sales tax that the purchaser owes on items that are bought for use in Illinois. If the seller does not collect this tax, the purchaser must pay the tax to the Illinois Department of Revenue (IDOR). The most common purchases on which the seller does not collect Illinois Use Tax are those made via the internet, from a mail order catalog, or made when traveling outside Illinois.

2. WHEN MUST ILLINOIS USE TAX BE PAID TO IDOR?

One must pay Illinois Use Tax to IDOR if

- the items bought are taxable in Illinois,
- the items are used or consumed in Illinois, and
- when the items were purchased either
    - no sales tax was paid to the seller, or
    - paid sales tax was less than Illinois' Use Tax rates of 6.25 percent for general merchandise and 1 percent for food and drugs.

Examples - If the taxpayer purchased:

- a computer over the internet for use in Illinois and paid no sales tax, 6.25 percent Illinois Use Tax is owed.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- jewelry while vacationing in Georgia upon which 4 percent sales tax was paid and which was brought back to Illinois, Illinois Use Tax on the 2.25 percent difference in tax rates is owed.
- cheese by mail order from a company in Wisconsin and paid no sales tax, 1 percent Illinois Use Tax is owed.

3. INDIVIDUAL USE TAX AMNESTY

An Individual Use Tax Amnesty was in effect for taxpayers for purchases made from 7/1/04 through 12/31/10. To participate, the taxpayer had to file an ST-44 for each year in which there was Use Tax liability, writing "Amnesty" in red at the top of each form. These returns had to be filed and paid during the period of 1/11/11 through 10/15/11 to qualify for abatement of penalty and interest. If the taxpayer was unsure of the amount of purchases, the table below could be used to estimate the amount (the same Use Tax table in the 2010 Form IL-1040 Instructions):

If your AGI (IL-1040, Line 1) is	Column A this is your estimated purchases for ST-44, Line 1a	Column B this is your estimated use tax for ST-44, Line 1b
$0 - $10,000	$48	$3
$10,001 - $20,000	$144	$9
$20,001 - $30,000	$240	$15
$30,001 - $40,000	$336	$21
$40,001 - $50,000	$432	$27
$50,001 - $75,000	$608	$38
$75,001 - $100,000	$832	$52
>$100,000	Multiply AGI by .0096	Multiply Column A by .0625

Again, for 2010 purchases of $600 or less, the Use Tax should be reported on the Form IL-1040 for Amnesty purposes, and no penalty or interest will be assessed. Prior years and 2010 purchases greater than $600 must be reported on separate ST-44 forms.

Starting in tax year 2014, the Medical Cannabis Surcharge has been added to the Form IL-1040 under the “Other Taxes”. If the taxpayer has federal income attributable to transactions subject to the Compassionate Use of Medical Cannabis Pilot Program Act Surcharge they must complete the worksheet in the IL-1040 Instructions to determine the amount of their surcharge. The amount of the surcharge is equal to the amount of federal income tax liability for the taxable year attributable to the transactions subject to the surcharge. The surcharge is imposed on any taxpayer who incurs a federal income tax liability on the income realized on a “transaction subject to the surcharge,” including individuals and other taxpayers who are not themselves the “organization registrant” that engaged in the transaction. A line has been included on Schedules K-1-P and K-1-T to identify the amount of federal income attributable to transactions subject to the surcharge that was passed through to you on federal Schedule K-1. See the 2014 Form IL-1040 instructions for complete details on the determination of this surcharge amount.

Note: Amended by PA101-363, effective 8/9/2019, which deletes “pilot” from references in the Compassionate Use of Medical Cannabis Pilot Program Act.

XV. PAYMENTS AND REFUNDABLE CREDIT

For tax years 2008 and after, credits have been divided into two sections- nonrefundable (see earlier Section XIII) and refundable credits. The refundable credit (Earned Income) is included with the payments in this section of the Form IL-1040.

A. ILLINOIS INCOME TAX WITHHELD

Total Illinois Income Tax withheld is shown on the taxpayer’s W-2 Form, Wage and Tax Statement. This amount is normally found in Box 17, state income tax.

- The taxpayer must also include any Illinois Income Tax withheld on Form 1099-R, Distributions from Pensions, Annuities, Retirement or Profit-Sharing Plans, IRAs, Insurance Contracts, etc., Form 1099-G, Certain Government Payments, and Form W-2G, Certain Gambling Winnings. A copy of any W-2, 1099-R, and W-2G must be attached to the Form IL-1040.

Missing W-2

A taxpayer can provide the auditor with a signed Form IL-4852, Substitute for Unobtainable Form W-2, to support the claimed withholding (a completed, signed, federal Form 4852 is also acceptable). This form can be obtained on the Department’s website under the forms for Individuals (for that specific tax year).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

- The taxpayer must attach copies of paystubs or a letter from the employer on company letterhead supporting the wages and withholding being claimed. The IL-4852 alone without the paystubs or employer letter is not sufficient to support withholding claimed.

1. TAX YEARS 2009 AND FORWARD

For tax years 2009 and forward, the share of tax paid on behalf of the taxpayer through the Form IL-1023-C should not be included on the Illinois withholding line, but instead it is entered on the line for pass-through entity tax payments (see Section C below).

Note: For tax years ending on or after December 31, 2013, Form IL-1023-C and Form IL-1000 are both obsolete forms. Amounts previously reported on these forms will be reported on Form IL-1065, Form IL-1120-ST or Form IL-1041. Payment information will then be "passed-through" to the partner, shareholder, or beneficiary as a pass-through entity payment.

2. TAX YEAR 2008

If income from a partnership or S corporation was included on a Form IL-1023-C, Illinois Composite Income and Replacement Tax, the share of taxes paid on the taxpayer's behalf could be entered on the Illinois Income Tax withheld line. In order to receive credit for these payments, a copy of the Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T showing these payments had to be attached to the Form IL-1040.

3. TAX YEARS 2007 AND PRIOR

If income from a partnership or S corporation was included on a Form IL-1023-C, the share of taxes paid on the taxpayer's behalf could not be entered on the Illinois Income Tax withheld line unless the Department of Revenue gave written permission to do so. If written permission was provided, a copy of the Form IL-1023-C, a copy of Schedule K-1-P and a copy of the written permission had to be attached to the Form IL-1040 for the share of taxes to be allowed.

B. ESTIMATED INCOME TAX PAYMENTS (ES PAYMENTS)

The total of any payments made with Form IL-1040-ES, Estimated Income Tax Payments for Individuals, Form IL-505-I, Automatic Extension Payment for Individuals, and any overpayment that was credited from the previous year will be recorded on this line of Form IL-1040.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

1. ESTIMATED PAYMENTS (FORM IL-1040-ES)

IITA § 803(a) established the requirement to make ES payments (Form IL-1040-ES) for individuals. For taxable years ending before December 31, 2001, estimated payments are required to be paid if the estimated tax amount payable is expected to be more than $250. For taxable years ending on or after December 31, 2001, estimated payments are required if the estimated tax amount payable is more than $500. For taxable years ending on or after December 31, 2019, estimated payments are required if the estimated tax amount payable is more than $1,000 [not applicable to estates, trusts, partnerships, Subchapter S corporations, and farmers].

IITA § 803(d) provides the due dates for four equal installments:

- 1st April 15
- 2nd June 15
- 3rd September 15
- 4th January 15 of the following taxable year

- The taxpayer must either pay 90% of the liability shown on the current year's tax return, or 100% of the liability shown on the prior year's return. If the taxpayer earns income unevenly, the taxpayer has the option to annualize their income for purposes of estimated payments, which must be done using Form IL-2210.

- Taxpayers will occasionally comment that they cannot determine their required estimated payments because they cannot accurately predict their current year income. Unless they are a first-year filer, the IITA says payments can be based on 100% of the prior year return. Therefore, unless a first-year filer, the taxpayer always has a basis to calculate required ES payments.

Refer to IITA §§ 803 and 804, and 86 IAC §§ 100.8000 and 100.8010 for further explanation, as well as Form IL-1040-ES, for further guidance.

2. EXTENSION PAYMENTS (IL-505-I)

For taxpayers who will be unable to file by the original due date of the return, an extension payment can be made to pay any tentative tax liability and avoid late-payment penalty.

- Extension payments are made with the voucher Form IL-505-I, Automatic Extension Payment for Individuals Filing Form IL-1040. The extension payment is due by the original due date of the return (the 15th day of the fourth month after the close of the taxable year, generally April 15 for calendar filers unless it falls upon a weekend/holiday).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

- Penalty and interest will be assessed on any unpaid liability that remains after the extension payment is applied. Form IL-505-I can be obtained from the Department's website under Forms.

3. OVERPAYMENT FROM PREVIOUS YEAR (CREDIT CARRYFORWARDS)

Effective January 1, 2015, PA 98-0825 provides for a change to IITA § 909 as to the application of overpayments. Overpayments from one tax year can be requested on Forms IL-1040 or IL-1040-X to be applied as a credit to a future tax year. These are referred to as credit carryforwards. This election/overpayment is governed by the following:

- must be done by the extended due date of the return. This means that a taxpayer cannot file a Form IL-1040 after the extended due date and request a credit carryforward.
- credit carryforward may be reduced if math error adjustments were made to the overpayment year's return and reduced the overpayment. Likewise, that credit carryforward may be applied against any other taxpayer liabilities, leaving the balance to be applied to the following year (if not completely offset). However, audit adjustments to the overpayment year do not reduce the credit carryforward. Instead the credit carryforward is treated the same as a refund that was paid.
- overpayment will be applied to the next ES payment that is due, if the taxpayer has not specified a given year. If the credit is reduced, the Department is supposed to issue a notice explaining such adjustment, and the taxpayer can make a timely payment thereafter to avoid a potential IITA §§ 804 or 1005(a) penalty. Ref: IITA § 909(b) and 86 IAC § 100.9400(b).
- overpayment will be applied to any tax year after the year of overpayment, if the taxpayer has specified that year.
- for tax years prior to 2014, the taxpayer must provide a written explanation (attached to the tax form) as to what tax period (year) the overpayment should be applied to, since the tax forms for those years will not be updated to provide for line changes for such a credit carryforward request.

Credit Carryforward Problems

Common problems with credit carryforwards that can affect the taxpayer are the following:

- a math error that reduces the overpayment (even creating a liability)
- other liabilities offset by the overpayment.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In either case, the requested credit carryforward is reduced, and the taxpayer is notified, but does not timely pay to restore the credit, correct the math error, or simply ignores the notice.

- The following tax year the tax payer claims the full credit carryforward that was requested and is actually underpaid. This may occur several years until the taxpayer receives a bill for a balance due, and then is confused about being underpaid.
- When penalties and interest are assessed each year, it can require examining several years of reduced credit carryforwards to determine the original discrepancy.

  Example 1: Taxpayer makes four timely $100,000 estimated payments in 2011. The taxpayer timely files a 2011 Form IL-1040, requesting a 2012 credit carryforward of $50,000. The taxpayer's 2011 return was adjusted in processing due to a math error (Schedule CR credit was reduced by $30,000), which left only $20,000 available for the 2012 credit carryforward. A notice was sent to the taxpayer and no support was provided nor payment made, so $20,000 was the credit applied to 2012.

  In 2012, the taxpayer made four timely $50,000 estimated payments, and claimed the original $50,000 2012 credit, for a total of $250,000 and an overpayment of $30,000 to be refunded. Again, this year's Schedule CR credit was reduced, by $20,000, and the taxpayer's actual payments should be $220,000. Therefore, the taxpayer has an actual return liability of $20,000. When auditing this period, the auditor may have to review the returns and payments in GenTax to understand what credits were claimed, what were allowed, and any adjustments.

  Example 2: Taxpayer is audited for calendar years 2009 through 2011. Taxpayer presents the auditor a finalized 2009 RAR and 2009 Form IL-1040-X, creating a claim for $5,000. The auditor found no 2009 or 2011 adjustments but found a 2010 audit liability of $7,500. Taxpayer requested that the $5,000 overpayment be applied as a credit carryforward to 2010. The auditor explained that each year's total balance due or refund, including penalty and interest, will be determined and then may be offset to determine the total audit liability or refund. Once this is completed, any available overpayment can be applied as a credit carryforward.

C. PASS-THROUGH ENTITY TAX PAYMENTS

For tax years ending on or after December 31, 2008, the total of any pass-through entity tax payments (income tax paid) made on the taxpayer's behalf by a partnership, S Corporation, or trust are shown on the taxpayer's Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T. In order for the taxpayer (partner, shareholder, or beneficiary) to receive credit for these payments, a copy of the Schedule K-1-P or K-1-T must be attached to their Form IL-1040 when filed.

D. EARNED INCOME CREDIT (EIC)

IITA § 212(a) provides for this credit as follows:

- For each taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 2000 and ending prior to December 31, 2012, taxpayers who qualify for a federal Earned Income Credit (EIC) can claim an Illinois EIC equal to 5% of the federal EIC.
- Beginning on or after January 1, 2012 and ending prior to December 31, 2013, 7.5% of the federal EIC can be claimed.
- Beginning on or after January 1, 2013, 10% of the federal EIC can be claimed.
- Beginning on or after January 1, 2017, and before January 1, 2018, 14% of the federal EIC can be claimed.
- Beginning on or after January 1, 2018, 18% of the federal EIC can be claimed.

IITA § 212(b) provides:

- The credit is nonrefundable for tax years beginning before 1/1/03.
- For tax years beginning on or after 1/1/03, the Illinois EIC is refundable. This is the only Illinois credit currently refundable.

For a nonresident or part-year resident, the amount of the credit shall be in proportion to the amount of income attributable to this State per IITA § 212(a). This calculation is carried out on either the EIC worksheet in the Form IL-1040 instructions (tax years 2007 and earlier) or Step 3 of the Schedule ICR (tax years 2008 and forward).

The taxpayer should keep copies of their federal income tax return, federal Schedule EIC, federal EIC worksheet, or any other documentation that verifies the amount of their federal EIC and submit such documents if requested by the Department. Again, if there is doubt that this credit was federally accepted as filed, the taxpayer should provide the auditor an IRS Account Transcript to substantiate the federal EITC.

Audit Note: It is important to adjust the federal EITC when the AGI has been adjusted during audit. If the AGI is adjusted, it can result in a drastic reduction of the Illinois EIC.

1. FEDERAL JOINT FILING REQUIREMENT

One federal requirement of the federal earned income tax credit is that married individuals must file jointly to claim the credit as stated in IRC § 32(d).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

On the Form IL-1040, a married couple may have filed separately, such as if a spouse was a part-year or nonresident, or if a spouse is filing as an injured spouse.

- The auditor in this instance must first verify that they filed joint federally and qualified for the credit. Just because the taxpayer claimed the credit does not mean that the return was accepted, and in case of any doubt of the federal credit and amount, the auditor should request an IRS Account Transcript to verify what the accepted Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) was.

- Once the allowed EITC is determined and the allowable Illinois Earned Income Credit (EIC) is confirmed, the auditor must verify that the two spouses, in total, do not claim more than what is allowable had they filed jointly.

  Example: Taxpayer A and Taxpayer B filed a 2010 federal Form 1040 as married filing jointly and claimed an accepted EITC credit of $3,000 on Line 64a. For Illinois, they filed as married filing separately, and Taxpayer A filed as an injured spouse. Taxpayer A claimed $2,000 on Schedule ICR, Line 10a, and an Illinois EIC of $100 (.05 x $2,000). Taxpayer B claimed $1,000 on Schedule ICR, Line 10a and an Illinois EIC of $50 (.05 x $1,000). Since both together did not claim more than the total Federal EITC, thus not claiming more than the total EIC credit allowable of $150 had they filed jointly, the Illinois EIC credits are allowable.

  Still, if the taxpayer did file as married filing separately on the Illinois return, this raises the red flag of:

  - Were they eligible and received a federal EITC?

  - As with the other credits, did they individually claim more than the allowable Illinois credit, or “double-dip”?

2. EARNED INCOME CREDIT (EIC) ON SCHEDULE IL-E/EIC (TAX YEAR 2018)

The EIC for tax year 2018 is calculated on Schedule IL-E/EIC, Illinois Exemption and Earned Income Credit. This Schedule can be accessed on the IDOR website under the Individual Income Tax Forms for tax year 2018.

3. EARNED INCOME CREDIT (EIC) ON SCHEDULE IL-EIC (TAX YEAR 2017)

The EIC for tax year 2017 is calculated on Schedule IL-EIC, Illinois Earned Income Credit. This Schedule can be accessed on the IDOR website under the Individual Income Tax Forms for tax year 2017.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

4. EARNED INCOME CREDIT (EIC) ON SCHEDULE ICR (TAX YEARS 2008-2016

As with the Property Tax and Education credits, the EIC for tax years 2008 through 2016 is calculated on the Schedule ICR, as shown below from the 2010 Schedule ICR.

Step 3: Figure your refundable credit

Earned Income Credit

10 a Write the amount of federal EIC as shown on your U.S. 1040, Line 64a; U.S. 1040A, Line 41a; or U.S. 1040EZ, Line 9a. 10a .00

b Multiply the amount on Line 10a by 5% (.05). 10b .00

c Illinois residents: Write 1.0.
Nonresidents and part-year residents: Write the decimal from Schedule-NR, Line 48. 10c •

d Multiply Line 10b by the decimal on Line 10c. 10d .00

11 Write the amount from Line 10d here. This is your Illinois Earned Income Credit. Write this amount on Form IL-1040, Line 27. → 11 .00

The amount from the Schedule ICR is carried to the Form IL-1040; on the 2010 Form IL-1040 it is recorded on Line 27, in the "Payments and Refundable Credit" section under Step 8. For the EIC calculation, Schedule ICR must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040.

5. EARNED INCOME CREDIT (EIC) WORKSHEET (TAX YEARS 2007 AND PRIOR)

To determine the amount of this credit, the Earned Income Credit (EIC) worksheet (in the Form IL-1040 instructions) must be completed by the taxpayer. The appropriate worksheet can be found in the instructions for each applicable year. The amount of EIC determined on the worksheet would then be transferred over to the appropriate line on the Form IL-1040.

XVI. UNDERPAYMENT OF ESTIMATED TAX PENALTY AND DONATIONS

Starting in tax year 2008, the Penalty section and Donation section were combined on the Form IL-1040 return.

A. LATE-PAYMENT PENALTY FOR UNDERPAYMENT OF ESTIMATED TAX

A late-payment penalty for underpayment of estimated tax may be assessed when the taxpayer is required to make estimated payments and fails to do so by the estimated payment due dates. This penalty is often referred to as the "804 penalty" because it is governed by IITA § 804.

Refer to Chapter 42 Penalty & Interest for more on the late-payment penalty.

1. USE OF FORM IL-2210

Form IL-2210, Computation of Penalties for Individuals, allows the taxpayer to figure penalties that may be owed if the taxpayer did not:

- make timely estimated payments
- pay the tax owed by the original due date, or
- file a processable return by the extended due date.

Annualized Income

Some taxpayers earn their income unevenly during the year and are allowed to annualize their income per IITA § 804(c)(2) because, although the total amount in required ES payments is the same, some periods may be less than others.

- To calculate the 804 penalty on an annualized basis, the taxpayer is required to complete Form IL-2210 and attach this to the Form IL-1040.

- Step 6 on the Form IL-2210 allows the taxpayer to compute what the four annualized ES payments would be.

Example: For calendar year 2009, Taxpayer was a partner in Partnership A. Taxpayer does not receive distribution until end of calendar year, which is the only source of Taxpayer's income. Since Taxpayer earns income unevenly during the year (only in 4th ES period), Taxpayer may annualize income using Form IL-2210. For 2008, the ES tax liability was $2,000. Taxpayer may avoid an 804 penalty by paying 100% of the prior tax year's ES liability or 90% of the current tax year. In order to avoid penalty by paying 100% of the previous year's tax, Taxpayer would need to make four timely installment payments of at least $500, since the requirement is that each payment be 25% of the prior year's liability. If Taxpayer annualizes on Form IL-2210 and makes one ES payment equal to at least 90% of his tax liability by 1/15/10, any 804 penalty would be avoided.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

2. EXCEPTIONS TO ESTIMATED TAX PAYMENTS

A list of exceptions to the 804 penalty being assessed can be found in 86 IAC § 100.8010(g). Taxpayers could possibly claim one or more of these exceptions, which should be verified by the auditor.

On Form IL-1040 the taxpayer is required to check boxes that pertain to several situations where an 804 penalty is either not assessed or calculated differently. Starting in tax year 2008, these check boxes appear as follows:

Step 10: Underpayment of Estimated Tax Penalty and Donations

29 Late payment penalty for underpayment of estimated tax. 29 ______

a Check if at least two-thirds of your federal gross income is from farming. ☐ b Check if you or your spouse are 65 or older and permanently living in a nursing home. ☐

c Check if your income was not received evenly during the year and you annualized your income on Form IL-2210, otherwise we will figure this penalty for you. Attach Form IL-2210. ☐

Starting in tax year 2012, a fourth check box was added as follows:

d Check if you were not required to file an Illinois Individual Income Tax return in the previous tax year. ☐

Example 1: Taxpayer A is under audit for calendar years 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer timely filed and paid return liabilities of $50,000 for 2007 on 4/15/08 and $62,000 for 2008 on 4/15/09. Taxpayer's ES base (tax less any credits and withholding) was $40,000 for 2007 and $50,000 for 2008. Taxpayer did not make any ES payments for either year and marked returns as "farmer" for both years. Therefore, no 804 penalty was assessed by the Department during return processing.

The auditor noticed this and inspected Taxpayer's federal returns for 2007 and 2008, discovering that less than 2/3 of gross income came from farming in either year. The audit was initiated on 6/15/11. Since the penalty is "deemed assessed" when the return is filed, notice and demand for payment of the penalty must be issued within 3 years of the filing date. IITA § 902(a). Therefore, the statute for collecting the 804 penalty is closed for 2007.

However, the 2008 statute is open until 4/15/12, so the auditor should notify Audit Perfection so that a Notice and Demand is issued for the 804 penalty. It would be $10,000 ($50,000 x .1, or (($12,500 x .1) x 4)) and doubled for Amnesty. No 804 penalty, however, would be assessed on the audit liability discovered. Only the UPIA Section 3-3(b-20)(2) would apply.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example 2: An audit is being performed on 2007 and 2008. Taxpayer is a nonfiler, and it is determined that the tax required to be shown is $3,000 for 2007 and $3,300 for 2008. Taxpayer agrees with the audit findings. It is determined that the 804 base for 2007 is $2,700 and $2,970 for 2008. No ES payments were made, and UPIA Sections 3-3(b-20)(1) and (2) apply. Lastly, the penalties are doubled for failure to participate in the 2010 Amnesty Program. The penalties are shown below:

Year	Section 804	Late-payment Penalty
2007	$540	$90
2008	$594	$100

The Section 804 penalty was applied first, at 10% for each installment paid over 30 days late, which in both cases is the same as 10% of the total 804 base since no ES payments were made. Then the 804 penalty base is subtracted from the total audit liability base, and 15% is the audit late-payment penalty assessed on the balance ($300 in 2007 and $330 in 2008).

Example 3: Same facts as Example 2 above, only 804 exceptions apply to Taxpayer since she is at least 65 and a permanent nursing home resident. Although no Section 804 penalty would be assessed, the UPIA Section 3-3(b-20)(2) late-payment penalty will be assessed on the full audit liability. The penalty rate is 15%, which is then doubled for failure to participate in the 2010 Amnesty Program. The results are shown below:

Year	Section 804	Late-payment Penalty
2008	$0	$990

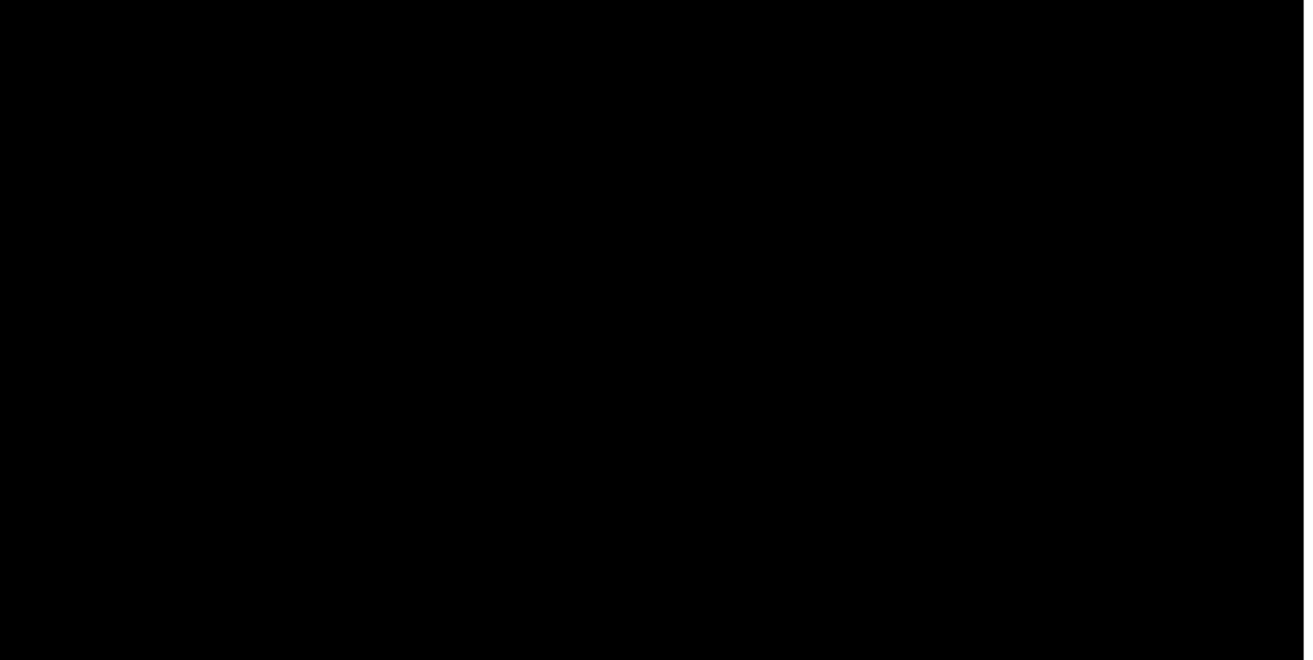
Note that the taxpayer actually pays more in late-payment penalties if no Section 804 is assessed. This is true for both UPIA 3 and UPIA 5, because the Section 804 penalty is capped at 15% for UPIA 3 and 10% for UPIA 5, which is lower than what the audit late payment penalty rate is. Nevertheless, for nonfilers the auditor must assess the Section 804 penalty if it applies.

3. LATE ES PENALTY IN MATH ERROR ADJUSTMENT

When dealing with a non-filer audit, it is important when reducing W-2 credits in a math error adjustment that the Late ES penalty be re-evaluated. Changes to the W-2 credits can trigger Gentax to create Late ES penalties. The auditor must note in the math error letter to the taxpayer when this Late ES penalty is being assessed.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Example of period after math error change for W-2 credits. Note the Late ES penalty.



If a taxpayer files an IL-1040 return in audit as the result of a non-filer inquiry and the taxpayer claims an amount of withholding credit that is subsequently reduced for lack of support, the late ES payment penalty must be evaluated. A reduction in the withholding credit can trigger a late ES payment penalty the taxpayer was not expecting. The auditor must inform the taxpayer in a free-form letter if a late ES payment penalty is being assessed in audit and explain the circumstances that gave rise to the penalty.

B. DONATIONS

Donations (voluntary contributions) may be made to one or more of the listed charitable contribution funds provided through IITA § 509. A listing of most previous and current contribution funds may be found in IITA § 507-507III. Some of these sections have been repealed since the checkoff failed to receive the minimum contributions needed to be retained on the return. The Alzheimer's Disease Research Fund checkoff provision is in 410 ILCS 410/2 and the Illinois Wildlife Protection Fund checkoff provision is in 30 ILCS 155/3.

For tax years 2008 and forward, the list of contribution was moved from Form IL-1040 onto Schedule G, Voluntary Charitable Donations. Schedule G must be completed and attached to the Form IL-1040. Following are the donations available on the 2017 Schedule G as shown below:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Step 2: Donations

Note: Any donation will reduce your refund or increase the amount you owe.

1 Enter the amount you wish to donate to each of the following voluntary charitable donation funds. You may contribute any whole-dollar amount of $1 or more. See the instructions for a detailed description of each fund.

(Whole dollars only) a Wildlife Preservation Fund a ________ .00

Donations support projects to protect and manage native plants and animals in Illinois.

b Alzheimer's Disease Research Fund b ________ .00
Donations support research for the cure and treatment of Alzheimer's Disease.

c Assistance to the Homeless Fund c ________ .00
Donations support local not-for-profit agencies that provide shelter, meals, and services needed by homeless families and individuals.

d Diabetes Research Fund d ________ .00
Donations support research on the detection, prevention, screening, management, and treatment of diabetes.

e Thriving Youth Fund e ________ .00
Donations support community-based programs in Illinois that provide services promoting positive outcomes for youth.

f Criminal Justice Information Projects Fund f ________ .00
Donations fund grants for Illinois police memorials, including academic scholarships and financial assistance.

2 Add Lines a through f. This is your total donation. Enter this amount on Line 34 of your 2017 Form IL-1040. → 2 ________ 0 .00

It is important that the taxpayer realize that once the selection and donation amount is made, this amount is irrevocable and is due. It will either reduce the taxpayer's refund or increase the liability due. If a return is adjusted during processing or an audit, the taxpayer cannot amend to change the contribution amounts.

Example 1: For tax year 2010 Taxpayer A reported an overpayment before donations of $3,000 and $500 in donations, claiming a refund on Line 35 of $2,500. A math error was found during processing, which increased the Line 15 total tax so that Taxpayer A was only overpaid $200 (as opposed to the original overpayment of $3,000) before donations. Taxpayer A, therefore, has a return liability of $300 ($200-$500) and cannot file an amended return to reduce (or increase) the voluntary contributions.

Example 2: For tax year 2008 Taxpayer A reported an overpayment of $3,000 before donations and claimed $500 in donations, resulting in a refund of $2,500. This refund was issued to Taxpayer A. In 2011 an audit was performed on years 2007 and 2008. For 2008, the Schedule CR credit was reduced, resulting in an audit liability of $2,000. Taxpayer A cannot file a Form IL-1040-X to reduce Voluntary Contributions in the attempt to reduce the audit liability.

XVII. REFUND OR AMOUNT OWED

A. REFUND

Any overpayment net of penalties and donations is available for refund, credit carryforward, or a combination of the two. This amount, however, is still available for

Department offset against any other liability with the Department, as per IITA § 909(a). After any offsets, the remaining amount is available for refund.

The Department may also withhold refunds for liabilities with other agencies. This includes liabilities with other states, the IRS, debts owed to the State of Illinois, child support, and certain fees owed to the Clerk of the Circuit Court. Ref: IITA § 911.3.

1. REFUND APPLIED TO ESTIMATED TAX FOR A LATER TAX YEAR (CREDIT CARRYFORWARD)

Previously, the taxpayer could choose to apply all or part of a refund to the next year's estimated tax liability as provided for in IITA § 909(b). IAC § 100.9400(b) also addresses credit carryforwards. Effective January 1, 2015, PA 98-0825 provides for a change to IITA § 909 as to the application of overpayments as credits, credit carryforwards (CCFs). The taxpayer can now specify that the CCF be applied to any future tax year, not just to the next year's tax liability. Requests for a CCF are now allowed on the amended return.

- The credit is to be applied depending on whether an original or amended return was filed.
  - For original returns, the CCF is applied to the following year.
  - For amended returns, unless the taxpayer specifies otherwise, the CCF should be applied to the next ES payment that is due.

- Original returns - It must be requested on a timely filed original return, and once made is irrevocable. This means that the credit must be claimed on a Form IL-1040 filed before the extended due date.

- Late-filers and nonfilers cannot request a credit. However, although the credit would not be honored, any overpayment would be refunded.

- Amended returns – a CCF can be requested.

- If a credit is reduced due to Department offset, a notice is sent to the taxpayer providing them an opportunity to pay the balance due to avoid being underpaid in the following tax year and potentially facing an 804 penalty.

In an audit situation, a nonfiler could have had timely estimated payments and claim a timely return was filed requesting a credit carryforward, but if the taxpayer cannot substantiate that a timely return was filed with the Department (i.e. copies of certified mailing receipts), the credit would not be honored, and any overpayment would be refunded. By the time an audit occurs, any net overpayment that results from an audit will be refunded and never applied as a credit to the following year, regardless of any underpayment or 804 penalty in the subsequent tax period.

2. OFFSETS WITHIN AN AUDIT PERIOD

It is not uncommon in an audit including multiple tax years for the taxpayer to be overpaid in one year and underpaid in others. The taxpayer may request that the overpayment be used to offset the underpaid liability. Such offset requests should be made in writing by the taxpayer, authorizing the auditor to “offset” within the audit period.

B. AMOUNT OWED

A variety of payment options are available either by MyTaxIllinois, credit card, and check or money order. See the Form IL-1040 instructions for details on payment options.

1. LATE FILING OR LATE PAYMENT

If either the return is not filed, or the tax is not paid timely, penalties and interest may be owed. The Department will issue a bill. However, the taxpayer may figure the penalties by completing and submitting Form IL-2210, Computation of Penalties for Individuals (see Section XVI.A.1. above).

- More information on the penalties and interest can be seen in Chapter 42, Penalty & Interest.

2. FRIVOLOUS RETURNS

In addition to any other penalty provided for under the IITA, a $500 penalty is imposed upon any individual who files a purported return (Form IL-1040) that does not contain information to establish correct tax liability or contains substantially incorrect information which would deem the return to be “frivolous”. This penalty for a frivolous return applies to returns filed for taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1987. Ref: IITA § 1006 and 86 IAC § 100.5050.

The filing of a frivolous return may apply in a “tax protester (or protestor)” situation. A “tax protester” is someone who refuses to pay a tax on constitutional or legal grounds. Many will claim the tax laws are unconstitutional or otherwise invalid, while some refuse to file a tax return or file returns with no income or tax data supplied (frivolous returns).

XVIII. SIGN AND DATE

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

The taxpayer (and spouse, if filing jointly) must sign and date the return. If filing for a minor as a parent or guardian, the parent (or guardian) must sign and date the return. IITA § 503(a) states that if a signature is on the return, then it is presumed to be the authentic signature.

A return that has not been signed is considered "unprocessable", and a non-filer penalty may apply. IITA § 503(e) provides that if a taxpayer fails to sign a return within 30 days after proper notice and demand for signature by the Department, then the liability is deemed assessed and the taxpayer forfeits any overpayment if not provided within 3 years of the filing date.

This also applies to any amended return that the taxpayer would provide the auditor during the audit.

XIX. AUDIT PURPOSE, FLOW AND CONCLUSION

A. PURPOSE

The purpose of an IIT audit is to verify that the federal tax information (FTI) affecting the state return is correctly reported and to check for any mathematical or procedural errors on the Form IL-1040 and/or any attached schedules. Normally, audit assignments on Form IL-1040 filers are selected for either a particular issue or compliance checks but may also be initiated as a result of referrals made by other auditors or other divisions within the Department, such as Individual Processing Division, or as a result of a Sales Tax audit.

B. FLOW

Conceptually, the IIT audit will flow much like a BIT audit. Refer to the audit procedure guidelines found in Chapter 20. Although Chapter 20 is written to address BIT audits, much of the information can be utilized in an IIT audit.

NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the "Audit Submission and Review" section of that chapter.

1. INITIATION

Since most IIT audits are performed in-house, the auditor does not normally conduct a meeting with the taxpayer in person, as in a BIT audit. Most communication with the taxpayer will be via telephone, email, and/or written correspondence.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The audit initiation letter (EDA-135) will be systemically generated from GenTax when the RAS assigns the audit to the auditor [stage – assigned started]. Letters are mailed in the overnight batch process from Springfield. If there is an issue with the taxpayer's address, the auditor will need to invalidate the audit initiation letter and manually create a new one. The new letter will batch print from Springfield.

- See Chapter 20, Exhibit E – How to Create the EDA-135.

2. CONDUCTING THE AUDIT

Refer to Chapter 20 for audit procedure guidelines.

NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the "Audit Submission and Review" section of that chapter.

3. AUDIT EXPANSION

If it is determined that the audit needs to be expanded to include additional years after the initiation letter has been sent, an Audit Expansion Letter (EDA-136) will need to be sent to the taxpayer. Refer to Chapter 20 for instructions on generating this letter.

4. GENTAX FEDERAL TAX INFORMATION BANNER

Since February 29, 2016, a ~~new~~ message (below) is displayed in Gentax when data is presented that contains Federal Tax Information (FTI).

The message includes a link (i.e. click here) to the IRS required procedure that must be followed if the screen is printed. Therefore, it is highly recommended that screens only be printed when absolutely necessary.

If you print a screen from GenTax that has FTI on it, you must take the following steps:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

1. Print the IDR-487-G and staple it to the front of the page containing FTI.
2. Complete the Tracking Log and email it to the Disclosure Officer at REV.DisclosureOfficer@illinois.gov immediately.
3. Security measures must be taken for this screen-print by storing it in a secure area such as a locked desk or filing cabinet, vault, locked room, etc. when not being worked. Any document, report, form, or correspondence that is FTI or contains Social Security numbers, banking information, or entity-specific tax return data should be treated as a confidential document and should be secured at all times.
4. Add an entry on the IDR-487-G any time an individual views the FTI information. Each time an individual looks at the information must be documented.
5. When you are finished with the screen print, it must be destroyed immediately (placed in a locked shred bin for destruction). You must email the Disclosure Officer the log again indicating the date the document was placed in the locked shred bin.

For additional information pertaining to Federal Tax Information, see AM Ch 1.

C. CONCLUSION

NOTE: Audit Flow procedures have changed. Refer to AM Chapter 20 for the new Audit Flow process in the "Audit Submission and Review" section of that chapter.

Effective July 1, 2019 all audits are required to be submitted electronically utilizing the Audit File Template folder, which will be zipped and attached as one item in Gentax for review and submission. The organization of the folders and file names are stipulated in the IT Index, which is included in the template folder and should be completed in lieu of the EDA-51 (the EDA-51 is no longer required). Refer to AMU IT19-05 Electronic Audit Submission – Zipped Folder, which has been incorporated into Chapter 20.

TAXPAYER PROTESTS IN UNAGREED AUDITS

The taxpayer has several avenues in which to "protest" unagreed audits once a Notice of Deficiency (NOD) or a Notice of Claim Denial (NOCD) is issued.

- See Chapter 20, Section XII – Taxpayer Protests, for complete information on these avenues available to taxpayers.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

XX. DEFAULTED NODS – RECEIPT OF ADDITIONAL TAXPAYER INFORMATION

This section provides guidance for Review and Perfection Sections when issues that arise after the default of the NOD and the receipt of additional correspondence/information/documentation/returns from a taxpayer. The main concern is when the audit has already been closed, but then the taxpayer provides additional information. When a closed audit is re-opened, all the financial transactions associated with that audit are lost, so re-opening that audit creates problems. The following provides different scenarios and the treatment without re-opening the audit:

1) The taxpayer provides proof of previous payment or withholding. The tax amount is not changed, but the balance due is affected. A signature may or may not be received, but the account is adjusted, and the balance is modified to reflect the withholding or verified payment.

   Do not re-open the previous audit, but just adjust the account and issue a revised statement of account.

2) The taxpayer provides information (not a return) supporting either a deduction or credit. The tax may or may not change, but deductions and credits are privileges, not rights. Taxpayer signature is required.

In order to be allowed a deduction or credit, the taxpayer must timely file a return to claim such credits and deductions. The exception is withholding, as the Department allows a credit for withholding even where the taxpayer fails to file a timely return. If the Department has issued a notice disallowing a credit/deduction taken on a return, and the taxpayer later provides sufficient documentation, the original notice can be revised without audit re-opening.

3) The taxpayer files an original return. Taxpayer signature is required and is usually present because it is a return.

Processable: If the return is processable, adjust the account, cancel any prior notices, and re-issue any appropriate notice based on the filing.

Not processable: If the return is not processable, a letter of explanation should be sent to the taxpayer.

Note: If the return is not timely, the taxpayer is not entitled to claim any deductions or credits, except for withholding and prior payments. This should be a new work item, not something that re-opens the prior audit.

4) Adjustments that seem against statute [IITA 903(a)(2) and 904(d)]:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The taxpayer has not paid, or there is no signature, or they did not timely protest the NOD. The Department (Audit) is well within OUR rights to actually request the proper method of correction be followed.

Our records can always be adjusted to reflect information provided by the taxpayer. If the audit is closed and sent to stores, the taxpayer should be advised to file an amended return with all appropriate attachments in order to adjust the account accordingly.

Note: No refunds can be issued unless the amended return is filed within the appropriate statute of limitations.

5) Collection activity present:
NOD has defaulted. The taxpayer files an amended return to reduce the liability – no payments made or reflected on the filing. Collections takes levy action and seizes funds for liability prior to processing of the audit. The question is whether the taxpayer has to fix the amended to reflect the money (payments), or can the Department just adjust accordingly.

The Department can correct the amended return to reflect the proper payments and issue the appropriate refund (if within statute). The taxpayer does not need to submit another return to reflect amounts obtained through the levy.

XX. EXHIBITS

A. EXHIBIT A – SCHEDULE NR – PART-YEAR RESIDENT EXAMPLE

In 2009, John Taxpayer was an Illinois resident, until he quit his job at the end of August and moved out of state permanently (to Hawaii). Starting in October of that same year, John went to work at his brother's surf board shop as a salesman. For the 2009 tax year, the following information will be used by John to complete his Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR as a part-year resident:

- Federal Form 1040, line 7 (wages, salaries, tips, etc.) - $80,000 – John's Illinois wages were $74,000, while his Hawaii wages were $6,000.
- Federal Form 1040, line 8a (taxable interest income) - $2,000 – all of this interest income was earned through Certificates of Deposit (CDs) that John had while living in Illinois.
- Federal Form 1040, line 21 (other income) - $50,000- money that John had won playing the Illinois State Lottery while an Illinois resident.
- John is 48 years old, single, and has no dependents, so he qualifies for only one exemption on the federal Form 1040.

To determine John's Illinois base income and the tax before recapture of investment credits for Form IL-1040, Schedule NR must be completed. John's 2009 Schedule NR figures appear as follows, which show that John's Illinois Base Income from Schedule NR is $126,000.00 and the tax before recapture of investment credits is $3,723.00. Both of these figures will be used by John to complete his Form IL-1040.

46 Subtract Line 45 from Line 41. If Line 45 is larger than Line 41, write zero. This is your Illinois base income. Write this amount on your Form IL-1040, Line 12.		126,000.00
47 Write the base income from Form IL-1040, Line 9.	132,000.00

51 Subtract Line 50 from Line 46. This is your Illinois net income.		124,090.00
52 Multiply the amount on Line 51 by 3% (.03). This amount may not be less than zero. This is your tax before recapture of investment credits. Write this amount on your Form IL-1040, Line 13.		3,723.00

B. EXHIBIT B – SCHEDULE NR – NONRESIDENT EXAMPLE

Sue Smith is a resident of Gary, Indiana, but works in Chicago for an architectural firm during the week. On Saturday nights, Sue works as a bartender at a local bar & grill in Gary. For the 2009 tax year, the following information will be used by Sue to complete her Form IL-1040 and Schedule NR as a nonresident:

- Federal Form 1040, line 7 (wages, salaries, tips, etc.) - $50,000 –Sue's wages earned in Illinois were $45,000, while $5,000 was wages/tips earned by bartending.

- Federal Form 1040, line 8a (taxable interest income) - $500 – all of this interest income was earned through a savings account that Sue has at her bank in Indiana.

- Sue is 34 years old, single, and has no dependents, so she qualifies for only one exemption on the federal Form 1040.

To determine Sue's Illinois base income and the tax before recapture of investment credits for Form IL-1040, Schedule NR must be completed. Sue's 2009 Schedule NR figures appear as follows, which shows that Sue's Illinois Base Income from Schedule NR is $45,000.00 and the tax before recapture of investment credits is $1,297.00. Both of these figures will be used by Sue to complete her Form IL-1040.

C. EXHIBIT C – HOW TO COMPLETE SCHEDULE CR – 2010 EXAMPLE

During tax year 2010, the taxpayer was a full-year Illinois resident. However, he had rental income ($7,000) earned outside of Illinois which was taxed by the other state. Schedule CR, Column A, Step 2 will equal his federal return, while Column A, Step 3 is his Illinois 1040 through Line 9. The taxpayer's completed 2010 Schedule CR, Steps 2 through 6, is shown below:

Step 2: Figure the Illinois and non-Illinois portions of your federal adjusted gross income

Write the amounts in Column A exactly as reported on
- your federal return if you were an Illinois resident, or
- the equivalent line of your Schedule NR, Column B if you were a part-year resident.

Read the instructions before completing this step.

Income	Line	Column A Total (Whole dollars only)	Column B Non-Illinois Portion (Whole dollars only)
1 Wages, salaries, tips, etc. (federal Form 1040 or 1040A, Line 7; 1040EZ, Line 1)	1	75,000 .00	.00
2 Taxable interest income (federal Form 1040 or 1040A, Line 8a; 1040EZ, Line 2)	2	1,000 .00	.00
3 Ordinary dividend income (federal Form 1040 or 1040A, Line 9a)	3	.00	.00
4 Taxable refunds, credits, or offsets of state and local income tax (federal Form 1040, Line 10)	4	.00
5 Alimony received (federal Form 1040, Line 11)	5	.00
6 Business income or loss (federal Form 1040, Line 12)	6	.00	.00
7 Capital gain or loss (federal Form 1040, Line 13 or 1040A, Line 10)	7	.00	.00
8 Other gains or losses (federal Form 1040, Line 14)	8	.00	.00
9 Taxable IRA distributions (federal Form 1040, Line 15b; or 1040A, Line 11b)	9	.00

Step 3: Figure your Illinois additions and subtractions

In Column A, write the total amounts from your Form IL-1040. You must read the instructions for Column B to properly complete this step.

Illinois Adjustments		Column A Form IL-1040 Total (Whole dollars only)	Column B Non-Illinois Portion (Whole dollars only)
34	Federally tax-exempt interest income (Form IL-1040, Line 2)	34 500 .00	.00
35	Other additions (Form IL-1040, Line 3)	35 .00	.00
36	Add Columns A and B, Lines 33, 34, and 35.	36 80,500 .00	7,000 .00
37	Federally taxed Social Security and retirement income (Form IL-1040, Line 5)	37 .00

39	Other subtractions (Form IL-1040, Line 7)	39 200 .00	.00
40	Add Columns A and B, Lines 37 through 39.	40 200 .00	0 .00
41	Subtract Columns A and B, Line 40 from Line 36. If Line 40 is larger than Line 36, write zero.	41 80,300 .00	7,000 .00

Step 4: Figure your Schedule CR decimal

Decimal		Column A	Column B
42	Write the amount from Line 41, Column A and Column B.	42 80,300 .00	7,000 .00
43	Divide Column B, Line 42 by Column A, Line 42 (carry to three decimal places). Write the appropriate decimal. If Column B, Line 42 is greater than Column A, Line 42, write 1.000. Write this amount on Step 6, Line 53.	43	.087

Step 5: Part-year residents only (Full year residents, go to Step 6.)

Part-Year Only
44	Write the base income from your IL-1040, Line 9.	44 .00
45	Divide Column A, Line 42 by Line 44 (carry to 3 decimal places).	45 .
46	Write the exemption amount from Form IL-1040, Line 10.	46 .00
47	Multiply Line 45 by Line 46.	47 .00
48	Subtract Line 47 from Column A, Line 42.	48 .00
49	Multiply Line 48 by 3% (.03). Write this amount on Step 6, Line 52, and continue on to Step 6, Line 50.	49 .00

Step 6: Figure your credit

Credit for Tax Paid to Other States

50 If you are claiming a credit for tax paid to any of the states listed below, check the box for the appropriate state.

☐ Iowa ☐ Kentucky ☐ Michigan ☐ Wisconsin

51	Write the total amount of income tax paid to other states on Illinois base income (see instructions).	51 280 .00
52	Illinois Residents: Write your Illinois tax due from Form IL-1040, Line 13. Part-year Residents: Write the amount from Step 5, Line 49.	52 2,349 .00
53	Write the decimal amount from Step 4, Line 43 here.	53 .087
54	Multiply Line 52 by Line 53.	54 204 .00
55	Compare the amounts on Lines 51 and 54. Write the lesser amount here and on Form IL-1040, Line 17. This is your tax credit.	55 204 .00

On the taxpayer's 2010 Form IL-1040, the tax credit amount (for income tax paid to another state) of $204 would be entered on Line 17.

D. EXHIBIT D – HOW TO COMPLETE SCHEDULE CR – 2006 EXAMPLE

Using the same taxpayer facts from Exhibit C above, the 2006 Schedule CR can be completed. Assume that the state in question was Indiana, and the taxpayer correctly calculated the Column B double-taxed income and Column C tax amount correctly per the Publication 111 formulas for Indiana as shown.

Comparison Formulas for Schedule CR
Information is based on 2006 forms and Regulation Section 100.2197

State	Necessary Attachments to CR Schedule	Income Equivalent to Enter in Schedule CR, Column B	Tax Equivalent to Enter in Schedule CR, Column C	Comments
Indiana	IT-40PNR Schedule A Schedule D	IT-40PNR, Line 3 Plus Schedule D, Lines 1, 2, 9, and any human services deduction (#605), Indiana partnership long-term care policy premiums deduction (#608), and medical savings contributions (#612) on Line 11 Minus Schedule A, Line 24B Minus any valuation limitation or ridesharing income on IL-1040, Line 9, and included in IT-40PNR, Line 3,	IT-40NPR Line 17 Minus Lines 14, 15, 16, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25

Lastly, assume the taxpayer had one exemption, the Illinois tax was $2,349.00, and the Indiana tax paid and allowable per Publication 111 is $280.00. Shown below is the Schedule CR:

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. Step 2: Figure your credit

1 Residents: Write your Illinois base income from Form IL-1040, Line 11.
Part-year residents: Write only the amount from Step 5, Line 50 of Schedule NR, that you earned while an Illinois resident. 1 80,300.00

2 See instructions before completing Columns A, B, and C.

	Column A: State (Two letter state abbreviation)	Column A: Name of other taxing district (i.e., county, city or local - see instructions)	Column B: Illinois base income taxed by other state (may not exceed Line 1 - see instructions)	Column C: Income tax paid to other state (on the income shown in Column B - see instructions for proration example)
a	IN		7,000.00	280.00
c d e f g
h

3 Add Column C, Lines 2a through 2h (and the amounts from Column C of any additional pages you attached). This is the total income tax paid to other states on Illinois base income. 3 280.00

4 Write your double-taxed base income from Column B (and the amounts from Column B of any additional pages you attached). This amount may not exceed Line 1. (See instructions.) 4 7,000.00

5 Write your Illinois tax due from Form IL-1040, Line 15, or from Schedule 4255 Worksheet, Line 4, which is found in Form IL-1040 Instructions, Step 6. 5 2,349.00

6 Divide Line 4 by Line 1. (Carry to five decimal places.) This figure may not be greater than 1.00000. 6 0.08717

7 Multiply Line 5 by Line 6. 7 204.76000

8 Compare the amounts on Lines 3, 5, and 7. Write the lesser amount here and on Form IL-1040, Step 7, Line 19. This is your tax credit. 8 205.00

Attach this schedule and copies of your out-of-state tax returns to your Form IL-1040.

The tax credit allowable would be $205 (rounded), which is the lesser of Lines 3, 5, and 7, which are tax paid to other states on Illinois base income, the Illinois tax due, and the Illinois tax due times the quotient of double-taxed base income divided by Illinois base income. As indicated at the bottom of the Schedule CR, the taxpayer must include copies of all out-of-state tax returns being claimed.

III. GENERAL INFORMATION

In order to properly perform an audit, or evaluate an account for audit, it is necessary to become familiar with the terminology used in income tax audits. In some cases, certain descriptive terms may have special or various meanings. The meaning of the terms must be clear and generally understood in order to communicate properly. Many of the terms are defined in great detail in other sections of this manual; in those instances, only a cross-reference is provided here.

This chapter should never be cited as authority for any of the definitions it contains. Except where a statute or regulation is expressly cited as the source of a definition, the definitions in this chapter are not legal definitions that can be used as a basis for applying the law to a taxpayer's situation. For example, the definition of "Manufacturer" in HH cannot be used to determine whether or not a taxpayer qualifies for the replacement tax credit, which is allowed only to retailers, manufacturers and Accrual of discount on a bond means to include the difference between the price of a bond bought at an original discount and the par value of the bond in income ratably over the life of the bond, and to make corresponding adjustments to basis in the bond.

B. ADJUDICATE

To hear and settle by judicial procedure, a judicial determination of a fact, and the entry of a judgment.

C. AFFILIATED COMPANY

In general, two companies are affiliated when one owns a majority of the voting stock of the other, or when both are majority-owned subsidiaries of a single shareholder.

D. AFFILIATED GROUP

Per the federal consolidated return regulations, an affiliated group consists of one or more chains of includable corporations connected through stock ownership with a common parent that is an includable corporation, provided that the following two requirements are met:

1) The common parent must directly own stock possessing at least 80% of the total voting power of at least one of the other includable corporations and having a value equal to at least 80% of the total value of the voting stock of the corporation, and

2) Stock meeting the 80% test in each includable corporation other than the common parent must be owned directly by one or more of the other includable corporations.

E. ALLOCATION

The common term for sourcing non-business income to a particular state or states, as compared to apportionment of business income. For income tax purposes, partnership income and non-business income can be allocated or apportioned.

F. AMORTIZED BOND PREMIUM

A bond premium is the amount paid for bonds that is in excess of the face value of the bonds.

- On tax exempt bonds this premium must be amortized
- On taxable bonds an election can be made to amortize the premium

The holder of a bond is allowed to amortize over the life of a bond the amount of bond premium they paid, using the amortization to reduce the amount of taxable interest income from the bond each year and to reduce the taxpayer's basis in the bond. Basis will be reduced to face value, if the bond is held to maturity.

An exception to this is a dealer in bonds or anyone who holds them mainly for sale to customers in the course of a trade or business is not allowed to claim a federal deduction for amortized bond premium. Instead the premium is part of the cost of the bonds.

If disallowed as a federal deduction by the applicable section of the Internal Revenue Code, the following items will be a subtraction modification for Illinois filing purposes:

- Amortized bond premium – IRC § 171(a)(2)
- Expenses incurred from federally tax exempt income – IRC § 265(a)(1)
- Interest expense – IRC § 265(a)(2) and IRC § 291(a)(3)

G. ANGEL INVESTMENT

A purchase of an equity interest, or any other expenditure, that is made by a person (or network of persons) who reviews new businesses or proposed new businesses for potential investment of their own monies. Generally, the investing entities are a trust, business, Limited Liability Corporation or an investment fund.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Insurance companies are regulated by state insurance commissions and are required to file, annually, detailed financial statements (Annual Statements) with those regulatory bodies. Annual Statements are verified and audited by Insurance Commission examiners. The National Association of Insurance Commissioners has prescribed a standardized financial report called the Annual Statement or Convention Form.

An Annual Statement will contain the following information:

1) Balance Sheet.
2) Summary of Operations.
3) Analysis of Operations.
4) Analysis of increases in reserves.
5) Exhibits supporting items on the balance sheet and the summary of operations.
6) General questions.
7) Various supporting schedules detailing items on the balance sheet and the summary of operations.
8) Schedule T which is used to make state apportionment of the premiums.

I. CALENDAR YEAR

January 1 through December 31 of any given year.

J. COMPUTER INDUSTRY DEFINITIONS

1. APPLICATION PROGRAM (APP)

A computer program that is applied to tasks outside of the computer. For example, a word processing program or spreadsheet program is an application program.

2. ACCESS TIME

The access time is the time interval between the instant that the CPU requests a transfer of data to or from a storage device and the instant such an operation is completed.

3. ARITHMETIC-LOGIC UNIT (ALU)

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The part of a computer processor (CPU) that carries out arithmetic and logic operations on the operands in computer instruction words.

4. AUTOMATIC DATA PROCESSING (ADP)

Data processing performed by electronic or electrical machines with a minimum of human assistance or intervention. The term is applied to both electro-mechanical punched card data processing and electronic data processing.

5. BIOMETRIC

Automated methods of recognizing a person based on a physiological or behavioral characteristic. Among the features measured are face, fingerprints, hand geometry, handwriting, iris, retinal, vein and voice. Biometric technologies are becoming the foundation of an extensive array of highly secure identification and personal verification solutions. Biometric-based authentication applications include workstation, network, and domain access, single sign-on, application logon, data protection, remote access to resources, transaction security and Web security.

6. CENTRAL PROCESSING UNIT (CPU)

The unit of the computer system that includes the circuits which control the interpretation and execution of instructions. In many computer systems, the CPU includes the arithmetic-logic unit, the control unit and the primary storage unit. The CPU is also known as "the central processor" or the "main frame."

7. CLOUD COMPUTING

The practice of using a network of remote servers hosted on the Internet to store, manage and process data, rather than a local server or a personal computer. Cloud computing structure allows access to information as long as an electronic device has access to the web, which allows for work remotely since a user does not have to be in a specific place to have access.

8. CONTROL UNIT

A control unit is a sub-unit of the CPU, which controls and directs the operations of the entire computer system. The control unit retrieves computer instructions in proper sequence, interprets each instruction, and thus directs the other parts of the computer system in the implementation of a computer program.

9. DISK DRIVE

A disk drive is a device, which can transfer data to and from a disk and send that data to and from a computer to which it is connected.

10. DISK OPERATING SYSTEM (DOS)

14. FIREWALL

A set of related programs, located at a network gateway server that protects the resources of a private network from users from other networks. A computer firewall (most often a program run on the PC) limits the data that can pass through it and protects a networked server or client machine from damage by unauthorized users, such as hackers or spammers.

15. FLASH OR THUMB DRIVE

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A removable data storage device, usually about thumb sized which can be plugged into a PC's USB port. Seen by the PC as an extra drive, this allows the user to store and carry large amounts of data in a convenient portable size.

16. HARDWARE

Hardware is the physical computer equipment. It encompasses all of the electrical or mechanical devices including the circuit boards, monitors, and disk drives.

17. INTERFACE

An interface is a shared boundary, such as the boundary between two systems. For example, the boundary between a computer and its peripheral devices is an interface.

18. MANAGEMENT INFORMATION SYSTEM (MIS)

An information system that provides the information required to support management decision making.

19. MICROPROGRAMMING

Microprogramming is the use of special software (microprograms) to perform the functions of special hardware (electronic control circuitry). Microprograms stored in a read-only storage module of the control unit interpret the machine-language instructions of a computer program and decode them into elementary micro-instructions, which are then executed.

20. MODEM (MODULATOR-DE-MODULATOR)

A modem allows computers to communicate over a phone line. It is a device, which converts the digital signals from input/output devices into appropriate frequencies at a transmission terminal and converts them back into digital signals at a receiving terminal. There is a modem at each end of a communication channel (i.e. telephone lines) converting electrical signals from pulse to wave form and vice versa. A modem may also be called a data set, or a line adapter.

An acoustic coupler can also perform this function. The coupler allows an input/output device to be connected to a standard office telephone without the need for special wiring.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

21. MULTI FUNCTION DEVICE (MFD)

A combined printer, scanner, photocopier and fax machine.

22. OPEN SOURCE

Software in which the program's source code is freely available to the public. Unlike commercial software, open source programs can be modified and distributed to anyone. Typically, the software is free to download and use.

23. OPERATING SYSTEM

Every computer has an operating system, which can be viewed as a "master program" that runs automatically when the computer is switched on and continues to run until the computer is turned off. This system is responsible for the many routine tasks such as: providing icons and menus, controlling the various disk drives and screens, and moving the pointer whenever the mouse is moved. The most widely used PC operating system is Microsoft Windows.

24. OPERATIONAL INFORMATION SYSTEM (OIS)

An information system that collects, processes and stores data generated by the operational systems of an organization and produces data and information for input into a management information system or for the control of an operational system.

25. OPTICAL SCANNER

An optical scanner is a device that optically scans printed or written data and generates their digital representations.

26. PERIPHERAL EQUIPMENT

Peripheral equipment is any unit of equipment, except the CPU and its working storage and control units that may provide the system with outside communication. All of the input/output units and auxiliary storage units of a computer system are considered peripheral equipment.

27. PROGRAM

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A program is a list of instructions for a computer to follow to achieve a particular response. It is written in a programming language, which can be stored in the computer's memory.

Software can be stored on many different mediums. Currently, magnetic tape and disks are the most common. Magnetic tape and disks are only considered software when programs are contained on the medium.

In addition to hardware and software, the following terms are commonly used by the computer industry.

28. RAM/ROM

Random-access memory (RAM) is the read/write memory that provides temporary storage of data while the computer is operating. The contents of RAM are lost if the power supply is shut off.

Read-only memory (ROM) is the control memory for instructions and fixed (unchanging or permanent) data. Its contents cannot be altered during the operation of the computer. The retention of its contents is not dependent upon a constant supply of power.

29. ROUTER

A device used to connect networks together, for example so that several PCs can share one internet connection.

30. SEGMENTATION

The division of a program into parts so that each part can be stored within a computer's working storage and contains the necessary linkages to other parts. Each part thus formed is called a segment. Segmentation makes it possible to execute programs, which exceed the capacity of a computer's working storage.

31. SOFTWARE

The term software includes any type of program, instructions or data, which tells the hardware what to do. The software is the computer program, which make possible the use of the computer by a user. Typical software items on a computer include such things as system programs, assemblers, compilers and operating systems, as well as programs for scientific calculations and statistical analysis.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

32. SUITE

A group of programs which carry out different tasks but are intended to work together, such as Microsoft Office (Word, Excel, Access, etc.).

33. TIME-SHARING

The use of a given device by a number of other devices, programs or human users, one at a time and in rapid succession. Time-sharing is also a technique or system for furnishing computing services to multiple users simultaneously, while providing rapid responses to each of the users. Time sharing computer systems usually employ multiprogramming and/or multiprocessing techniques, and they are often capable of serving users at remote locations via a data communications network.

34. UNIVERSAL SERIAL BUS (USB)

A standard type of connection port, used to attach extra devices such as a scanner to a computer. Currently, many PCs use USB to connect the mouse and keyboard.

35. WEBCAM

A digital camera capable of downloading images to a computer, for transmission over the Internet or other network.

36. WI-FI

(WIreless FIdelity) A method of connecting computers to a network without cables, using small radio transmitter/receivers built in to most portable devices and broadband modems.

K. CONSIGNMENT

A transfer of goods from the owner to another party, while still retaining ownership until the goods are sold, who will act as an agent for the owner in selling the goods. REF: BLACK'S.

L. CONSOLIDATED RETURN

A federal income tax return which includes the operations of an affiliated group of corporations. REF: IRC § 1501-1505.

M. DISCOVERY

Pre-trial phase in a lawsuit in which each party, through the laws of civil procedure, can obtain evidence from the opposing party by means of discovery devices including requests for answers to interrogatories, requests for production of documents, requests for admissions and depositions. Discovery can be obtained from non-parties through the use of subpoenas. In Civil Court or in administrative hearings, discovery is the procedure by which either side obtains knowledge or possession of facts, titles, documents or other information to which the opposing party previously had exclusive knowledge or possession.

N. DIVISION

An operating unit within an enterprise which is not separately chartered. REF: BLACK'S.

O. DOMESTIC INTERNATIONAL SALES CORPORATION (DISC)

Commonly referred to as a DISC, this type of corporation was a pre-1985 system of federal tax deferral for export income. DISCs were held to be an export subsidy in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and were generally replaced by a system of foreign sales corporations, FSCs. A DISC is a US corporation, usually a subsidiary, whose income is primarily attributable to exports. Income tax on a portion of the DISC's income is generally deferred for a long period.

P. ECONOMIES OF SCALE

The savings realized by related parties when an activity is performed on behalf of all parties. Centralized purchasing is a good example of this. Many times, items purchased for a number of companies from one vendor will allow that vendor to provide a substantially greater discount than could be allowed if each company purchased the same merchandise on its own. The savings realized by having a centralized purchasing operation is an example of economies of scale.

Q. ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY DEFINITIONS

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A listing of terms, which are commonly used by motion picture and film producers, their definitions and/or possible uses in auditing appear below.

1. ADVERTISING REPORT

   A report which lists information on films "in release".

2. DAILY SHOOTING SCHEDULES

   These schedules reflect what was done, who was there and how much time was spent on a specific project for a given day. The information on these schedules is useful in determining the location of payroll and property for the apportionment factors.

3. EMPLOYMENT CONTRACTS

   An agreement between employer and employee that identifies the responsibilities of both parties. These should be reviewed because, especially when major stars or writers are involved, they may specify the location where services must be performed.

4. FILM

   A film is a physical embodiment of a play, story or other literary, commercial, educational or artistic work (e.g. a motion picture, video tape, disk or other similar medium) except that it does not include news or sports film produced for telecast. Videocassettes or disks intended for home viewing are not considered films.

   Each episode of a series of films produced for television shall constitute a separate film even though the series relates to the same principle subject and is produced during one or more television seasons.

5. RELEASE

   There are many terms used in this business relating to the release of films.

6. IN RELEASE

   The date on which the amortization of a film begins. This date is also referred to in the motion picture industry as the "accounting release date".

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

For films owned by a television network, "in release" means the date on which the film is first telecast.

7. RELEASE DATE

The date on which a film is placed in service. A film is placed in service when it is first telecast or exhibited to the primary audience for which the film was created. Thus, a motion picture theater film is placed in service when it is first publicly exhibited for entertainment purposes and an educational film is placed in service when it is first exhibited for instructional purposes. Each episode of a television series is placed in service when it is first telecast. A film is not placed in service merely because it is completed and therefore in a condition or state of readiness and availability for telecast or exhibition, or merely because it is telecast or exhibited to prospective exhibitors, sponsors, or purchasers, or is shown in a "sneak preview" before a select audience.

8. RE-RELEASE

The release of any film for general theatrical and foreign distribution, syndication, or television networks exhibition at any time after its initial distribution (release period) has terminated.

9. RATE CARD VALUES

Standard Rate and Data Services, Inc publish these values. The rate card values represent the amount of TV viewers receiving certain programs. The values are used to establish billing rates and allocate revenues to TV station affiliates.

10. RECEIPTS REPORT

This report will provide, on an annual basis, an accounting of payments of films' residuals.

11. SUBSCRIBER

A subscriber to a subscription television telecaster is the individual residence or other outlet, which is the ultimate recipient of the transmission.

12. SYNDICATION

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

An association of individuals or a joint venture or short-term partnership, applied principally to a film-distribution operation, united for the prosecution of some enterprise requiring large amounts of capital. Its existence is often evidenced by an informal exchange of letters among participants, appointment of a manager with specified powers, transacting business and keeping an independent set of books under the manager's direction, and concluding with a windup of the business at hand and with a final distribution of the assets.

13. TELECAST

A telecast is the transmission of an electronic signal by radiowaves or microwaves or by wires, lines, coaxial cables, wave-guides or other tangible conduits of communication.

R. (FOREIGN CURRENCY) EXCHANGE GAIN/LOSS

An exchange gain or loss occurs when an accrual taxpayer has a transaction where the exchange rate between the taxpayer's currency and a foreign currency changes between the time a purchase or sale is consummated and the time of actual payment or receipt. Because transactions of this type may increase or decrease taxable income, the taxpayer's earnings must be adjusted to reflect the exchange gain or loss.

S. 52/53 WEEK TAXABLE YEAR

A taxable year that ends on the same day of the week every year. Therefore, it is always 52 or 53 weeks long. A 52/53 week year may end on the last specified day of the week that occurs during the final month of each taxable year (e.g., the last Saturday in December) or on the specified day of the week that is closest to the last day of the final month of each taxable year (e.g., the Sunday closest to June 30). For purposes of transition and effective date rules expressed in terms such as “for taxable years ending on or after” a certain date, a 52/53 week year is treated as ending on the last day of the month that is used to determine the end of the 52/53 week year and the next taxable year is treated as beginning on the first day of the next month. For example, a 52/53 week year ending Saturday, July 2, is treated as ending on June 30, and the next taxable year is treated as beginning on July 1, for transition rule and effective date purposes. REF: IRC § 441(f).

T. FOREIGN DIVIDEND GROSS-UP

The amount included in a domestic parent's Federal Taxable Income for the taxes paid by a foreign subsidiary on the earnings this subsidiary generates. This gross-up is recognized only by companies electing to claim the Foreign Tax Credit.

For all taxable years ending after December 31, 1974, the gross-up is a subtraction modification used in computing Illinois base income. For years ending on or after December 31, 1982, the gross-up may be subtracted as a component of the Foreign Source Dividend Subtraction per Schedule J, IL-1120.

U. FOREIGN PERSON

Any person who is a nonresident alien individual and any non-individual entity organized under the laws of a country other than the United States.

V. FOREIGN SALES CORPORATION (FSC)

Corporations that meet certain federal requirements can elect, for years beginning after June 30, 1985, to be treated as a FSC. See Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC). FSCs were held to be an export subsidy in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and were replaced first by an “extraterritorial income” exclusion and then by the domestic production activities deduction in IRC § 199.

W. FORUM SHOPPING

The process of selecting the place of litigation, or the place where the issue will be pursued, that probably would result in a more favorable decision. REF: BLACK'S.

X. GENERAL INFORMATION LETTER (GIL)

Issued by the Department in response to written requests from taxpayers, taxpayer representatives, business, trade, or industrial associations, etc, to provide general discussions of tax principles and/or applications. Such letters do not constitute statements of agency policy and are not binding on the department. REF: IAC § 1200.120.

Y. HOLDING COMPANY

A corporation organized for the purpose of owning stock in and managing one or more corporations. Holding companies traditionally own many corporations in widely different business areas.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers’ Bill of Rights.

Z. INTANGIBLE PROPERTY

Property, which has no intrinsic and marketable value, but is merely the representative or evidence of value, such as certificates of stock, bonds, promissory notes and franchises. REF: BLACK'S.

AA. INTEGRATION

1) Horizontal - Occurs when a corporation or a group of corporations are in the same general line of business. For example, a nationwide chain of manufacturing concerns would be a horizontally integrated organization.

2) Vertical - This type of integration occurs when a corporation or a group of corporations are engaged in different steps leading to the completion of a final product.

BB. INTERCOMPANY ITEMS

Increases and decreases in financial statement accounts related to transactions between members of a common group.

CC. INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Traffic, commercial trading or the transportation of persons or property between or among the several states, or from or between points in one state and points in another state; commerce between places lying in different states. REF: BLACK'S.

DD. INTRASTATE COMMERCE

Traffic, commercial trading or the transportation of persons or property, which is started, carried on, and completed entirely within the limits of a single state. REF: BLACK'S.

EE. JOINT VENTURE

A legal entity, in the nature of a partnership, engaged in the joint prosecution of a particular transaction for mutual profit. An association of persons jointly undertaking some commercial enterprise. It requires a community of interest in the performance of the subject matter, a right to direct and govern the policy in connection therewith, and duty, which may be altered by agreement, to share both in profit and losses. A one-time grouping of two or more persons in a business undertaking. Unlike a partnership, a joint venture does not entail a continuing relationship among the parties. A joint venture is treated like a partnership for federal [and Illinois] income tax purposes. REF: BLACK'S.

The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

FF. JURAT STATEMENT

A statement made under penalty of perjury, attesting to the accuracy of a return or other filing.

GG. LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANIES

Unincorporated associations of one or more members that may transact any lawful business that a corporation, general partnership, limited partnership, or other business entity may conduct, except, generally, banking or insurance. A limited liability company's powers are similar to those of a general corporation but it may elect to enjoy the tax benefits normally associated with a partnership or an S-corporation or, if it has only one member, to be disregarded as an entity separate from its member. REF: 805 ILCS 180/1-1 et seq.

HH. MANUFACTURER

A person or organization producing finished goods from the raw material to the final product. One who employs capital, equipment and labor in the production or assembly of manufactured articles.

II. MEDICAL CANNABIS DEFINITIONS

The following is a list of terms (non-inclusive) used in connection with the Compassionate Use of Medical Cannabis Pilot Program Act.

1. CANNABIS

Has the meaning given that term in Section 3 of the Cannabis Control Act [720 ILCS 550/3(a)] as follows:

"Cannabis" includes marihuana, hashish and other substances which are identified as including any parts of the plant Cannabis Sativa, whether growing or not; the seeds thereof, the resin extracted from any part of such plant; and any compound, manufacture, salt, derivative, mixture, or preparation of such plant, its seeds, or resin, including tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) and all other cannabinol derivatives, including its naturally occurring or synthetically produced ingredients, whether produced directly or indirectly by extraction, or independently by means of chemical synthesis or by a combination of extraction and chemical synthesis; but shall not include the mature stalks of such plant, fiber produced from such stalks, oil or cake made from the seeds of such plant, any other compound, manufacture, salt, derivative, mixture, or preparation of such mature stalks (except the resin extracted therefrom), fiber, oil or cake, or the sterilized seed of such plant which is incapable of germination.

2. MEDICAL CANNABIS

Cannabis and its constituent cannabinoids, such as tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) and cannabidiol (CBD), used as an herbal remedy or therapy to treat disease or alleviate symptoms. Medical cannabis can be administered by a variety of routes, including, but not limited to: vaporizing or smoking dried buds; administering tinctures or tonics; applying topicals such as ointments or balms; consuming infused food products, such as soda or teas; or taking capsules. [86 IL. Admin. Code 429.105]

3. MEDICAL CANNABIS CULTIVATION CENTER

A facility operated by an organization or business that is registered by the Department of Agriculture to perform necessary activities to provide only registered medical cannabis dispensing organizations with usable medical cannabis.

4. MEDICAL CANNABIS DISPENSING ORGANIZATION (or DISPENSING ORGANIZATION or DISPENSARY ORGANIZATION)

A facility operated by an organization or business that is registered by the Department of Financial and Professional Regulation to acquire medical cannabis from a registered cultivation center for the purpose of dispensing cannabis, paraphernalia, or related supplies and educational materials to registered qualifying patients.

5. ORGANIZATION REGISTRANT

A corporation, partnership, trust, limited liability company (LLC), or other organization, but not an individual, that holds either a medical cannabis cultivation center registration issued by the Department of Agriculture or a medical cannabis dispensary registration issued by the Department of Financial and Professional Regulation. [86 IL. Admin. Code 100.2060]

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

6. SURCHARGE

This amount is equal to the amount of federal income tax liability for the taxable year attributable to the "transactions subject to the surcharge" (see next definition).

7. TRANSACTIONS SUBJECT TO THE SURCHARGE

Sales and exchanges of capital assets, depreciable business property, and real property used in the trade or business, and Section 197 intangibles of an organization registrant. Ref: IITA § 201(o).

JJ. MINING

Refer to Chapter 36 for a definition of mining.

KK. NEXUS

Nexus is used to describe the degree of business activity that must be present before a jurisdiction has the right to impose a tax on a person's income. The criteria for establishing nexus for any specific entity is dependent upon the business nature of the entity involved. See Income Tax Audit Manual chapter 22 for more information.

LL. NONRESIDENT

Any person that is not considered a resident under the provisions of Section 1501(a)(20) is considered a nonresident. Because only individuals, trusts and estates are included in the definition of "resident", corporations and partnerships are always nonresidents. For individuals, there is a presumption of residency in effect that may be overcome by satisfactory evidence that the person's presence in Illinois was for a temporary or transitory purpose only. The type or amount of proof, which is required to support a claim of non-residency, is discussed in IAC § 100.3020.

MM. NOTICE AND DEMAND

1. ILLINOIS INCOME TAX ACT

A statutory notice for a tax liability that is deemed assessed and which is issued in accordance with IITA § 902. A Notice and Demand is issued for tax due on an original return, or when there is no timely protest filed following a Notice of Deficiency.

2. UNIFORM PENALTY AND INTEREST ACT

The term "notice and demand" as it is used in Sections 3-2 and 3-3 of the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act is somewhat broader in scope than the IITA definition of "notice and demand." Section 3-2 of the UPIA allows a taxpayer to pay the amount shown due on a notice and demand within 30 days (21 days, for notices issued prior to January 1, 1996) from the date the notice was issued without additional interest accruing from the date of the notice. Section 3-3 of the UPIA allows a taxpayer a 30-day (21 days, for notices issued prior to January 1, 1996) period after the issuance of a "notice and demand" for payment in which to pay the tax shown due on the notice, before a late payment penalty will be incurred or released.

The term "notice and demand" is not defined in the UPIA or used in any tax act other than the UPIA and the IITA. Since the UPIA is applicable to virtually all tax acts that the Department administers, it is presumed that the legislature intended the term "notice and demand" to have a more-generic meaning than when used specifically in the IITA. Accordingly, the term "notice and demand" - when used with regard to the UPIA § 3-2 interest and § 3-3 penalty - has been interpreted by the Department to include other types of notifications of tax liability issued to taxpayers, in addition to an IITA Section 902 notice and demand, whether the type of notification may be proposed, protestable or non-protestable. The Department has not been consistent in its interpretation. For example, protestable notices triggered the 30-day grace period for payment of interest until GenTax was implemented for the various taxes, and the 30-day grace period was no longer triggered by any protestable notice except for income tax notices of deficiency. It was subsequently decided that, in order to provide uniform treatment across tax types, the grace period would no longer be allowed for notices of deficiency.

NN. NOTICE OF DEFICIENCY

A statutory notice for tax issued under IITA § 904 that sets forth the adjustments giving rise to a proposed assessment. Upon the expiration of 60 days after the date on which it is issued (150 days if the taxpayer is outside the United States), a Notice of Deficiency will constitute an assessment of the amount of tax and specified penalties if the taxpayer fails to file a protest with the Department, as provided in IITA § 908.

OO. OIL AND GAS INDUSTRY DEFINITIONS

The following is a list of terms that are commonly used when dealing with the oil and gas industry. The list is purposely not in alphabetical order due to several of the definitions building upon the preceding terms.

1. FEEDSTOCK

Raw material used for industrial processing such as any of a variety of petroleum products used in making petrochemicals.

2. ECONOMIC INTEREST

This term is used frequently in determining who is entitled to certain deductions such as depletion. It is a difficult term to accurately define however, IRC §1.611-1(b)(1) may be used as a guide.

3. WORKING/OPERATING INTEREST

Interest acquired in oil and gas properties by a lessee and/or operator is known as WORKING or OPERATING interest. It is also referred at times as an operating mineral interest. A working interest is burdened with the costs of development and operation of the property.

4. OPERATING AGREEMENT

An agreement between the co-owners of a working interest to drill, develop and operate the property is called an operating agreement. Standard agreement forms are used in the industry, which identify the property, the co-owners and their share of the working interest. It will also contain several clauses spelling out the rights, duties and obligations of the parties. An accounting agreement is also appended to this document.

The determination of whether the agreement constitutes an association that is taxable as a corporation or a partnership will be made at the federal level. This determination depends on the presence of the basic corporate attributes, including centralization of management and continuity of existence. REF: Sunshine Letter IT89-0261.

5. OPERATOR

The entity, which carries on the day-to-day physical operation of an oil or gas property, is called an operator. An operator normally has a working interest in the property.

6. CARRIED INTEREST

Two or more co-owners of a working interest may agree that one co-owner (the carrying party) will advance some or all of the development costs on behalf of the others (the carried parties) and recoup such advances from the other owners' share of oil and gas if and when produced from the property. The carrying party's interest, which arises from this arrangement, is known as carried interest.

7. PAYOUT AND PAYOUT PERIOD

The recoupment of the cost by the carrying party and the period during which it is recouped is known as the payout and the payout period, respectively.

8. GROSS INCOME FROM THE PROPERTY

The IRS regulations define gross income as "the amount for which the taxpayer sells the oil or gas in the immediate vicinity of the well". If the oil is transported from the premises prior to sale then the gross income is determined by reference to representative market or field price (see 10. Posted Price/Field Price below) REF: Reg. Sec. 1.613-3(a). If the purchase contract contains provisions for freight equalization, gathering, transportation and hauling charges, the US Tax Courts have generally held that these charges are excluded from the gross income figure.

9. TAXABLE INCOME FROM THE PROPERTY

Taxable income from the property is used to compute percentage depletion. It is defined in IRC § 613(a) as gross income from the property less allowable deductions (other than depletion) attributable to the property. Allowable deductions include administrative and financial overhead, operating expenses, selling expenses, depreciation, taxes, losses sustained, etc, and intangible drilling and development costs which have been expensed.

10. POSTED PRICE/FIELD PRICE

Posted or field prices are those generally made known throughout the industry for the buying of crude oil. These are the prices the buyers are willing to pay, to anyone, in a particular field. Posted prices are adjusted to reflect any increase or decrease in the market price. Posted prices are often based on the product transported to a marketing point or converted. Transfers at posted prices, therefore, reflect arms-length transactions. In addition to establishing transfer prices, the posted prices (of non-transported and unrefined products) also determine royalties payable to private and government landowners, the amount of state severance and production taxes payable, the amount of windfall tax payable and the amount of allowable depletion for Federal income tax purposes.

11. WELLHEAD PRICE

This is the price at which the unrefined product is sold at the wellhead or in the immediate vicinity of the well. This price is the same as the posted or field price of the crude at the well location. The terms wellhead price, posted price and field price are frequently used interchangeably.

Dormant partners, in strictness of language, mean those who are merely passive in the firm, whether known or unknown, in contradistinction to those who are active and conduct the business of the firm, as principals. MAJOR LEGISLATION CHANGES

The following information is a list of the amendments to the various sections of the Illinois Income Tax Act since its inception on August 1, 1969 by PA 76-261. The list contains the original effective dates of each of the sections and the effective dates of any amendments. The list contains the major law changes through any bills signed as of December 14, 2019. Detailed information regarding the sections and any amendments can be found in the topical paragraphs, which are referenced at the end of the sections.

The references contained in the information below are to the CURRENT sections of the IITA. The original sections, if different from the current sections, are identified in the comment section of the Public Act, which created the section. Any transitional section numbers have been excluded.

Many Public Acts have multiple effective dates. In the listing below the effective date of the amendment to the specific section involved is identified.

PA 87-205, which was signed into law on September 3, 1991, created the Uniform Penalty and Interest Act (UPIA). The UPIA becomes effective January 1, 1993. PA 87-1189 delayed the effective date of the UPIA until January 1, 1994. The legislative history of the UPIA is included at the end of this chapter.

SECTION 1501(a)(27)--UNITARY BUSINESS GROUP

CREATED BY:

PUBLIC ACT 82-1029 - EFFECTIVE: FOR TAX YEARS ENDING ON OR AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1982

The term "unitary business group" means a group of persons related through common ownership whose business activities are integrated with, dependent upon and contribute to each other. The group will not include those members whose business activity outside the United States is 80% or more of any such member's total business activity; for purposes of this paragraph and clause (a)(3)(B)(ii) of Section 304, business activity within the United States shall be measured by means of the factors ordinarily applicable under subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) of Section 304 except that, in the case of corporations ordinarily required to apportion business income by means of the 3 factor formula of property, payroll and sales specified in subsection (a) of Section 304, such corporations shall not use the sales factor in the computation and the results of the property and payroll factor computations shall be divided by 2 (by one if either the property or payroll factor has a denominator of zero). Common ownership in the case of corporations is the direct or indirect control or ownership of more than 50% of the outstanding voting stock of the persons carrying on unitary business activity. Unitary business activity can ordinarily be illustrated where the activities of the members are: (1) in the same general line of business (such as manufacturing, wholesaling, retailing, insurance, transportation or finance); or (2) are steps in a vertically structured enterprise or process (such as the steps involved in the production of natural resources, which might include exploration, mining, refining, and marketing); and, in either instance, the members are functionally integrated through the exercise of strong centralized management (where, for example, authority over such matters as purchasing, financing, tax compliance, product line, personnel, marketing and capital investment is not left to each member). In no event, however, will a unitary group include both persons who are ordinarily required to apportion income by means of the 3 factor formula of property, payroll and sales and persons who are ordinarily required to apportion income by means of the single factors specified in subsection (b), (c) and (d) of Section 304.

AMENDED BY:

PUBLIC ACT 83-182 - EFFECTIVE: JANUARY 1, 1984

Changed the term "corporation" to "member" except in the "common ownership" sentence.

Further explained the 80/20 formula that should be used by members that are required to use one of the special apportionment formulas of Section 304.

Added that the term "retailing" refers to retailing of tangible personal property.

Added a further definition that states that (for purposes of inclusion in a unitary business group) a member that is a 100% Illinois corporation should be considered to be required to use the apportionment formula that would it would be required to use if it were not a 100% Illinois corporation.

Finally, added the statement that a unitary group cannot be composed exclusively of 100% Illinois companies.

PUBLIC ACT 84-1400 - EFFECTIVE: FOR TAX YEARS ENDING ON OR AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1986

Deleted the last sentence of the definition in order to allow the formation of a unitary business group that is composed exclusively of 100% Illinois companies.

PUBLIC ACT 85-731 - EFFECTIVE: FOR TAX YEARS ENDING ON OR AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1987

Amended the definition to provide that the restriction against the inclusion of members in a unitary group which apportion income under different subsections of Section 304 does not apply to groups composed of transportation companies and a transportation holding company or groups composed of insurance companies and an insurance company holding company. Renumbered subsection (a)(28) as (a)(27).

PUBLIC ACT 90-613 - EFFECTIVE: JULY 9, 1998

Added Section 304(h), single factor sales apportionment formula, to the Unitary Business Group definition. Also, added the provision that if the unitary business group's accounting period differ, the common parent's accounting period, or if there is no common parent, the accounting period of the member that is expected to have, on a recurring basis, the greatest Illinois income tax liability must be used to determine whether to use the apportionment method provided in Section 304(a) or (h). The prohibition against membership in a unitary business group for taxpayers ordinarily required to apportion income under different subsections of Section 304 does not apply to taxpayers required to apportion income under Section 304(a) and (h). These provisions apply to tax years ending on or after December 31, 1998.

PUBLIC ACT 93-840 - EFFECTIVE: JULY 30, 2004

Amended subsection (a)(27) to provide that “United States” for the purposes of the 80-20 test means only the 50 states and the District of Columbia, but does not include any territory or possession of the United States or any area over which the United States has asserted jurisdiction or claimed exclusive rights with respect to the exploration for or exploitation of natural resources.

37. COURT CASE SYNOPSES

This chapter contains synopses of the various court cases, which have been referred to in the other chapters of this manual. A few other cases whose decisions may have had some effect on the Illinois taxation laws have been included. These summaries have been provided to give the reader a general idea of the main issues involved in each of the cases and the reasoning that led to the decisions made. A case citation is provided to enable the reader to obtain the complete decision in various reference books which available in most large public libraries.

The synopses are arranged in alphabetical order by the common name associated with the case and appear that way in the TABLE OF CONTENTS. In situations in which multiple cases involving the same taxpayer are included, a year or state identifier has been added to the heading.

At the end of each synopsis a CROSS REFERENCE and a TOPICAL INDEX reference is made. The CROSS REFERENCE refers to the chapters in the manual in which this case has been referred to, quoted and/or listed. The TOPICAL INDEX field contains the major issues of the case. An index is included in this chapter which groups the case decisions by the topics which appear in this field.

JURISDICTION OF THE CASE DECISIONS

A decision of an Illinois Circuit Court is only binding on THE SPECIFIC PARTIES INVOLVED IN THE SUIT. Illinois Appellate Court decisions have jurisdiction over all cases, which are, heard IN THAT APPELLATE COURT DISTRICT. Illinois Supreme Court decisions have jurisdiction over cases which are heard throughout the State and US Supreme Court decisions have jurisdiction over cases which are heard throughout the country. Decisions of other states' courts are not binding on Illinois cases, however, they may provide information regarding issues which may not have been decided in Illinois courts at this time.

ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW AND JUDICIAL REMEDIES

If a taxpayer disagrees with the result of an audit, a written protest of the Notice of Deficiency must be submitted within 60 days of its issuance. Once the protest is received, the audit file is forwarded to the Administrative Hearing Section for disposition. The rules pertaining to hearing procedures are contained in Regulation Sections 200.101 through 200.175. If a taxpayer disagrees with the Department's final administrative decision, a complaint may be filed with the (Illinois) Circuit Court. A Circuit Court decision may be appealed to the Illinois Appellate Court, the Illinois Supreme Court and, ultimately, the US Supreme Court.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A taxpayer may choose to forego the Administrative Hearings process and take a case directly to Circuit Court. In these cases, the liability must first be Paid under Protest and a suit must be filed in Circuit Court within 30 days of the date the Payment under Protest is made, in accordance with the provisions of the Protest Act which are contained in Illinois Revised Statutes, Chapter 127, Paragraphs 172 and 172a.

NOTE: See Chapter 32 for more information regarding unsettled audits and payments under protest.

EXPLANATION OF CASE CITATIONS

All large libraries contain reference materials relating to the judicial system and case decisions. If the case name and approximate date of the decision is known, the Decennial Digest Table of Cases can be used to find sources that contain the case decision.

The Decennial Digest (so called because they were originally published every ten years, although now they are published every five years and are denoted Part 1 and Part 2) and most citations in any literature, will describe the reference source in an abbreviated form. The key to finding the case is understanding the abbreviations. Some of the more common abbreviations follow:

REFERENCE SOURCES	ABBREVIATIONS
Supreme Court Reporter	SCt
Federal Reporter	F
Federal Reporter 2nd Series	F2d

CITATION EXAMPLES

325 F Supp 857 - Volume 325 of the Federal Supplement begins on page 857.

5 SCt 601 - Volume 5 of the Supreme Court Reporter begins on page 601.

113 US 516 - Volume 113 of the United States Reporter beginning on page 516.

If a citation includes a parenthetical number or phrase it normally denotes the year (or date) of the decision and the geographical jurisdiction of the court. If no court is cited (Appellate or Circuit), then the decision is that of the highest court in the jurisdiction shown. For example, 676 P2d 595 (Alaska 1984) means that the case can be found in volume 676 of the Pacific Reporter second edition, starting at page 595 and that this decision was made by the Alaska Supreme Court in 1984.

A decision in the Federal Supplement denotes a district court decision (like a state circuit court); a decision in the Federal Reporter represents a decision of the Court of Appeals; and a decision in the United States Reporter or Supreme Court Reporter represents a decision of the United States Supreme Court. Citation references to the US Reporter can also be found in the Supreme Court Reporter.

A. B. DICK CORPORATION

A.B. Dick Corp. v. Illinois Department of Revenue Sangamon County Circuit Court. January 5, 1996.

This case resolves the issue surrounding the filing status of A.B. Dick Company and Videojet Systems International. It was determined by the Court that under the Illinois Income Tax Act Section 1501(a)(27), the two companies could not be considered a unitary business entity. The Court held that there was a lack of fundamental integration in the key areas of manufacturing, marketing, engineering, purchasing, advertising and distribution.

This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

This case resolves the issue surrounding the allocation and apportionment of income of Aaron Rents Inc. The Georgia State Department of Revenue asserted that Aaron Rents established a subsidiary company, Aaron Investment Company, for the sole purpose of evading their proper tax liability. The Commissioner reallocated income from the subsidiary to the parent company and assessed the tax liability based on the total income of both corporations. Aaron Rents petitioned the Court to review the actions of the Commissioner and to address the arbitrary shifting of income issue that this case was predicated on.

The Georgia Department of Revenue issued a notice for a demand payment to Aaron Rents for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1989. The impetus behind the notice involved the Department's determination that Aaron Rent's subsidiary, Aaron Investment Company, should be reallocated to Aaron Rents in order to reflect Aaron Rents Georgia taxable income more accurately. The Department relied on O.C.G.A. section 48-2-59 in generating its assessment and demand for payment. Aaron Rents would not comply with the notice based on the fact that their subsidiary was incorporated for a number of valid non-tax reasons and that they were separate and distinct entities. The Court agreed with Aaron Rents' assertion.

The Court held that the formation of Aaron Investment Company served a variety of purposes. They found that it protected and enhanced value of Aaron Rents' trademarks and service marks. The incorporation also segregated Aaron Rents' trademarks from the company's other assets so that Aaron Rents could quantify how much money they were making off the name Aaron Rents. Aaron Investments also protected the transferred intangibles against the claims of Aaron Rents' creditors. These were a few of the reasons that the Court reversed the decision of the Commissioner. The Court determined that Aaron Investment functioned as a separate and distinct corporation. The Court held that Aaron Investment maintained separate headquarters, bank accounts, and corporate contract name. The Court also recognized the fact that Aaron Investment incurred operating costs, held and managed intangible assets and stock, has its own corporate officers and board of Directors, and collected income and paid taxes. It was for these several reasons the Court decided the case in favor of Aaron Rents Inc. It found that Aaron Rents met its burden to show that there were valid non- tax reasons for establishing Aaron Investment Company, and that Aaron Investment Company has engaged in sufficient business activities to constitute a valid, separate and distinct corporate entity.

Abkco Industries filed a petition with the Tax Court seeking for a review of a decision rendered by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The Commissioner recomputed the income of ABKCO Industries for the short taxable period December 22 to Dec. 31, 1961, which was closed by the statute of limitations. The Commissioner contended that a recomputation was permissible for the purpose of determining the amount of a 1964 net operating loss carryback absorbed in that short taxable year, in order to determine the remaining amount of the carryback available in a subsequent open year. After the recomputation of income, the Commissioner issued notices of increased deficiencies for the tax years 1962 and 1963 respectively. The issues in this case are twofold. The first question presented in the case was whether the Commissioner may increase ABKCO'S 1962 deficiency on the basis of his recomputation of their taxable income for a prior period which was closed by the statute of limitations. The second issue was whether ABKCO, an accrual basis taxpayer, may deduct in 1962 and 1963 certain royalty expenses accrued on its books during such years with respect to its sale of phonograph records.

The Court held that the Commissioner was entitled to disallow a deduction that ABKCO claimed on their return for the short taxable period December 22 to December 31, 1961, and thereby reduce the portion of the 1964 net operating loss carryback. The Court contended that the Commissioner recomputed ABKCO's short period income only for the purpose of determining its income tax liability for 1962, and that the statute of limitations is not a bar to such recomputation. The support for the Commissioner's position was found in section 6214(b) in the Internal Revenue Code and in a substantial body of case law.

The second issue for decision was whether, in the short taxable period December 22 to 31, 1961, and in the calendar years 1962 and 1963, the Abkco company may accrue royalties computed but not yet paid under paragraph 6 of its agreement with Matz and Evans. The Court stated that under the accrual method of accounting, an expense is deductible for the taxable year in which all the events have occurred which determine the fact of the liability. The Court concluded that Abkco's liability for the royalties in question were so contingent and uncertain that accrual is impermissible and that the Commissioner's determination must be sustained.

* IRS need not show cause or probable cause to justify summons for documents;

Adams Express v. Ohio State Auditor (1897) - 165 US 194, 17 SCt 305.

The main relevance of this property tax decision is that it appears to have originated the phrase "unity of use". The "standard unity of substance" which existed in prior case decisions (relating to railroads) was replaced in this case "by one of unity of use and management."

The US Supreme Court recognized the worth of combined assets: "The unit is a unit of use and management, and the horses, wagons, safes, pouches and furniture...possessed a value in combination..."

The case involved the New Jersey income tax liability of Allied-Signal, Inc. fka Bendix Corporation ("Allied") for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1981, as it related to the gain realized on Allied's sale of ASARCO stock. New Jersey statutes have no provision for non-business income, nor does New Jersey allow combined apportionment. All income which is "unitary" to the company's operations in New Jersey must be included in appaortionable income.

New Jersey and Allied stipulated that no unitary relationship existed between Allied and ASARCO. However, New Jersey maintained that the gain on the sale of ASARCO stock should be included in apportionable income since, in the State's opinion, the investment in ASARCO went beyond a passive investment and Allied was in business of buying and selling corporations. Also, New Jersey believed that the income should be included in apportionable income since Allied intended to use the proceeds from the stock sale to acquire the stock of another company whose business activities were complimentary to Allied's business operations.

Allied disagreed, taking the position that since there was no unitary relationship between Allied and ASARCO, New Jersey was precluded from including the gain on the sale of stock in apportionable income.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Allied. The Court held that:

* The unitary business principle remains an appropriate device for ascertaining whether a State has transgressed constitutional limitations in taxing a nondomiciliary corporation. There is no reason to overturn the prior decisions in the case of ASARCO and Woolworth and to do so would create confusion and chaos for the taxpayers that have relied on those decisions in reporting their state income tax liabilities and for the states that have structured their statutes based on those decisions.

As stipulated by Allied and New Jersey, no unitary relationship existed between Allied and ASARCO.

* The unitary business rule is "...a recognition of the States' wide authority to devise formulae for an accurate assessment of a corporation's intrastate value or income and the necessary limit on the States' authority to tax value or income that cannot fairly be attributed to the taxpayer's activities within the State."

New Jersey's theory that all income of a corporation doing business in that state is, by virtue of common ownership, part of the corporation's unitary business and is apportionable is unreconcilable with this rule.

* The payer and payee of the income need not be engaged in the same unitary business for the income to be apportionable, but the capital transaction must serve an operational rather than an investment function. The existence of a unitary relationship between the payer and the payee is just one justification for apportioning the income.

"We did not purport...to establish a general requirement that there be a unitary relation between the payer and the payee to justify apportionment, nor do we do so today."

The Court supported the UDITPA standard for business/non-business income that business income is income arising from transactions and activity in the regular course of the taxpayer's trade or business and includes income from tangible and intangible property if the acquisition, management and disposition of the property constitute integral parts of the taxpayer's regular trade or business operations.

However, since New Jersey provided very little support for this position, the standard was not applied in this case.

The Court also stated that the mere fact that an intangible asset was acquired pursuant to a long-term corporate strategy of acquisitions and dispositions did not convert an otherwise passive investment into an integral operational one. Finally, the Court held that the ASARCO stock which was held for over two years could not be considered a short-term investment of working capital.

AMERICAN HOME PRODUCTS CORPORATION

American Home Products Corp. v. Tax Commissioner of Ohio Supreme Court. March 7, 1990.

American Home Products appealed a decision made by the Ohio Board of Tax Appeals. The controversy in the case stemmed from the apportionment of taxable income of the American Home Products Corporation by the Tax Commissioner of Ohio. The Commissioner contended that the short-term investment income acquired by AHP, was used for operating capital and therefore could be apportioned to Ohio for tax purposes. This was the point of contention in the case. The company was headquartered in New York and acquired, managed and controlled its investment there. Although four manufacturing plants located in Ohio provided a nexus which created corporate franchise tax liability in Ohio, only that portion of the investment income which was used as working capital for its interstate business could be apportioned to Ohio.

American Home Products Corp. maintained that they did not use the any portion of the non-unitary investments and securities as security to borrow working capital or directly as operational capital. The company also argued that the Due Process Clause prohibited Ohio's taxation of the non-unitary investment income because the investment activity producing the income took place entirely outside Ohio and because the payers were discrete business entities. The Commissioner responded to that claim by stating that the income was available as working capital, even though it was not needed, and apportioning the income to Ohio did not violate the Due Process Clause. The Court held that the taxing and re- apportionment of the investment income received by American Home Products,

AMERICAN REFRIGERATOR TRANSIT COMPANY

American Refrigerator Transit Company v. Oregon State Tax Commission (1964) - 395 P2d 127.

The case examined the propriety of the imposition of a net income tax on an entity involved in a service (leasing) operation. The Oregon Supreme Court held that the connection necessary to establish nexus between a state and a foreign entity is essentially an economic rather than a physical relationship. A state is free to exact a reasonable tribute from those persons using its economic resources. These resources include the maintenance of conditions essential to the production or marketing of goods. The Court found that the leasing of railroad cars to and under the control of other corporations is sufficient contact with the state to create nexus. Therefore, the income received from leasing the cars on a miles-traveled basis is taxable by the state in which the miles are traveled.

American Refrigerator owned refrigerator cars which it leased to operating railroads. It was not a public carrier, it issued no bills of lading and it published no tariffs of rates for shippers. The taxpayer's sole activity in the transportation field was to rent refrigerator cars to operating railroads for their use in performing their own transportation service for their own shippers under their own tariffs and shipping documents.

American Refrigerator contended that it had no property "located or having a situs" in Oregon, and did not carry on any activity in the State. The State approached the issue of nexus based on an economic relationship rather than the physical relationship plaintiff contended. The Court agreed with the state and held that American Refrigerator's cars had a "situs" in Oregon since the cars were used in the exploitation of the market in Oregon from which American Refrigerator derived income through its rental of cars. The Court further stated that it is now firmly established that a state may tax the net income of a corporation engaged exclusively in interstate commerce even though the taxpayer has no offices or agents within the taxing state, if it could be shown that the state's economy was a substantial economic factor in the production of the taxpayer's income.

Hervey v. AMF Beaird (1971) - 250 Ark 147, 464 SW2d 557.

The Arkansas Supreme Court concluded that making regular inventory checks as well as taking orders and accepting payments was a sufficient amount of activity by representatives in the taxing state to make a foreign corporation subject to income tax.

AMF manufactured gas storage tanks. Its representatives' only activities in Arkansas were to accept payments from the Arkansas retailers and check their inventories. The inventory checks were to designed to protect AMF's contract interest, property rights, and interest in accurate billing. The Court held that the representatives' activities went beyond the "solicitation" protected by PL 86-272, which (the Court said) should be narrowly construed.

AMOCO PRODUCTION COMPANY

Alaska Department of Revenue v. Amoco Production Co. (1984) - 676 P2d 595.

The case covered major issues:

* The propriety of using the separate accounting method, and

* The computation of the property apportionment factor.

The Alaska Supreme Court found that the fact that some income from sales could be geographically segregated was insufficient to warrant separate accounting. Amoco had apportioned a substantial part of its overhead expenses which were incurred outside of Alaska in computing Alaska net income, giving a strong indication (as seen by the Court) of a heavy dependence on management and technical services performed outside of the state. The Court ruled that Amoco's Alaska income was not sufficiently separate and distinct from and unconnected with its income earned outside of Alaska to warrant separate accounting.

Amoco had also contended that non-producing leaseholds should not be included in the property factor of the apportionment formula. The basis of this argument was that non-producing oil and gas leases did not constitute property used for the production of income. The Court found that these leases should be included in the property factor since they were examples of "non-obvious contributions" to Amoco's production of income.

AMWAY CORPORATION, INC.

Amway Corporation, Inc. v. Missouri Director of Revenue (1990), 794 SW2d 666.

Amway manufactured and sold a variety of products through door-to-door sales. These sales were conducted by distributors who purchased the products from Amway and resold the products to the consumers. In addition to selling the Amway products, the distributors also recruited other individuals to become Amway distributors. Individuals paid an initial fee to become a distributor and also paid an annual fee to renew the distributorship. Amway had no factories, sales offices or employees in Missouri.

Amway maintained that their products were being sold by independent, self-employed distributors who purchased the products from Amway at wholesale and resold the products at retail. The application form for a distributorship stated that there was no agency or representative relationship between the individual and the company. The distributors' earnings were based on the margin by which the retail price of the product exceeds the wholesale cost.

Distributors also earned money through sales to other distributors they had recruited. The company encouraged its distributors to solicit the sale of distributorships. Each distributorship was, however, a separate agreement between the individual and Amway.

Amway took the position that it was a seller of tangible personal property and was, therefore, protected by PL 86-272. Since, in Amway's opinion, the distributors were independent salespeople rather than employees or representatives of the company, the distributors activities in Missouri did not exceed the limitations of PL 86-272 and Missouri had no right to impose an income tax on Amway.

The Missouri Supreme Court found that:

* The sale of distributorships by the Amway distributors constituted a sale of a "nonexclusive franchise" which was a sale of intangible personal property. Amway was not, therefore, strictly a seller of tangible personal property and was not afforded the protection of PL 86-272.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. * The distributors were not independent salespeople because, in addition to selling Amways products, they were authorized to solicit the sales of new distributorships. They were, therefore, Amway's representatives.

Amway had also contended that the recruiting of new distributors was merely a method of "spurring sales" and was not an activity separate from the company's product sales. The Court disagreed:

"[I]t is not the quantity of activity that determines whether [PL 86-272] is a shield against state income tax liability. The statutory prohibition on taxation is determined by the quality of the activity; specifically, activity which is limited to the solicitation of the sale of tangible personal property.

Doubtless the sale of distributorships spurred product sales, but it also generated significant income for Amway independent of the sale of any tangible products...The solicitation of the sale of distributorships was not an isolated or transient event, but an ongoing activity to produce income separate from the sale of products or merchandise.

The volume of sales is not the key to deciding whether [PL 86-272] shields Amway from Missouri income tax. The shield is only available so long as Amway and its representatives did no more than solicit the sale of tangible personal property. Even though the activity may have been secondary to spurring product sales, the shield evaporated when Amway, through its distributors, solicited the sale of the distributorships."

AQUA AEROBIC SYSTEMS, INC.

Appeal of Aqua Aerobic Systems Inc., CAL SBE 11/6/85, CCH California State Income Tax Reporter, Para. 401-172.

The California State Board of Equalization (SBE) adopted a narrow interpretation of solicitation in holding that an Illinois company was subject to franchise tax in California because its activities within the state exceeded those permitted by P.L. 86-272.

Aqua Aerobic warranted repairs during three of the subject years and then limited its activities within California to sales start-up supervision for the last tax year in question. P.L. 86-272 immunizes from state tax those companies engaged in interstate commerce whose activities within a state are limited to "solicitation" of sales. The SBE found that Aqua Aerobics' performance of the warranty repair work was not mere solicitation of sales. Rather, it was considered a consequence of prior sales and, therefore, exceeded the bounds set by P.L. 86-272.

The SBE also found that the sales start-up supervision exceeded mere "solicitation" of sales. Aqua Aerobic described this activity as a sales technique, which consisted of a sales person visiting the job site to see that the equipment being sold was in proper condition prior to its operation. The SBE felt that this was an activity that followed as a result of a sale, since the service was performed after the products were installed. In addition, the activity seemed to involve a complete inspection of the equipment sold since an employee of Aqua Aerobic spent 14 days at one job site during one tax year.

The SBE felt that Aqua Aerobic had failed to meet the burden of proving that its activities were within the limits of PL 86-272, therefore, the public law did not shield the corporation from taxation in California.

ASARCO (1977)

Montana v. ASARCO, Inc. (1977) - 567 P2d 901.

Montana's tax laws allowed corporations to compute their net income allocable to Montana by use of either an apportionment formula or separate accounting. However, separate accounting could only be used if income from sources within Montana could be segregated from sources without the state. If this condition was not met, business income HAD to be apportioned using the standard 3-factor formula.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Prior to 1962, ASARCO had filed its Montana returns using separate accounting. In 1962, ASARCO determined that its business activities inside and outside of Montana were unitary in nature and it requested permission from Montana to use an apportionment formula. Permission was granted. Thereafter ASARCO filed its Montana returns using an apportionment formula to properly compute its business income and by allocating the income the company determined to be non-business in nature to sources outside of Montana.

On ASARCO's 1967 - 1970 Montana returns the following income was classified as non-business income:

* Royalty income from the lessees of ASARCO's Keystone Mine in Colorado. The mine was previously operated by ASARCO.

* Royalty income from patents and copyrights on items developed by ASARCO and used in ASARCO's operations.

* Rental income from housing units located on mine properties and rented to ASARCO employees.

* Interest income from short-term investments, customer notes and notes on the sale of a plant and General Cable stock.

* Gains from the sale of tangible property.

* Dividend income.

* Gains on the sale of stock of various companies, including:

 General Cable
 Revere Copper
 Kennicott Copper
 Hecla Mining Company

In audit all of the above income was reclassified as business income and apportioned to Montana. In addition, Montana determined that ASARCO and 6 of its wholly owned subsidiaries were conducting a unitary business and should, therefore, use the combined apportionment method in determining the proper amount of Montana taxable income.

The Montana Supreme Court held in favor of Montana. It found that all of the income listed above was business income in nature and should be apportioned to Montana. The gains on the sale of stock were considered to be business income because,

"These corporations are all engaged in the business of either producing metal ore or manufacturing the refined product into goods. The stock was used by ASARCO for business purposes, such as gaining access to raw materials or access to potential customers for its refined metals. Therefore all the...income was generated by the unitary business operation of ASARCO."

The Court further found that ASARCO and its 6 subsidiaries were involved in a unitary business relationship and, as such, should compute the proper Montana income using combined apportionment. The 6 subsidiaries were determined to be unitary due to the following facts:

* Federated Metals of Canada - A Canadian corporation which basically operated the same business in Canada as ASARCO did in the United States. ASARCO provided this company with operations technology, accounting services and financial services. There was also a significant amount of company sales within the company.

* ASARCO Mercantile Company - A corporation engaged solely in the purchase and sale of machinery for ASARCO's subsidiaries. All central services were provided by ASARCO.

* Enthone, Inc. - A Connecticut corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of metal finishing chemicals and supplies used in metal plating. Enthone purchased about 16% of its raw materials from ASARCO and ASARCO provided all of its central services.

* International Metal Company - This company was ASARCO's exclusive sales outlet for materials delivered to foreign countries. ASARCO provided all of its central services.

* Lone Star Lead Construction Company - A Texas corporation engaged in lining tanks with lead for protection against corrosive contents. The vast majority of its lead was purchased from ASARCO.

* Northern Peru Mining Company - A Peru mining corporation. All of this company's production was sold to ASARCO and refined in ASARCO plants.

In addition, all of the subsidiaries were 100% owned by ASARCO and had common members on their boards of directors. A close relationship existed between ASARCO's business operations and the subsidiaries, in that the subsidiaries all provided ASARCO with material, services or a market for its products.

An official of ASARCO testified that the services that were provided by ASARCO to all of its subsidiaries included:

* Insurance
* Top management
* Legal
* Financial - Any subsidiary that needed capital did not go to outside sources before going to ASARCO first.

ASARCO (1982)

ASARCO, Incorporated v. Idaho State Tax Commission (1982) - 458 US 307, 73 L ED 2d 787, 102 SCt 3103.

ASARCO was a corporation that mined, smelted and refined nonferrous metals in various states. ASARCO's primary activity in Idaho was the operation of a silver mine however, it also mined some other metals and operated an administrative office for its northwest mining division in that State.

During the years involved ASARCO received three types of intangible income which Idaho sought to include in business income to be apportioned to the State.

* ASARCO received dividends from five corporations in which it owned majority interests:

 M.I.M. Holdings, Ltd. which was engaged in the mining, milling, smelting and refining of nonferrous metals in Australia and England - ASARCO owned 53% of the stock.

 General Cable Corp. which was a fabricator of cables - ASARCO owned 34% of the stock.

 Rever Copper and Brass which was a manufacturer of copper wires - ASARCO owned 34% of the stock.

 ASARCO Mexicana, S.A. was engaged in the same type of business in Mexico as ASARCO did in the United States - ASARCO owned 49% of the stock.

 Southern Peru Copper Corp. mined and smelted copper in Peru - ASARCO owned 51.5% of the stock.

* ASARCO received interest income from three sources:

 Rever Copper and Brass convertible debentures.

 A note received in connection with a prior sale of Mexicana stock.

 A note received in connection with the sale of General Cable stock.

* ASARCO received capital gains from the sale of General Cable stock and M.I.M. stock.

ASARCO had originally filed on a separate apportionment basis and had classified this intangible income as non-business income. Idaho, in audit, determined that the links between the companies identified above and ASARCO were insufficient to justify unitizing the companies but that the income received from the companies was business income to ASARCO. Idaho believed that a unitary relationship had to exist between ASARCO and these companies in order for the State to have the right to tax the income however, it felt that corporate PURPOSE should define unitary business for this determination. The intangible income should be considered a part of a unitary business (and, thus, be considered business income) if the related intangible property is "acquired, managed or disposed of for purposes relating or contributing to the taxpayer's business."

The US Supreme Court held that:

"The State of Idaho may not constitutionally include within the taxable income of appellant nondomiciliary parent corporation doing some business (primarily silver mining) in the State, a portion of intangible income (dividends, interest payments, and capital gains from the sale of stock) that appellant received from subsidiary corporations having no other connection with the State.

(a) As a general principle, a state may not tax value earned outside its borders. 'The linchpin of apportionability in the field of state income taxation is the unitary-business principle.' (Mobil Oil Corp. v. Comm. of Taxes of Vermont, 445 US 425, 439; Exxon Corp. v. Wisconsin Dept. of Revenue, 447 US 207, 223.)

(b) Here, based on the findings in the State trial court and the undisputed facts, appellant succeeded in proving that no unitary business relationship existed between appellant and its subsidiaries.

(c) To have, as Idaho proposes, corporate purpose define unitary business - i.e. to consider intangible income as part of a unitary business if the intangible property (shares of stock) is "acquired, managed or disposed of for purposes relating or contributing to the taxpayer's business" - would destroy the concept of unitary business. Such a definition, which would permit nondomiciliary states to apportion and tax dividends 'where the business activities of the dividend payer have nothing to do with the activities of the recipient in the taxing state,' (Mobil Oil Corp. supra, at 442) cannot be accepted consistently with recognized due process standards. While the dividend-paying subsidiaries in this case "add to the riches" of appellant, (Wallace v. Hines, 253 US 66, 70 (1920)), they are "discrete business enterprises" that in "any business or economic sense" have "nothing to do with the activities" of appellant in Idaho. (Mobil Oil Corp. supra, at 439-442) Therefore, there is no "rational relationship between (appellant's dividend) income attributed to the State and the intrastate values of the enterprise." (Mobil Oil Corp. supra, at 437.) The Due Process Clause bars Idaho's effort to levy upon income that which is not properly within the reach of its taxing power.

(d) Under the same unitary-business standard applied to the dividend income in question, Idaho's attempt to tax the interest and capital gains income derived from its subsidiaries also violates the Due Process Clause."

ATLANTIC RICHFIELD COMPANY (1979)

Atlantic Richfield Company v. The State of Colorado (1979) - 601 P2d 628.

The main issue of the case was whether installment sale interest income and capital gains arising from the sale of assets due to antitrust litigation was business or non-business income.

Atlantic Richfield Company (ARCO) was a large, integrated oil company, commercially domiciled in California. In November 1968, ARCO and Sinclair Oil Company agreed to merge. ARCO's purpose for the merger was to provide it with nationwide diversified operations and greater financial resources. ARCO had participated in several other similar ventures in the past.

As a result of antitrust challenges filed by the US government and resulting judgements, ARCO was forced to sell some of the assets acquired from Sinclair.

ARCO contended that the TRANSACTIONAL TEST should be used to determine whether the income constituted business or non-business income. This test turns on whether the income is derived from a transaction or activity in the regular course of a trade or business. In the transactional test, the frequency and regularity of the activity are crucial factors. ARCO asserted that it was not in the business of buying and selling large blocks of assets pursuant to a court order, therefore, the capital gains and interest income at issue must be classified as non-business income.

Colorado contended that the FUNCTIONAL TEST should be used in the determination. Under this test, gains from the disposition of property are considered business income if the property disposed of was used by the taxpayer in its regular trade or business operations. Under this test, the extraordinary nature or the infrequency of the transaction is irrelevant.

The Colorado Supreme Court held that the income in question was business income because it resulted from a transaction in the regular course of ARCO's business. ARCO had frequently engaged in major acquisitions and dispositions of companies and assets and was aware that some of the assets which were acquired as a result of the Standard merger would have to be sold as a result of the antitrust issue. Therefore, the Court reasoned that although the disposition of assets to meet the requirements of the antitrust laws was infrequent, it was neither unusual nor unforeseeable in the circumstances of the merger two oil companies of such magnitude.

ATLANTIC RICHFIELD COMPANY (1986)

Atlantic Richfield Company v. Oregon Department of Revenue (1986) - 717 P2d 613.

Atlantic Richfield Company ("ARCO") was a Pennsylvania corporation whose principal office was in California. The company did business in Oregon. In filing its Oregon income tax returns for the tax years 1973 through 1977, ARCO computed its property factor by including all of its intangible drilling costs (IDCs) whether they were expensed or capitalized for federal purposes.

In audit, Oregon recomputed the company's property factor by including only the capitalized IDCs. Oregon relied on its property factor statute which stated that "[p]roperty owned by the taxpayer is valued at its original cost" and on its rules which stated that "[a]s a general rule "original cost" is deemed to be the basis of the property for federal income tax purposes at the time of acquisition by the taxpayer and adjusted by subsequent capital additions or improvements thereto and partial dispositions thereof, by reason of sale, exchange, abandonment, etc." Since the expensed IDCs do not become a part of the "original cost" for federal purposes, Oregon did not include them in the property factor.

ARCO argued that IDCs should be included in the property factor whether or not the federal expensing election was made. The fact that the Oregon regulation stated the above as a "general rule" provided that there were exceptions to the rule. ARCO believed expensed IDCs should be such an exception.

ARCO further argued that since Oregon had incorporated the uniformity clause of the Multistate Tax Compact into its statutes, its rules should strive to provide a uniformity with other states' tax laws. The company pointed to Alaska, an MTC and UDITPA state, which required that IDCs be included in the property factor regardless of their federal treatment. Subsequently, information was obtained that listed three additional MTC and UDITPA states with similar rules.

The Oregon Supreme Court found in favor of ARCO. The Court based its decision on the uniformity argument. Did the exclusion of the expensed IDCs oppose the uniformity clause's "...general purpose; to make uniform the law of those states which enact UDITPA." The Court found that the all (4 states: Alaska, Nebraska, Utah and North Dakota) of the UDITPA jurisdictions which had considered the IDC question, required that IDCs be included in the property factor, regardless of whether they were expensed or capitalized on the federal level.
Therefore,
"...because uniformity is a predicate for UDITPA's success, we believe that we must consider the statutes and rules [of the 4 states]. In the absence of any indication that other UDITPA states apply [the expensed IDC exclusion rule] as did the department and

ATLAS FOUNDRY & MACHINE COMPANY

Atlas Foundry & Machine Company v. Oregon State Tax Commission (1965) - 2 OTR 200.

Atlas Foundry & Machine Company ("Atlas") manufactured and sold special order castings. The manufacturing was performed at its plant in Tacoma, Washington. A small percentage of Atlas' business consisted of manufacturing and selling standard items such as manholes and utility castings. The Oregon Tax Commission believed that Atlas had sufficient activities within the state of Oregon to create nexus for income tax purposes for the period of 1955 through 1961. Atlas argued that its activities in Oregon were within those permitted by PL 86-272 and it was, therefore, immune from income taxation in that state.

An overview of Atlas' business activities follows:

* All of Atlas' orders were accepted in Washington, billed from Washington and payment was received in Washington.

* All of Atlas' orders were filled in Washington and were delivered into Oregon either by common carrier or by Atlas' trucks. Atlas' trucks made about 2 shipments a week into Oregon. The trucks also hauled foundry supplies from a supplier in Oregon on their return trips. All of the foundry purchases were arranged from the Washington location.

* Atlas had one employee salesman who lived in Washington but spent two-thirds of his time in Oregon. His work consisted of promoting goodwill and soliciting sales. The employee had no technical background, did not write orders and could not authorize even minor repairs. At times the employee received customer complaints however he merely sent the information to the Washington office for response. The employee carried no samples.

* Two other employees of Atlas occasionally visited Oregon (about once every six weeks) to visit customers and generally promote goodwill. An inspector and a works manager from Atlas also visited customers in Oregon occasionally to coordinate the inspection department with the wants of the customer and to take care of specific complaints.

* In 1955 and 1956, Atlas maintained a very small sales office in Oregon. The office space was rented from a warehouse company and the furnishings consisted of a desk, chair and telephone.

The telephone was answered by an employee of the warehouse company. The office was primarily used as place where Atlas' customers could reach the company's salesman. A listing appeared in the Portland, Oregon telephone book for Atlas Foundry & Mach. Co. with the salesman listed as a Portland representative and the sales office's address and telephone number.

* Other than in 1955 and 1956, Atlas owned no property in Oregon and never maintained any inventory in the state. Atlas performed no installation in Oregon.

The Oregon Tax Court found that maintaining a sales office in the state exceed the permitted activities of PL 86-272. Therefore, in 1955 and 1956 Atlas was determined to have nexus in Oregon and be liable for Oregon income tax. For all of the other years involved, the Oregon Tax Court found that Atlas' activities in Oregon did not exceed those permitted by PL 86-272, therefore, Atlas was immune from income taxation for those periods.

BALLA

Balla v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1981) - 96 Ill App 3d 293.

Diana Balla had originally claimed exemptions for herself and her three children on both her federal and Illinois income tax returns. The IRS notified Ms. Balla that they were reducing her exemptions by three. The Illinois Department of Revenue, based on the IRS action, also reduced the number of exemptions and recomputed Ms. Balla's income tax liability. Ms. Balla argued that the Department had not met their burden of proof to reduce the number of exemptions she had originally claimed.

The Illinois Appellate Court ruled in favor of the Department. When determining the proper amount of taxable income, the burden of proof ordinarily first falls upon the taxing authority. The Illinois legislature, in an effort to aid the Department, provided in Section 904 of the IITA that the findings of the Department are "prima facie" correct. If a taxpayer provides evidence contrary to the Department's position, the Department must present evidence to overcome the taxpayer's contention.

However, if a taxpayer claims to be exempt from taxation or takes advantage of deductions or credits allowed by statute, the burden of proof first falls upon the taxpayer. "This derives from the fact that deductions and exemptions are privileges created by statute as a matter of legislative grace. Statutes granting such privileges are to be strictly construed in favor of taxation." Therefore, in this case, the burden first fell upon Ms. Balla to show that she was entitled to the three additional exemptions.

THE BARBER-GREENE COMPANY CASE IS AN UNPUBLISHED DECISION OF THE ILLINOIS APPELLATE COURT. UNPUBLISHED OPINIONS DO NOT SET PRECEDENT AND CANNOT BE REFERENCED IN ANY OTHER CASE.

Taxpayer argued that it treated its subsidiaries as an investor would treat its investments and, therefore, should NOT be considered part of a unitary business group with its subsidiaries. The Court agreed with taxpayer's assessment of the facts. It stated that there was no evidence in the record to support the Department's conclusion that Barber-Greene exercised strong central management to achieve economies of scale and functional integration or that the interrelationship between companies is such as it would be impossible to determine income in Illinois without treating the group as a unitary business.

Each of the subsidiaries independently decided which products to produce and there were substantial product differences between the parent and each of the subsidiaries. The subsidiaries were responsible for their own engineering, design and manufacture and the parent and each subsidiary had independent design and engineering departments.

Each of the subsidiaries marketed its own products through independent dealers and there was competition for business among the subsidiaries outside their own natural territory. Each subsidiary established its own product warranty policy and each selected its own suppliers, set its own prices and established its own personnel, salary and benefit programs and policies.

Each subsidiary established its own banking and finance relationships independent of the parent and each other. Each subsidiary was responsible for its own legal and accounting support. In short, the parent emphasized decentralization and treated its subsidiaries as discrete business enterprises.

BARNES DRILL COMPANY

Barnes Drill Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue. Circuit Court 555 June 24, 1991.

Barnes Drill Company filed a complaint for administrative review from decision of the Illinois Department of Revenue. The issue in this case involves a refund in the amount of $39,504. The Drill Company asserted that they were entitled to this refund for the tax year ended June 30, 1981. The point of contention is whether or not this claim was filed in a timely manner. The Department concluded that the Drill Company did not file the claim in time. They denied the refund based on the preceding information.

The interesting dynamics to this case surround the interpretation of the Illinois Income Tax Act Section 203(e)(2)(E) and Sections 506(b) and 911(b). Initially the Department ruled that Barnes was entitled to the refund, but the Director reversed that decision and held that the taxpayer failed to file its claim for refund within two years and twenty days of the payment of the federal tentative carryback adjustment. He disapproved the recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge and denied the refund for 1981 as not being filed in a timely manner. The Court reversed the decision of the Director of the Department of Revenue. It held that regulation 100.5600 allows two deadlines within which to file claims for refund. Under this regulation the taxpayer has two years and twenty days after the final federal determination of taxable income. The ALJ determined that this date was September 19, 1986. The Court agrees with this particular date. The Court ruled that the claim for refund was filed in a timely manner. They held that the plaintiff was entitled to a refund of $39,504.

occurred which generated the pro forma (federal) change, or two years and 20 days from the date the amount of loss...is finally determined for federal purposes.

The controversy that existed in this case surrounded the stipulation of the designated date of final determination of a loss for federal income tax purposes. The Drill Company asserted that the "final federal determination" occurred on the date that the Joint Committee on Taxation approved the grant of the request for a temporary loss carryback adjustment to Barnes and its affiliates. The Court of Appeals agreed with that assertion.

The Court noted that because the Joint Committee had to review and approve the issuance of the check, the temporary loss carryback adjustment was not "final" until such approval by the Joint Committee.

The Court held that for purposes of the running of the applicable limitation period for Barnes' request for Illinois Income tax refund...the adjustment was not final until the Joint Committee issued its report approving the adjustment. The report was issued in September 1986, and the Drill Company's request for a refund fell within the two year/twenty day time limit of regulation section 100.5600(b). The Court of Appeals affirmed the decision of the Circuit Court and the Barnes Drill Company was entitled to receive a refund.

Bass, Ratcliff, & Gretton, Ltd. v. New York State Tax Commission (1924) - 266 US 271.

Bass, Ratcliff, & Gretton, Ltd. ("Bass") contended that the tax New York sought to impose was not based upon net income derived from activities within New York but, rather, was based upon business activities occurring outside of New York and the United States as a whole. Therefore, Bass believed the imposition of the tax was in violation of the Due Process Clause and, by imposing a direct burden upon its foreign commerce, the Commerce Clause.

The US Supreme Court held that Bass carried on a unitary business involving the manufacture and sale of ale, in which the profits were earned by a series of transactions beginning with the manufacture in England and ending with the sales in New York and other states. The manufacturing process resulted in no profits until it ended in sales. Therefore, the Court held that New York was justified in attributing to the State a portion of the profits earned from the entire unitary business.

BELL FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN

Bell Federal Savings and Loan Association v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1982) - 111 Ill App 3d 890.

Bell Federal Savings and Loan Association ("Bell") claimed that Federal law prohibited Illinois from taxing certain funds which Bell received from the Federal Home Loan Savings Bank of Chicago ("FHLB") and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC"). The Illinois Department of Revenue disagreed and the Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of the Department of Revenue.

FHLB DIVIDENDS

Bell argued that the dividends it received on its FHLB stock should be exempt from state taxation under Section 1433 of Title 12 of the United States Code. Section 1433 provides that except for real estate taxes, each regional Federal Home Loan Bank, "including its franchise, its capital, reserves, and surplus, its advances, and its income, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by...any State..." Bell argued that imposing a State tax on the dividends received on FHLB stock would "impermissibly interfere" with FHLB activities, which are exempt.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Secondly Bell argued that the dividends which the FHLB paid to its stockholders were actually "income" or "surplus" of the FHLB and, therefore, was expressly immune from State taxation under Section 1433.

The Appellate Court found that, at best, there might be a remote economic relationship between the FHLB activities and FHLB stock however there was no support for concluding that FHLB dividends were an indispensable or integral part of the exempt FHLB loan process. Therefore, the Court found that the dividends received on FHLB stock were not immune from State taxation by virtue of federal statutes.

Further the Appellate Court found that once the income was passed from the FHLB to the stockholders, it was no longer income of the FHLB. It found nothing to indicate that Congress intended the FHLB exemption from State taxation to flow through to the shareholders. "...section 1433 exempts the income and surplus of the FHLB, not the income and surplus of savings and loan associations."

INCOME RECEIVED FROM THE FSLIC

Bell argued that the income which Bell received as a refund of Bell's pro rata share of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation "secondary reserve" was exempt from state taxation by virtue of Section 1725 of Title 12 of the United States Code. Section 1723 provides that all states are prohibited from taxing the principal and interest of "[a]ll notes, bonds, debentures, or other such obligations issued by the [Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation]."

The FSLIC insured the accounts of federal savings and loan associations. The institutions were charged annual premiums and, at one time, were also required to make contributions to the FLSIC "secondary reserve". Beginning in 1973, the FSLIC was required to make yearly refunds to the institutions of their pro rata share of the secondary reserve. Bell contended that refunds which the FSLIC were required to make were "obligations issued by the FSLIC and were, therefore, exempt from State taxation.

Bell also argued that the refunds received were exempt from State taxation by the portion of Section 1725(e) which exempts the FSLIC itself from State taxation, "including its franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, and income."

The Appellate Court again found in favor of Illinois stating that while the FSLIC's requirement to refund the money could be thought of as an "obligation" of the FSLIC in a very general sense, it could not be considered an "obligation issued" by the FSLIC. Therefore, the refunds were not exempt from taxation by Illinois.

Secondly, the Appellate Court rejected Bell's contention that the refunds were actually "capital, reserves, surplus, and income" of the FSLIC. Again, once title to the funds passed to the savings and loan associations, the money was no longer covered by the exemption for funds belonging to the FSLIC.

BERNARD BEREBHOLTZ

Bernard Berenholtz v. U.S. , U.S. Court of Appeals, Federal Circuit; 2/19/86

Bernard Berenholtz filed a suit requesting a refund of federal income taxes. He sought to recover income taxes in the amounts of $7,093, $24,044, and $25,066, plus interest for the taxable years 1975, 1976 and 1977, respectively. Berenholtz borrowed money from the First National Bank in Princeton to establish a book publishing company, and he sent tax-exempt bonds to the bank for collateral. Berenholtz paid interest on the loans in each of the years 1971 through 1977, and he deducted the interest on his federal income tax return each year. The IRS examined his financial records for the years 1975, 1976, and 1977. They concluded that his interest deductions were not legitimate under the Internal Revenue Code section 265(2).

The issues were:

1. The issue surrounded Berenholtz's claim that he was entitled to a refund for the three years that were in question. Berenholtz claimed interest deductions for the taxable years 1971-1977. The Internal Revenue Service concluded that his Pyne Press indebtedness was indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry Berenholtz' tax exempt bonds, within the meaning of Section 265(2), which provides that no deduction shall be allowed for interest on such indebtedness. In addition to the IRS disallowing the interest deductions, they also disallowed certain deductions for investment and custodial fees claimed by Berenholtz on his 1975, 1976, and 1977, respectively.

2. Berenholtz claimed that he did not use his tax exempt bonds as collateral for the loans. He stated that is other assets were sufficient enough to cover his loans, but no evidence he presented supported this claim. The government was barred by the statute of limitations from making any deficiency assessment against Berenholtz for the years 1971-1974, but they could make upward adjustment to his income for the years that were in question (1975-1977). The adjustment resulted in an increase in Berenholtz' tax liability for 1975, 1976, and 1977. This was a point of contention in the eyes of Berenholtz, but the adjustment was supported under the law. The Court of Appeals affirmed the judgement of the Claims Court and Berenholtz was not entitled to a tax refund for the three years at issue.

BODINE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Bodine Electric Company v. Robert H. Allphin (1980) – 81 Ill 2d 502.

Bodine filed Illinois claims for refund carrying back a net operating loss (NOL) incurred in the year ended 12/31/71 to years ending 12/31/69 and 12/31/70 . For Federal purposes, the NOL was carried back to the year ending 12/31/68 and was entirely absorbed in that year.

Taxpayer contended that for Illinois purposes, the loss should be carried back to 12/31/69 and 12/31/70 since these were the earliest ILLINOIS years available to absorb the NOL carryback. Requiring the NOL to be carried back to 12/31/68 would, in their opinion, result in a retroactive application of the IITA.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled that the legislative intent of the Illinois Income Tax Act (IITA) was to require taxpayers to carry back their net operating losses to the same years and in the same amount as on their federal income tax returns. The Court did not agree that this would result in a retroactive application of the IITA.

This court case is often used as a basis for not allowing deductions from federal taxable income that are not specifically provided by statute.

Appeal of Borden, Inc., California SBE (1977) - CCH California State Income Tax Reporter [1971 - 1978 Transfer Binder], Para. 205-616.

Borden, a multistate corporation, sold its entire California division and realized a capital loss which it claimed as non-business income. The entire capital loss was allocated to California. The sales contract specifically allocated a portion of the purchase price to goodwill.

California regulations define "business income" as income arising from transactions in tangible or intangible property if the acquisition, management, and disposition of the property are integral parts of the taxpayer's regular trade or business. The California regulation also states that gain or loss from the sale of tangible or intangible property is "business income" if the property, while owned by the taxpayer, was used to produce business income.

The SBE ruled that the entire capital loss was "business income" and must be apportioned among the states in which the taxpayer did business. Under the functional test, all income from property is considered business income if the acquisition, management, and disposition of the property are integral parts of the taxpayer's regular business operations, regardless of whether the income was derived from an occasional or extraordinary transaction. The SBE also stated that the capital loss on the sale of goodwill should be treated as "business income" regardless of the fact that the taxpayer did not claim depreciation or any other deductions on it. The SBE concluded that it was undeniable that the goodwill contributed materially to the taxpayer's business as a whole.

Boren v. Tucker, (1956, CA9) - 239 F2d 767, 50 AFTR 1217, 57-1 USTC.

During an investigation of the income tax liability of Clifford and Delta Boren, the IRS issued an administrative subpoena requiring the production of records. When they refused to comply with the subpoena, the IRS filed a petition with the court seeking to enforce the subpoena.

The Court of Appeals ordered them to produce for examination, copying, Photostatting or photographing the documents requested in the subpoena. The Court's ruling established that the right of the IRS to examine a taxpayer's records included the right to make photostatic copies where necessary.

BUFFETS, INC.

Buffets, Inc. v. Department of Revenue. Administrative Hearings. - 12/12/94

Buffets Inc., a corporation engaged in the restaurant business operating in approximately 16 States, filed an objection to the partial denial of replacement tax investment credits. They are also objecting to the penalty imposed by the Department for failure to pay tax pursuant to 35 ILCS 5/1005. Buffets Inc. were seeking to include certain items of tangible personal property that were deemed to be questionable under the replacement tax investment credit divisions of the Illinois Income Tax Act. They were also petitioning the Department to waive their tax liability, based on the notion that their failure to pay their Income Tax liability in a timely fashion, was due to a reasonable cause.

The issues were:

1. The taxpayer was a corporation operating in several states. They desired to include such items as; wet and dry vacuum cleaners, bathrooms, security cameras, telephones and answering machines, employee training and time management systems, computer hardware and software, and employee travel expenses to assist in new store set- up in the category of personal property used in their operations. The Department auditor recommended the denial of the replacement tax investment credit for the property in question because he determined that such property was not used exclusively for retailing.

2. The issue concerning which tangible property is to be included in the calculation of the Personal Property income Tax Credit was resolved using the statute that defines the parameters of what can be included in the calculation of this credit (35 ILCS 5/201 (e)). The credit rate is equal to .5% and the property that qualifies for the credit is defined as; property that is new or used, tangible, depreciable, purchased, not previously used in Illinois for the credit....used in manufacturing, mining, or retailing. The Buffets Corporation claimed that their items were used in the retailing of their business. The auditor determined that the property in question failed to qualify for the replacement tax investment credit because the property was not used exclusively in retailing. The Buffets Corporation waived their right to a hearing and the Administrative Law Judge ruled in favor of the Department of Revenue. He stated that the Corporation did not present any admissible evidence to support their claims of being qualified to receive tax credit on the items that were in question. It was recommended that the Director of Revenue issue a Notice of Decision upholding the Notice of Deficiency in its entirety.

BUTLER BROTHERS

Butler Brothers v. McColgan (CA) (1942) - 315 US 501, 62 SCt 701.

Butler Brothers was an Illinois corporation with its corporate headquarters located in Chicago, Illinois. The company was engaged in the wholesale dry goods and general merchandise business by purchasing from manufacturers and selling only to retailers. The company operated wholesale distributing houses in Chicago, Jersey City, Baltimore, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Dallas, and San Francisco.

Each of the houses served a separate trade territory. Each house maintained its own inventory from which sales were made in its territory. Each house handled its own sales, solicitation, credit and collection activities, and kept books and records showing the operations of the house. All of the California sales were made from the San Francisco house.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

A portion of the operating expenses such as labor, rentals, etc. was incurred exclusively by each of the houses. The remainder of the expenses consisted of common expenses of the corporation such as executive salaries, corporate overhead, and the expenses of operating central advertising and purchasing divisions. The expenses of the advertising and purchasing divisions were allocated to the houses based upon generally accepted accounting principals.

The centralized purchasing division purchased goods for resale which were then shipped by the manufacturer to each house. Because of the large volume of purchases, the centralized purchasing division was able to obtain significant discounts on their purchases. These discounts would not have been realized if each of the individual houses had made their own purchases.

In filing its California Income Tax return, the corporation used separate accounting to compute the taxable income from the operations of the San Francisco house. After calculating the gross profit for the San Francisco house, they deducted the direct expenses for the San Francisco house and an apportioned share of common expenses such as executive salaries, corporate overhead, and the expenses of operating the central advertising and purchasing divisions. The California FTB used formulary apportionment to compute taxable income and assessed an additional tax liability against the corporation.

The issue to be resolved in this case was whether or not it was proper for the California FTB to use formulary apportionment or whether it was proper for Butler Brothers to use separate accounting. Butler Brothers claimed that by using formulary apportionment, California was attempting to tax it on income derived from sources beyond the jurisdiction of the state. The California FTB contended that the tax was levied upon income derived from business activities within California, that the operations of the corporation were unitary, and that the use of formulary apportionment was lawful and proper.

If the business within the state was truly separate from the business without the state, so that the segregation of income could be made clearly and accurately, the separate accounting method would be proper. However, where interstate operations were carried on and the business done within the state could not be separated from that done outside the state, the business would be unitary and formulary apportionment should be used to apportion income.

The US Supreme Court determined that where centralized purchasing and other services are performed for all branches in several states, it is impossible to support the proposition that the California operations did not contribute to the advantages of the taxpayer's unitary business, even though each branch operated independently.

In summary, the three tests of unity established in the Butler Brothers case were:

* Unity of ownership.

CATERPILLAR FINANCIAL SERVICES CORP

Caterpillar Financial Services Corp (Cat) filed its 1987 corporate return as part of the combined unitary group of the 13 other domestic subs of Caterpillar, Inc. State income tax as filed was calculated using the normal three-factor formula.

The issues were:

1. Should Cat be allowed to exclude from base income the Subpart F dividends it received from foreign subsidiaries?

Presently the IITA does not allow a subtraction for dividends received under Subpart F for years prior to 12/31/88.

2. Should Cat be allowed to use an alternative to the standard three-factor formula with respect to royalties and interest received from the foreign subsidiaries?

Cat had argued that the property, payroll or sales that generated the royalty is not included the factors of any domestic company in the group. Therefore the amount that gets apportioned to Illinois is distorted.

The court ruled that:
1. Subpart F dividends can be deducted from Illinois base income for 1987. The court determined that since the Subpart F income is treated as dividends for federal purposes, they should also be treated as dividends for state purposes.

2. No factor relief was allowed for interest and royalty income. The interest and royalties represent costs to the foreign subsidiaries and are not a part of federal taxable income. Since the apportionment formula is intended to "represent the economic factors that generate taxable income", there was no basis for factor relief.

CATERPILLAR TRACTOR CO. (1979)

Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Lenckos (1979) - 32 IllDec786, 77 Ill App 3d 90, affirmed 49 IllDec329, 84 Ill 2d 102, appeal dismissed 103 SCt 3562.

Caterpillar and its subsidiaries originally filed separate apportionment Illinois returns for 1969 through 1974. Each of the returns were filed reflecting subtraction modifications for foreign taxes paid (which were taken as credits on the federal return), Section 78 gross-up and Subpart F income. Each of the companies then filed claims for 1970 through 1974 reporting income using the worldwide unitary apportionment method and a claim for 1969 reflecting additional subtraction modifications for foreign source income.

Caterpillar argued that the unitary method of apportionment was authorized under Section 304(a) of the Illinois Income Tax Act (IITA). Caterpillar introduced extensive evidence showing a strong integrated relationship between the parent and its worldwide subsidiaries and also argued that strict policies were enforced to maintain worldwide uniformity in all phases of their operations including production, marketing and employer-employee relationships under central control of the parent corporation. The basis for excluding 1969 was the contention that the unitary method did not accurately reflect the amount of taxable income for that year since the Illinois Income Tax Act did not take effect until August of 1969.

The Department originally denied the claims but, in Administrative Hearing, the claims were allowed under Section 304(f) of the IITA. The Director also determined that the income tax liabilities for 1969 should be computed using the worldwide unitary apportionment method and denied the deductions taken for foreign taxes paid, dividend income and Subpart F income.

Caterpillar took the case to court. In 1979, the Appellate Court decided that the 1969 return liability should be determined using the worldwide unitary method. However, the Department had attempted to utilize the unitary apportionment method in 1969 to recompute Caterpillar's returns and declare a deficiency even though the original return was beyond the general 3-year statute of limitations. The Appellate Court stated that based on LEWIS V. REYNOLDS, "payments already received may be retained to the extent those funds do not exceed the amount which might have properly been assessed and demanded". Therefore, the Department could only use the unitary apportionment method to REDUCE Caterpillar's claim for refund in the 1969 year to zero. It could NOT be used to propose a deficiency for the year.

This led to an "Action on Decision" by the Department that stated, "the Department unqualifiedly adopts the court's holding that notice of deficiency based upon unreported federal changes may not raise new or additional issues previously barred by the general three-year limitations statute."

The Appellate Court also decided that Caterpillar could not take subtraction modifications not specifically allowed in the Illinois Income Tax Act. The fact that the Illinois General Assembly had subsequently created a deduction for one of the items (Section 78 Gross-up) by statutory amendment created the presumption that it was intended to change the former law and therefore, "it becomes clear that the former law did not provide for such a deduction, even implicitly."

The portions of the Appellate Court's decision involving the unitary apportionment method and the ability to deduct foreign taxes paid were appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court (See CATERPILLAR (1981)). The portions of the decision regarding the ability to deduct Section 78 Gross-up and Subpart F income were not appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court. Therefore, on these issues, the Appellate Court decision stands.

Ultimately, the Illinois Supreme Court found that the unitary method of apportionment was allowable in Illinois for all years. The Court also found that Caterpillar was not allowed to deduct foreign taxes paid which were claimed as credit on their federal tax return. The taxpayer elected to take the tax credit on their federal return and that election is binding. In addition, the IITA contained no modification for any type of foreign taxes paid until the Section 78 Gross-up subtraction came into effect in 1975.

CHASE BRASS & COPPER COMPANY

Chase Brass & Copper Co. v. FTB (1970) - 10 Cal App 3d 496, 87 Cal Rptr 239.

Chase Brass & Copper Company (Chase) was a wholly owned subsidiary of Kennecott Copper Corp. (Kennecott) which had its corporate headquarters in New York. Kennecott mined, smelted and refined copper, gold, silver, and molybdenite and was the largest producer of copper in the United States.

The issue in this case was whether or not Chase was engaged in a unitary business with Kennecott or any of its subsidiaries.

A brief description of the business operations of Kennecott and its wholly owned subsidiaries follows:

* Kennecott Copper Co. was engaged in the business of mining, smelting, and refining copper, gold, silver, and molybdenite. Kennecott had no business operations in California.

* Braden Copper (Braden) operated mines in Chile. Ordinarily, it sold copper to the government of Chile and other purchasers in the world market. During the years being audited, it made some sales through Kennecott Sales Corp. in the United States because of shortages in this country.

* Chase manufactured brass, bronze and copper rod, sheet, wire and tube. Approximately 80% of the copper purchased by Chase was from either Kennecott or Braden. Chase did not manufacture any products in California but did have a warehouse located in California that stored and sold products for itself and Kennecott Wire & Cable Co.

* Kennecott Sales Corp. (Kennecott Sales) performed all of the activities associated with the sale of copper in the United States for Kennecott and Braden. Kennecott Sales charged Kennecott a commission on all sales made.

* Bear Creek Mining explored for metals in California.

* Kennecott Wire & Cable Co. (Kennecott Wire) manufactured copper rod, wire, and cable for transmission of electricity. It used refined primary copper, all of which it purchased from Kennecott or Braden through Kennecott Sales.

The case was decided based upon the unitary principals established in the Butler Brothers case. A business is considered unitary if these circumstances are met:

* Unity of ownership,

* Unity of operation as evidenced by central purchasing, advertising, accounting and management divisions, and

* Unity of use of its centralized executive force and general system of operations.

The unity of ownership test was met since all of the corporations were 100%- owned subsidiaries of Kennecott.

Although there is not a clear distinction between what is "unity of operation" and what is "unity of use", the court stated that, in general, the acts falling within the category of "unity of operation" are staff functions, and those within "unity of use" are line functions.

UNITY OF OPERATION

The staff functions of a vertically integrated enterprise probably are not so markedly unitary as they are in a horizontally integrated business. In the case of horizontal integration, functions such as centralized control of advertising of the same product, centralized purchasing, etc. are designed to give advantages to the business - despite geographic differences. In the case of vertical integration involving various steps in the production and distribution of a product, integration of staff functions probably will be considerably less.

The following staff functions were examined by the court to determine the extent of the unity of operations:

* Purchasing- Chase had its own purchasing department. Kennecott did some minor purchasing (other than copper) for Chase.

* Advertising- Chase maintained its own advertising program and budget. Chase's name and trademark were predominantly displayed in their advertisements but they often stated that they were a subsidiary of Kennecott. Both Chase and Kennecott used the same advertising agency.

* Accounting- Chase and Kennecott had their own accounting departments but used the same accounting firm.

* Legal- Chase had its own legal staff and usually hired its own outside attorneys. However, Chase's protest to the California Franchise Tax Board was handled by Kennecott's legal department.

* Financing- Chase borrowed $10,000,000 at the prime rate from Kennecott to rehabilitate a manufacturing plant in Waterbury, Connecticut that was severely damaged by flood.

The court considered this to be a substantial indication of unity of operation. The court reasoned that Chase may have been able to borrow the money from a financial institution but the fact remains that it was able to turn readily to its parent for help.

* Retirement plans- There was a common retirement plan for employees of Chase and Kennecott. The retirement plan was administered by Kennecott.

UNITY OF USE

The following line functions were examined by the court to determine the extent of the unity of use:

* Chase had the assistance and direction of the executives of Kennecott.

The court felt that such an integration of executive forces was an extremely important indication of unity of use.

* The Board of Directors of Kennecott devoted the majority of its time to the problems facing the copper industry in general, including the development and maintenance of its fabricating subsidiaries.

* The executives of the subsidiaries reported to the president of Kennecott with respect to major policy matters.

The court considered the control of major policy matters to be a significant indication of unity of use. The court did not place much emphasis on the fact that the subsidiaries controlled their own day to day operations.

* Kennecott reviewed the executive salaries for Chase.

* Kennecott sold about 20% of its total copper production to Chase through Kennecott Sales. Kennecott sold to Chase at exactly the same price as that which it charged Chase's competitors.

The court then looked at the relationship between Chase and Kennecott Wire. Chase had taken over the sales of a major part of the products sold by Kennecott Wire. Chase warehoused the products of Kennecott Wire and Chase's salesmen called on prospective wire and copper customers. If Chase's salesmen obtained orders, they sent them to Kennecott Wire. The orders were filled and shipped in the name of Chase. Chase received a discount on the products sold.

The court ruled that a unitary relationship was present between Kennecott, Kennecott Sales, and Chase due to the Kennecott's control of major policy decisions and the amount of intercompany sales. The court also ruled that although the products were different (although they were all, to some extent, composed of copper), the activities clearly showed that a unitary relationship existed between Chase and Kennecott Wire. The court concluded that Braden and Bear Creek should not be included in the unitary group.

Finally, the court decided that Kennecott's sales of gold, silver, and molybdenite, which were not bought by Chase or Kennecott Wire, were not part of the unitary business. The fact that these metals come from the same ore as that which produces copper was not sufficient to cause this activity to be a part of the unitary business.

CHEN

Chen et al. v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1990) - 145 Ill App 3d 520, 495 NE2d 1124.

Monroe-Franklin Properties was a partnership that, during the year ending 12/31/83, conducted business in Illinois and filed an IL-1065.

During 1971, the partnership acquired a building at 230 W. Monroe St. in Chicago, Illinois. On July 1, 1979, the building was valued at $36,700,000 and the partnership's basis in the building for federal income tax purposes was $12,627,926. The value of the building exceeded the partnership's basis by $24,072,074 on July 1, 1979. The partnership sold the building in September, 1983.

The partnership reported Unmodified Base Income of $30,955,821 on its IL-1065 return for the year ending 12/31/83. The partnership claimed a valuation limitation deduction of $24,072,074 on the return. The partnership clearly stated on the IL-1065 return that the valuation limitation deduction had been calculated from July 1, 1979 rather than August 1, 1969 which was the date required by the return.

The Department determined that the partnership had improperly reduced its base income by calculating the valuation limitation deduction from July 1, 1979 instead of August 1, 1969. The Department disallowed the valuation limitation deduction and issued the partnership a non-protestable, MATH ERROR notice. The Department assessed a Replacement Tax deficiency of $361,081 against the partnership.

The partnership paid the deficiency and on the same day filed a claim for refund with the Department. The Department subsequently notified the partnership that their claim for refund had been denied based on the position that the valuation limitation deduction should have been calculated from August 1, 1969, instead of July 1, 1979, the date used by the partnership. The issue was ultimately decided by the Illinois Appellate Court.

Prior to July 1, 1979, a partnership's net income had been treated as income of the partners and was subject to Illinois Income Tax at ONLY the partner level. The Illinois Partnership Return (IL-1065) was strictly an information return. However, for tax years ending on or after July 1, 1979, PA 81-1stSS-1 amended the IITA to create the Personal Property Tax Replacement Tax ("Replacement Tax"). The Replacement Tax is based upon the Illinois net income earned by corporations, trusts, estates, AND PARTNERSHIPS.

PA 81-1stSS-1 also created numerous addition and subtraction modifications for partnerships. Sec. 203(d)(2)(E) allowed a partnership to claim a subtraction modification for the valuation limitation amount. Sections 203(a)(2)(G) and 203(c)(2)(I) of the IITA had allowed the same subtraction modification for individuals, trusts and estates since 1970. The valuation limitation amount is defined in Sec. 203(f) of the IITA.

In general, the valuation limitation amount is equal to:

* The sum of the pre-August 1, 1969 appreciation amounts (consisting of gains reportable under the provisions of Sections 1245 and 1250 of the IRC) for all property on which these gains were reported, plus

* The lessor of:

 The sum of the pre-August 1, 1969 appreciation amounts (consisting of capital gains) for all property on which capital gains were reported for federal income tax purposes, or

 The net capital gain for the taxable year.

Sec. 203(f) was passed by the General Assembly in 1971 and was not amended in 1979 to provide a valuation date for Sec. 203(d)(2)(E) dealing with partnerships. Consequently, the partnership argued that the valuation date for partnerships under the replacement tax should be July 1, 1979 (the date the Replacement Tax became effective). The partnership also argued that the Department was applying the IITA retroactively instead or prospectively. Since, when enacting the Replacement Tax, the General Assembly did not specify a date from which to measure the valuation limitation deduction for partnerships, and since the August 1, 1969 date was retrospective, the partnership concluded that the Department should have used the July 1, 1979 date.

The Department argued that in 1979 since the General Assembly did not amend Sec. 203(f) to make reference to the newly created Sec. 203(d)(2)(E) which dealt with partnerships, they intended to allow a valuation limitation deduction for partnership which was consistent with that provided to individuals, trusts and estates. Finally, the Department noted that the General Assembly amended Section 203(f) on September 18, 1986, to include a reference to the partnership subtraction modification but did not create any special provisions for partnerships in the computation of the subtraction modification.

The Illinois Appellate Court ruled that the valuation limitation deduction provided for partnerships in Sec. 203(d)(2)(E) should be calculated from August 1, 1969 instead of July 1, 1979. The Court did not feel that the use of the August 1, 1969 date resulted in a retroactive application of the IITA. The court reasoned that a tax measured by income is a tax upon realized gains. The fact that a portion of the gain is attributable to increases in value of income-producing items prior to the effective date of an amendment to the IITA, or may be attributable to something done prior to such date, does not render the statute retroactive so long as the gain is not realized until after such date.

CHICAGO TITLE AND TRUST

Chicago Title and Trust Co. v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1986) - 100 Ill Dec 502, 146 Ill App 3d 923.

Chicago Title and Trust incurred federal net operating losses from 1971 through 1976. The company filed its Illinois tax returns starting with Line 30 of its federal return for each year. The negative amounts reported on Line 1 of its Illinois returns involved both current year losses and federal loss carryforwards. The Department adjusted the returns based on its "Line 1 cannot be less than zero" position for years ending prior to December 1, 1983.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that the Department had no authority for limiting Illinois Line 1 to zero. If "federal taxable income" was actually a federal loss or if that federal loss were carried into another year, that negative number should be allowed as a starting point for Illinois tax computations as long as no double deduction of the loss occurred since double deductions were expressly prohibited by the IITA.

Citizens State Bank of Mount Morris ("Citizens") claimed a US interest deduction on its 1979 and 1980 Illinois income tax returns for interest income received on Ginnie Maes. Citizens relied on Information Bulletin ITIB 1973-1 which listed GNMA participation certificates were an obligation of the US governments and, therefore, were exempt from state taxation by virtue of federal statutes.

In audit, the Illinois Department of Revenue disallowed the deduction claiming that Ginnie Maes were not US obligations and relying on Information Bulletin ITIB 1981-2 which had been published after Citizens' original returns for 1979 and 1980 were filed.

Citizens argued that the Department was bound by ITIB 1973-1 until ITIB 1981-2 was issued and could not retroactively apply the positions taken in ITIB 1981-2.

The Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of the Department of Revenue. The Court relied on two previous Illinois Appellate Court decisions in the cases of Montgomery Ward Life Insurance Company v. the Department of Local Government Affairs and Rockford Life Insurance Company v. the Department of Revenue. In each of these cases it was decided that Ginnie Maes were not obligations of the United States government and that the prior publication of regulations, manuals, etc. which erroneously listed non-exempt obligations as being exempt obligations did not cause the obligations to become "exempt".

CITIZENS UTILITIES COMPANY OF ILLINOIS

Citizens Utilities Company of Illinois v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1986) - 111 Ill 2d 32.

Citizens Utilities Company of Illinois ("Citizens") filed Illinois returns for 1978 through 1981 using separate apportionment. Since Citizens was a 100% Illinois corporation, this method of filing equated to separate accounting. In audit it was determined that Citizens was a member of a unitary group of companies and was required to apportion its income to Illinois using the unitary apportionment method.

Citizens argued that:

* The unitary apportionment method should not apply to such highly regulated companies as public utilities. Citizens believed that separate accounting accurately reflected the activities of each utility company of the affiliated group.

* They had relied on ITIB 1975-1, which stated that unitary apportionment was no longer permitted in Illinois, to compute its Illinois liabilities and, therefore, did not seek rate increases from the ICC like they would have done if they known they had to file unitary returns.

* Even if unitary was allowable in Illinois, it was not unitary with the other members of its affiliated group.

* Unitary apportionment caused a distorted amount of income to be apportioned to Illinois.

The Illinois Supreme Court, on direct appeal from the Circuit Court of Cook County, found that:

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

* The IITA contained no provision to allow utility companies to compute their Illinois tax liabilities using essentially separate accounting. In fact, the IITA contained special apportionment formulas for other highly regulated companies such as financial organizations, insurance companies and transportation companies, therefore, it intended all companies to apportion unless distortion occurred.

* Citizens could not have relied on ITIB 1975-1 because ITIB 1975-2 which was issued 8 days later stated that repeal of the Compact provisions had no substantive effect on apportionment or allocation provisions of the IITA. Also, since Citizens was arguing that it was not unitary even if unitary is allowable in Illinois, it would not have filed unitary returns even if they believed it to be allowable/required in Illinois.

* The manifest weight of the evidence supported the Hearing Officers decision that Citizens was a member of a unitary group:

 The companies had the same officers and interlocking Board of Directors.

 Specific approval of the parent was necessary for all purchases exceeding $500.

 The parent reviewed all major engineering projects and provided legal assistance and complex accounting functions including preparation of tax returns for the subsidiaries at cost.

 The parent was able to "borrow" money from the subsidiaries at the parent's discretion by debiting the subsidiary's intercompany account. The money was "borrowed" interest-free. This was considered to be a very important unitary tie.

The Court felt that the evidence supported the Hearing Officer's decision that a flow of value existed between the companies that resulted in an economy of scale.

* Citizens did not prove that the unitary apportionment method produced a distorted result even though the unitary method of apportionment increased Citizens' tax liability by 213% over that computed using separate accounting. The Court felt that the 213% difference could just as easily be due to the distorted nature of separate accounting. The taxpayer therefore did not meet the burden of proof necessary for invoking Section 304(f) relief.

COCA-COLA

Coca-Cola Company v. Oregon Department of Revenue (1975) - 533 P2d 788.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The Coca-Cola Company was a manufacturer of soft drink syrups for fountain and bottled use. The syrups were sold to wholesale druggists, independent wholesale dealers and to approximately 900 bottling plants throughout the US. About 40 of the 900 bottlers were 100% owned by Coca-Cola. The rest were independently owned.

Coca-Cola originally filed separate apportionment returns in Oregon for the tax years 1963 - 1966. Oregon determined that Coca-Cola and its subsidiaries were involved in a unitary business relationship and, therefore, must file Oregon returns using combined apportionment. The Oregon Supreme Court agreed.

Coca-Cola argued that the wholly-owned bottling plants were treated no different than the independent bottling plants. Syrup was sold to the two types of bottlers at the same price. Intercompany sales between Coca-Cola and the subsidiaries amounted to only about 5% of the company's total sales. Coca-Cola was not significantly involved in the day-to-day management of the subsidiaries.

Oregon agreed that the wholly-owned bottlers were treated essentially the same as the independent bottlers. However, the State believed that Coca-Cola was involved in a unitary relationship with ALL of the bottlers. The independent bottlers were not included in the unitary group due to Coca-Cola's lack of ownership of the companies.

Oregon based its case, and the Oregon Supreme Court based its decision, on the following unitary factors:

* The sales of the bottled syrup were made through long-standing contracts with all of the bottlers. The contracts prevented the bottlers from buying syrups and bottling beverages from others who were in substantial competition with Coca-Cola products. All of the bottlers were wholly dependent upon Coca-Cola for the syrups used.

* Strict quality controls were imposed by Coca-Cola on all of the bottlers. Equipment and packaging was controlled by Coca-Cola for all of the bottlers.

* Advertising of the final product was primarily handled by Coca-Cola for all of the bottlers.

* Neither the independents nor the wholly owned bottlers could change their market territory without the approval of Coca-Cola.

COMPLETE AUTO TRANSIT

Complete Auto Transit v. Brady (1977) - 430 US 274.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Complete Auto was a Michigan corporation engaged in the business of transporting motor vehicles for the General Motors Corporation. The case involved transportation services Complete Auto conducted in Mississippi. GM shipped motor vehicles by rail to Jackson, Mississippi. Within 48 hours of their arrival, the vehicles would be loaded onto trucks and delivered to various dealers in the State by Complete Auto. Mississippi sought to impose a sales tax on these sales of transportation services in Mississippi.

Complete Auto argued that the tax Mississippi was assessing was, by statute, a tax imposed on "the privilege of...doing business" within the State. The taxpayer believed that the tax was in violation of the Commerce Clause based on an earlier decision of the US Supreme Court in the case of Spector Motor Service. In the Spector case the Court held that a tax on the "privilege" of engaging in an activity in the State may not be applied to an activity that is part of interstate commerce.

The US Supreme Court decided that the tax being assessed in the Complete Auto case was NOT unconstitutional. The decision in the Spector case looked only to the fact that the incidence of the tax was on the "privilege of doing business". It did not consider the practical effect of the tax and in essence suggested that interstate commerce should be granted an immunity from taxation. Numerous US Supreme Court decisions since the Spector decision had looked at the practical effect of various tax statutes and had determined that no such blanket immunity exists. In Complete Auto the Court summarized the elements of the prior decisions by stating that a tax that was applied to an interstate activity would not be unconstitutional under the Commerce Clause simply because it was statutorily identified as a "privilege" tax. Rather, the determination of whether or not a tax was constitutional should be based on what has become known as the "four-prong test":

* Is the tax applied against an activity that has a substantial nexus with the taxing state;

* Is the tax fairly apportioned;

* Does the tax discriminate against interstate commerce; and

* Is the tax fairly related to the services provided by the taxing state.

CONTAINER CORPORATION OF AMERICA

Container Corporation of America v. FTB (1983) - 463 US 159, 77 L ED 2d 545, 103 SCt 2933.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Container was a manufacturer of custom-ordered paperboard packaging. It was headquartered in Illinois and transacted business throughout the United States and, through its subsidiaries, the world. California determined upon audit that Container and its subsidiaries were involved in a worldwide unitary business relationship.

Container claimed that California's worldwide unitary business method of taxation for franchise tax purposes violated the Due Process Clause and the Commerce Clause of the Federal Constitution. Container based its arguments on three issues:

* Do Container Corporation and its subsidiaries located throughout the world constitute a unitary business group for state taxation purposes?

* Even if the unitary business group finding is proper, do certain differences between domestic and foreign operations make the worldwide unitary apportionment method unfair?

* In any event, does the worldwide unitary apportionment method violate the Foreign Commerce Clause of the Federal Constitution?

The US Supreme Court found in favor of California on all counts.

UNITARY BUSINESS ISSUE

In order for unitary apportionment to be proper, the out-of-state activities of the unitary business must be related in some concrete way to the in-State activities.

"...there must be some sharing or exchange of value not capable of precise identification or measurement - beyond the mere flow of funds arising out of a passive investment or a distinct business operation - which renders formula apportionment a reasonable method of taxation."

This was the first time the "flow of value" concept was identified. Prior to the Container decision, a unitary business relationship had to be substantiated by "tangible" evidence alone (i.e. flow of goods or services, transfers of personnel, flow and/control of funds, etc.).

In Container the Court stated:

"Investment in a business enterprise truly "distinct" from a corporation's main line of business often serves the primary function of diversifying the corporate portfolio and reducing the risks inherent in being tied to one industry's business cycle. When a corporation invests in a subsidiary that engages in the same line of work as itself, it becomes much more likely that one function of the investment is to make better use - either through economies of scale or through operational integration or sharing of expertise - of the parent's existing business-related resources."

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In other words, when two corporations are involved in the same line of business there is at least a limited presumption that the two entities share a flow of expertise that may not be tangibly measured but that indicates the existence of a unitary business relationship.

California did not base its unitary determination merely on this presumption however. Many of the "major" unitary criteria (such as intercompany sales, purchasing, etc.) did not exist so the determination was supported by tangible evidence showing that the parent assisted the subsidiaries in obtaining equipment and filling personnel needs that could not be met locally. The parent also loaned funds to the subsidiaries, guaranteed loans provided to the subsidiaries by third parties, was greatly involved in the subsidiaries' corporate expansion plans, and provided technical assistance and general management guidance.

APPORTIONMENT FAIRNESS ISSUE

Container argued that the standard 3-factor formula applied on a worldwide unitary basis was unfair and was out of appropriate proportion to the business transacted in the State. Container challenged the formula on two grounds:

* The foreign subsidiaries were much more profitable than the domestic parent, therefore, the standard 3-factor formula distorted the proper allocation of unitary group income.

* The wages of the foreign subsidiaries' workers are generally lower than the wages of the domestic workers. Since one of the factors used is based on payroll, the formula becomes distorted.

The Court rejected both of these arguments.

"The problem with [the first] argument is obvious; the profit figures relied on by appellant are based on precisely the sort of formal geographical accounting whose basic theoretical weaknesses justify resorting to formula apportionment in the first place."

The second argument, and the evidence presented to support the argument, does not impeach the basic rationale behind the 3-factor formula. Container and its subsidiaries have been determined to constitute a unitary group, therefore, it:

"...may well be that in addition to the foreign payroll going into the production of any given corrugated container by a foreign subsidiary, there is also California payroll, as well as other California factors, contributing - albeit more indirectly - to the same production."

FOREIGN COMMERCE CLAUSE ISSUE

Since Container's unitary group involved not only domestic companies but also foreign subsidiaries, the constitutionality of this method of taxation was also examined in light of the Foreign Commerce Clause.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

The US Supreme Court had previously held in the case of Japan Line, Ltd. that the risk of multiple taxation of income is enhanced when foreign commerce is involved. Also, in these cases it is very possible that a state tax will impair federal uniformity. The Court ruled that the tax being imposed in Japan Line was unconstitutional.

Although the Container case contained many similarities to the Japan Lines case there were also enough differences to cause the Court to find that the tax being imposed in Container was constitutional. For instance:

* Japan Lines involved a property tax while Container involved a tax on income.

* In Japan Lines one taxing jurisdiction was claiming the right to tax in full while the other jurisdiction was attempting to tax in part. In Container both jurisdictions are attempting to allocate the income of a multi-national enterprise.

* The tax in Japan Line fell on the foreign owners of the entities involved. In Container, the tax was imposed on the corporation domiciled and headquartered in the United States.

CONTINENTAL ILLINOIS (1975)

Department of Revenue v. Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Company (1975) - Ill App 3d 326.

On August 22, 1972, the Illinois Department of Revenue issued a subpoena duces tecum ordering Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Company ("Continental") to produce records pertaining to one of their customers, Julius W. Butler. The records were necessary to determine Mr. Butler's Illinois income tax liability for 1969 - 1971. The Circuit Court of Cook County ordered Continental to comply with the subpoena.

Mr. Butler alone appealed the decision. Mr. Butler contested the decision by taking the position that the subpoena power granted to the Department by the IITA was unconstitutional in that it violated the Due Process Clause. He maintained that the subpoena power:

* Was overly broad and open-ended,

* Neglected to require (as a precondition to the subpoena's issuance) an administrative hearing to be held,

* Caused a financial burden on the third party holder of the materials,

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. * Violated the Federal and State constitutional guarantees of privacy as to both the holder of the materials and the taxpayer, and

* Illegally failed to provide the taxpayer with formal notice of an investigation.

The Illinois Appellate Court upheld the Department's subpoena. In answer to Mr. Butler's arguments, the Court held:

* The subpoena power was not overly broad. Continental was not only the holder of the information but also the owner of them. Further the Department had shown that the investigation was being conducted for a legitimate purpose, the request for information was relevant to that purpose, the information was not in the Department's possession, and the proper statutory administrative steps had been taken.

* The subpoena was issued to Continental who was not attacking the breadth, reach or financial responsibilities encountered in complying with it. Throughout the proceedings, Continental had stated that it would readily comply with the subpoena upon court order and final resolution of the challenge.

* Mr. Butler did not show any established legal privilege (such as attorney-client), any work product claim or any proprietary interest in regard to the materials which would support his contention that the subpoena would violate his privacy rights.

* Finally, Mr. Butler had sufficient notice of the investigation when he was made a party to the proceedings. Since Mr. Butler had not shown that he was injured by his lack of formal notice, no constitutional challenge would be considered.

CONTINENTAL ILLINOIS (1984)

Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago v. Lenckos (1984) - 102 Ill 2d 210, 105 SCt 296.

Continental paid the audit liabilities proposed on its 1973, 1974 and 1975 returns under protest and filed a complaint in the circuit court of Cook County. Two major issues were involved in this case:

* Amortization of federally-exempt obligation bond premium.

* Inclusion of US obligation interest in the apportionment formula.

The Illinois Supreme Court found in favor of the taxpayer on both issues.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

AMORTIZATION OF BOND PREMIUM

Continental believed that the addition modification contained in Section 203(b)(2)(A) of the IITA should be computed as interest received on federally-exempt obligations net of any amortization of premium. The Department had taken the position that the addition modification should be gross interest received.

The Illinois Supreme Court decided in favor of Continental. It found that the addition modification should be interest received, net of amortization, because:

* Requiring gross interest to be added-back would result in a tax on capital rather than a tax on net income.

This was based on two US Tax Court cases involving US obligation interest and the corresponding amortization.

* In order for this provision of the IITA to be constitutional it could not arbitrarily discriminate between taxpayers. If gross federally-exempt interest were required to be added back, the provision would discriminate between holders of federally-exempt obligations and federally-taxable obligations since federally-taxable obligations are included in federal taxable income (and thus taxed by Illinois) net of amortization.

* The enactment of PA 83-561 which allows a subtraction modification for deductions related to federally-exempt obligations which are not allowed federally was a clarification of (rather than a change to) existing law.

INCLUSION OF US OBLIGATION INTEREST IN THE APPORTIONMENT FORMULA

The second major issue decided in the Continental case involved the inclusion of interest income from US Government obligations in the apportionment formula of a financial organization.

The Department took the position that the interest should be included in the apportionment formula since, although federal statutes prohibit directly or indirectly taxing the interest from these obligations, the apportionment formula is only a method of distributing income of an entity between taxing jurisdictions. The Multistate Tax Commission supported the Department's position.

The Illinois Supreme Court found that inclusion of this interest in the apportionment formula resulted in the indirect (at a minimum) consideration of a US Government obligation in the computation of a State tax. Therefore, the Court found in favor of Continental.

37.5.45. DAVEY

United States v. Davey (1976) - 543 F2d 996.

The IRS brought action seeking an order compelling compliance with a summons to require the production of 37 computer tapes comprising part of a corporate taxpayer's (Continental Corporation) financial record keeping system. The taxpayer, through its Secretary, Davey, first offered printouts in lieu of the tapes, then agreed to produce duplicate tapes if the IRS would pay for the cost of duplicating the tapes.

The court ruled that:

* The statute which allowed the IRS to compel production of books, papers, records or other data relevant or material to the examination of a tax liability, encompassed records or data stored in the form of computer tapes;

* The test of materiality and relevance was whether the inspection might throw light on correctness of taxpayer's returns;

* The statute prohibiting an unnecessary examination or investigation by the IRS did not allow a taxpayer to give the service requested information in an inconvenient form in an effort to keep from providing it in a more convenient form;

* Once the IRS had made a minimal showing of the relevancy of the sought material, the burden shifts to the taxpayer to show why a summons might represent an abuse of the courts' process that should not be enforced;

* Where the accuracy of a taxpayer's return was being checked, the IRS was entitled to use original records for purposes of verification rather than be forced to accept purported copies which present a risk of error or tampering and the IRS should not be put in a position of having to prove such error or tampering before it may use the originals;

* If the taxpayer was concerned about the safety of the tapes, it should make duplicates before complying with the summons; and

* The cost of duplicating the tapes had to be borne by the taxpayer.

37.5.46. JOHN DEERE PLOW COMPANY

John Deere Plow Company of Moline v. FTB (1951) - 38 Cal2d 214, 238 P2d 569.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

John Deere Company of Moline ("John Deere") was a subsidiary of Deere and Company, an Illinois corporation. Deere and Company and its subsidiaries were involved in a vertically integrated, unitary business involved in the manufacture and sales of farm equipment. Included in the affiliated group of corporations were factories, jobbing houses and retail outlets. In California, John Deere operated a jobbing house in San Francisco. This jobbing house was involved in sales in California, Arizona and Nevada. Equipment was also exported to the Orient from this location.

John Deere filed income tax returns in California using separate accounting which resulted in the California jobbing house incurring a loss for the period in question. California subsequently audited the returns and determined that John Deere was a member of Deere and Company's unitary group and its California tax liability should be computed using unitary, 3-factor apportionment.

John Deere did not dispute the fact that it was involved in a unitary relationship with Deere and Company and its affiliates. The company also conceded that the formula apportionment usually produces a reasonable result. John Deere argued, however, that IN THIS CASE that the unitary 3-factor formula was improper due to unusual conditions which occurred during the period in question -i.e. increased operating expenses and decreased financial return. Therefore, the company believed that separate accounting for the California jobbing house was the proper method to use in computing California income.

Although the California Supreme Court did not question the trial court's determination that the separate accounting records of the company accurately reflected the sales and expenses of the California jobbing house, it also did not believe that fact precluded the finding that the records did not accurately reflect the income which should be attributed to California. In relying on earlier cases the Court held that although a particular accounting system might be a useful or necessary business aid, it may not meet the requirements when a State seeks to determine its proper tax liability. In the Court's opinion, the unitary, 3-factor formula fairly calculated the portion of the unitary income of the Deere unitary group attributable to the business done within California.

"[The] plaintiff fails to take into account the underlying concept of formula apportionment in the allocation of income from a unitary business: that the unitary income is derived from the functioning of the business as a whole, to which the activities in the various states contribute; and that by reason of such interrelated activities in the integrated overall enterprise, the business done within the state is not truly separate and distinct from the business done without the state so as reasonably to permit a segregation of income under the separate accounting method rather than use of the formula method in assigning to the taxing state its fair share of taxable values."

DOVER CORPORATION

Dover Corp v. IL Dept of Revenue. Circuit Court Cook County 8/17/93.

Issues:

A. Sales Throwbacks

Dover Corp is a unitary filer which had contested the Department's treatment of throwback sales. Dover argued that certain subsidiaries had nexus in various states and therefore the unitary group as a whole was subject to the other states' jurisdiction under IITA Section 303(f). Dover based its opinion on the Finnigan court case.

The Department takes the position that each company stands on its own when determining nexus. Also per IAC Section 100.3200(a)(2) TP's must prove not only that they are taxable in a state, but also that they paid that state's tax. This position is supported by GTE Automatic Electric v. Allphin (1977).

The court ruled in favor of the Department on this issue by saying that the Department's method assures that 100% of the business income of a corporation is allocated to some state which was the intent of the legislature. Also the act uses singular words in referring to a taxpayer. There is no reason to believe that "taxpayer" refers to a group of companies.

B. Non-business capital gains, interest, and royalties:

In the second issue the Department had claimed that capital gains, interest income, and royalties were all business income, but the ALJ had ruled that only the royalties were business income - capital gains and interest income were non-business. The court affirmed the decision of the ALJ.

1. Capital Gains and Interest Income

This was from Schroeder fund capital gains and Eurodollar interest which resulted from investments in non-U.S. operations and managed outside of Illinois. The Department argued that the investments came from excess working capital and were made so that the TP could "gain exposure to European financial market."

The court used the guidelines given in Allied Signal case (Chapter 37, Page 16). In Allied in order for income to be business income it "must serve an operational rather than an investment function". Also in that case it was determined that the corporate strategy of acquisitions and disposals did not otherwise convert a passive investment into an operational one. The court determined that the investments were passive in nature and bear no relation to the activities of the unitary business.

2. Royalties

Unlike the capital gains and interest issue, the court affirmed that the royalties do serve an operational purpose because the patents that generated the royalties were created in the regular course of the TP's business. The decision of the ALJ that this is business income was affirmed by the court.

DOW CHEMICAL

Dow Chemical v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1991) - 224 Ill App 3d 263, 586 NE2d 516.

Dow Chemical originally filed its Illinois income tax returns for the years ending 1975 through 1978 on a separate apportionment basis. The Department subsequently conducted an audit on the returns (also using separate apportionment) which resulted in an additional liability being proposed. A Notice of Deficiency was issued in December 1979 which Dow protested in January 1980. After several meetings between the Department and Dow, it was determined that the case should be returned for a re-audit.

The re-audit was finalized in December 1983 and the revised results, which were based on the unitary apportionment method, revealed that Dow and the other members of its unitary group had overpaid its Illinois liability for the years in question. Dow filed an amended protest and requested the return of its overpayment. Dow's request was denied since the Statute of Limitations had expired for filing claims for the years involved.

When Dow filed its return for 1984, it attempted to credit a portion of the prior "overpayment" to offset its 1984 tax liability. A subsequent Department hearing determined that Dow was not entitled to a refund of the out-of-statute overpayment nor was the company entitled to offset any future liability by the prior "overpayment".

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Dow argued that Sections 904 and 909 of the Illinois Income Tax Act requires the Department to refund overpayments which occurred as a result of the Department's errors in calculating a taxpayer's correct tax liability even if no claim is filed. Secondly, Dow argued that the 1984 amendment to Section 909(a) which allowed the Department to collect time-barred liabilities by withholding subsequent overpayments also requires the Department to issue time-barred overpayments.
Finally, Dow argued that based upon equitable principles it should be allowed to recover its substantial overpayment.

The Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of the Department. In response to each of Dow's arguments, the Court held:

* While Sections 904 and 909 of the IITA when "viewed in isolation" would appear to support the company's contention, every section of the IITA must be read in conjunction with the rest of the Act. Section 911 states that a claim must be filed with the proper time period. Therefore, although the Department has a duty to refund overpayments, taxpayers have the duty to file proper claims to receive those refunds.

* While the 1984 amendment to Section 909(a) allowed the Department to offset liabilities for which the collection period has expired by subsequent overpayments, the language does not allow taxpayers to credit a time-barred overpayment against a subsequent liability.

* While Dow has a good argument that Illinois was in a state of confusion over the unitary issue during the years involved, it is not a persuasive one. The Department bulletin (ITIB 1975-1) which was issued stating that unitary reporting was no longer authorized in Illinois was retracted eight days later (ITIB 1975-2). The Court did not feel that the taxpayer could have relied on the first bulletin to its detriment. Dow could have filed a protective claim with the proper time period based on unitary apportionment.

EDISON CALIFORNIA STORES

Edison California Stores v. McColgan (1947) - 30 Cal2d 472, 183 P2d 16.

Edison Brothers Stores, Inc. ("Edison Bros.") was organized in 1929 to hold the stock of a Georgia corporation which was involved in the retail shoe business in that state. By 1937 Edison Bros. owned and operated 15 subsidiaries, each of which operated retail stores in various states throughout the country.

Edison California Stores ("Edison Calif.") was incorporated in California in 1932. All of its stock was held by Edison Bros. Edison Calif. was a 100% California corporation. For 1937 and 1938, Edison Calif. filed California franchise tax returns using separate accounting to compute California net income.

Various members of the Edison family were officers and directors of Edison Bros. and all of the subsidiaries. There was a centralization of the management, purchasing, distribution, store operations and advertising departments. The centralized departments set operating policies and kept the main accounting records for all of the subsidiaries. The parent corporation purchased goods for resale through its own outlets and the subsidiaries' outlets. California determined that all of the elements of a unitary business, as established in the Butler Bros. case, were present; unity of ownership, unity of operation and unity of use. Therefore, California recomputed Edison Calif.'s franchise tax liability based on the use of unitary apportionment.

Edison Calif. argued that:

* The Butler Bros. principal did not apply to this case since Butler Bros. involved one corporate entity with warehouse locations in several states and the Edison group was made up of separate corporate entities.

* The unitary formula produced an arbitrary and unreasonable result since, when using separate accounting, the California corporation incurred a loss and, when using unitary apportionment, the corporation had income.

* California had not proven that the separate accounting figures provided by Edison Calif. were not accurate, that the formula method accurately reflected the taxpayer's California income, or that tax evasion was involved.

The California Supreme Court found in favor of the State. In response to each of Edison Calif.'s arguments, the Court held:

* All of the elements of a unitary group were present. Thus the business was unitary regardless of the fact that Butler Bros. involved one corporation with several branches and Edison Calif. involved a parent corporation and numerous subsidiaries. "If the crux of the matter is to ascertain that portion of the business which is done within this state, then the same considerations justify the use of the formula allocation method in [Edison Calif.] as in [Butler Bros.]."

* Once the determination was made that the corporation was a member of a unitary business then unitary apportionment was necessary to properly allocate income to the State. It then became the responsibility of the taxpayer to prove that the formula produced an unreasonable result. While Edison Calif. was able to prove that its separate accounting entries were accurate and reasonable, the company did not prove that the unitary apportionment result was not. It is not necessary to prove that tax evasion is present before use of an apportionment formula is allowed.

ERIEVIEW CARTAGE, INC.

Erieview Cartage Corporation v. Illinois Department of Revenue. June 28, 1993

Erieview Cartrage Company filed a petition with the Illinois Circuit Court regarding a notice of deficiency issued by the Department of Revenue in the amount of $21, 080.56. The central question in the case was whether or not the Erieview Corporation was subject to the Illinois tax.

Erieview argued that it neither earned or received income in the State of Illinois so as to be subject to taxation under the Illinois Tax Act. The Company asserts that since it does not exist in Illinois, income was not received in Illinois. The Company also claims that the liability based on possible income earned in Illinois does not apply because they only provide the administrative guidance in the transport of goods. The actual transporting of goods is provided by independent contractors. They assert that all of their activities take place outside the State. Erieview also seeks to add a constitutional aspect to the case. They held that the imposition of this tax would impede interstate commerce.

The Department offers the four prong test of Complete Auto Transit as the basis for its decision of taxing the Corporation: The tax is applied to an activity with a substantial nexus with the taxing State, does not discriminate against interstate commerce, and is fairly related to the services provided by the State. The Department states that the tax is only attributable to trucks traveling in Illinois and serving Illinois customers. The Department asserts that there were sufficient pick ups and deliveries in Illinois to establish the requisite nexus. The Court found that on average there were two deliveries and pick ups per day within Illinois during the tax period.

The Court also stated that although the truck drivers were independent contractors, they were under Erieview's complete control and the Company had exclusive possession of the vehicles. The Company had complete responsibility for the trucks for the duration of the period.

The Court stated that pick ups and deliveries in Illinois were part of Erieview's normal business operations. The Court affirmed the decision of the Administrative Law Judge and the notice of deficiency was issued.

EXXON

Exxon Corp. v. Wisconsin Department of Revenue (1980) - 447 US 207, 65 L ED 2d 66, 100 SCt 2109.

EXXON was a vertically integrated petroleum company. Its organizational management structure, during the years in question, consisted of three parts: Corporate Management, Coordination and Services Management, and Operations Management. The third level of management, Operations Management was responsible for directing the operations of the functional departments of the company. The three major functional departments were: Exploration and Production, Refining and Marketing. The only activity carried on by EXXON in Wisconsin was marketing. EXXON performed no exploration, production or refining operations in the State.

When EXXON filed its income tax returns in Wisconsin for 1965 through 1968 it utilized the separate accounting method to arrive at its Wisconsin tax liability. This was possible since the company treated each of its functional departments as separate investment centers.

Sales of products and raw materials from Exploration and Production to Refining and from Refining to Marketing were theoretically based on competitive wholesale market prices and were accounted for as such.

Wisconsin audited the returns filed by EXXON for 1965 through 1968 and determined that "the Wisconsin marketing operation was 'an integral part of the unitary business,' and therefore EXXON's taxable income in Wisconsin must be determined by application of the State's apportionment formula to the taxpayer's total income." The US Supreme Court ultimately agreed with Wisconsin.

The Court held that:

* EXXON had not carried its burden of showing that its functional departments were discrete business enterprises. "While EXXON may treat its operational departments as independent profit centers, it is nonetheless true that this case involves a highly integrated business which benefits from an umbrella of centralized management and controlled interaction." For instance,

 The Coordination and Service Management level provided many essential corporate services for the entire company, including the coordination of the refining and other operational functions.

 Many of the items sold by EXXON in Wisconsin were obtained through a centralized purchasing office in Houston. This allowed OVERALL corporate profits to increase through bulk purchases and efficient allocation of supplies among the retailers.

 The gasoline which was sold in Wisconsin was available through an agreement between EXXON and Pure Oil Company in Illinois. This agreement was arranged by the Supply Department (which was part of Coordination and Services Management) and the Refining Department (which was part of Operations Management).

 Sales were facilitated through the use of a uniform credit card system, uniform packaging, common brand names and common promotional displays, all of which were controlled through EXXON's national headquarters.

* EXXON's contention that a prior decision in the case of Moorman Manufacturing Company sanctioned the use of separate functional accounting in order to prove the extraterritorial reach of a state tax statute and that its accounting records proved that the apportionment formula utilized by Wisconsin violated the Due Process Clause was rejected. A company's internal accounting records are not binding on a State for tax purposes. The Court felt that nothing in the Moorman case led to the conclusion that a taxpayer's separate function accounting MUST be accepted, as a matter of constitutional law, for state tax purposes.

* EXXON's contention that the rejection of the use of separate accounting subjected interstate business to an unfair burden of multiple taxation in violation of the Commerce Clause was also rejected. While there may be a RISK of multiple taxation, none was PROVEN to exist. "In short, the Commerce Clause does not require that any income which a taxpayer is able to separate through accounting methods and attribute to exploration and production of crude oil and gas be allocated to the States in which those production centers are allocated. The geographic location of such raw materials does not alter the fact that such income is part of the unitary business of the interstate enterprise and is subject to fair apportionment among all States to which there is a sufficient nexus with the interstate activities of the business."

FARMERS AND TRADERS STATE BANK

Farmers and Traders State Bank v. J. Thomas Johnson (1984) - 76 Ill Dec 565, 121 Ill App 3d 43.

The major issue involved in this case was whether or not the interest earned on Ginnie Mae and Fannie Mae certificates was constitutionally immune or statutorily exempt from state taxation.

The Illinois Appellate Court relied heavily on their prior decision in the case of Montgomery Ward Life Insurance Company v. Department of Local Government Affairs (1980) and US Supreme Court's decision in the case of Smith v. Davis (1944).

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

NOTE: Refer to Para.s 37.5.76 and 37.5.93 for synopses of these cases and the complete case citations.

Ginnie Mae certificates are issued by a financial institution or mortgage servicing company. The certificates are backed by a pool of government insurer or guaranteed mortgages. GNMA guarantees that the issuer will make timely payments of principal and interest. The issuer is primarily responsible for making all payments. If the issuer fails to make these payments, the certificate holder's sole recourse is against GNMA. GNMA has the right in this instance to consider the issuer in default of the original agreement and become the owner of the mortgages involved.

In the case of Smith v. Davis the Supreme Court held that obligations which were constitutionally exempt from state and local taxation have four characteristics:

* They are written documents.

* They bear interest.

* They contain a binding promise by the United States to pay specified sums at specified dates.

* They have specific Congressional authorization, which also pledged the faith and credit of the United States in support of the promise to pay.

In the case of Montgomery Ward, the Illinois Appellate Court found that with GNMAs the private issuer has the primary responsibility to make monthly interest payments and to repay the principal. The payment obligation of the GNMA is indirect and speculative. In addition, the Court determined that Ginnie Maes are not issued by a government agency to borrow money on the credit of the United States to finance an essential governmental function. Rather, the obligations were guaranteed by GNMA to improve their marketability and encourage people to invest in them. Therefore, the interest received on Ginnie Mae certificates is not constitutionally or statutorily exempt from state and local taxation.

The Court also used the GNMA analysis above to determine whether or not interest received on Fannie Mae certificates was exempt. According to title 12 USC Section 1716 - 1719 (1976), FNMA was created by Congress to operate as a reserve market for mortgage investors and to facilitate the distribution of government capital for home mortgage financing. In 1968, ownership of FNMA was transferred to the private sector. Congress did not intend for Fannie Mae certificates to be guaranteed by the United States nor should they be considered debts or obligations of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. Since Fannie Mae certificates do not carry a binding promise by the United States to pay specified amounts at specified dates, and they do not have congressional authorization pledging the full faith and credit of the United States in support of the promise to pay, the Court held that interest earned on Fannie Mae certificates was not exempt from state taxation.

FARRAND COAL

Farrand Coal v. Halpin (1957) - 10 Ill 2d 507.

This was a Retailers' Occupation Tax case in which Farrand Coal claimed that the coal which it sold to the city of Springfield for use in its electric plant was a sale for resale and, therefore, was not subject to ROT. Farrand contended the it was actually selling the energy in coal to the Springfield utility which then transferred the energy into electrical energy for sale to the ultimate consumers. The case centered on the definition of tangible personal property as it pertained to "energy".

In the absence of a statutory definition (as in this case) indicating a different legislative intention, words have their ordinary and popularly understood meanings. Webster's Dictionary defined "tangible" as that which is capable of being touched. The Illinois Supreme Court held that "energy" did not meet the definition of "tangible" as that word is ordinarily or popularly understood.

"From the evidence it appears that although energy and mass are closely interrelated, indestructible, equivalent, interchangeable, directly proportional to and may be equated with each other...energy cannot be separated from mass or matter and stored, weighed, transported, handled, liquefied, solidified, photographed, touched or otherwise perceived by the senses in its own right or capacity separate and apart from mass or matter."

The Court found, therefore, that the sale of coal to the utility was a sale of tangible personal property, however, it was not a sale for resale since the coal was used by the utility to create electrical energy and ELECTRICAL ENERGY WAS NOT TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY.

of filters to customers in the United States and Puerto Rico. In 1975 the subsidiary was "spun off".

In 1980 and 1981, over 50% of the stock of both companies was owned by the same individual. The two companies were in the same line of business. The two firms had many common directors and officers and had many intercompany transactions such as intercompany sales and loans. Products which were purchased from Filtertek de Puerto Rico by Filtertek were shipped to Illinois, where the products were repackaged and shipped to Filtertek's customers all over the world.

The Department argued that Filtertek and Filtertek de Puerto Rico were unitary businesses. In audit, products that were purchased from Filtertek de Puerto Rico and were resold by Filtertek, were included in the numerator of Filtertek's sales factor based on the rules for sales of tangible personal property. A large number of these sales were considered Illinois throwback sales since Filtertek was not taxable in the destination jurisdictions. Filtertek argued that the sales transactions between Filtertek and Filtertek de Puerto Rico were merely "transshipped" through Illinois to destinations outside of Illinois since most of the time the products were only in Illinois for a few days.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that Filtertek and Filtertek de Puerto Rico constituted a unitary business. The fact that an individual provided the common ownership requirement did not prohibit the two companies from constituting a unitary group. The intercompany activities and common management supported the unitary grouping.

The Court further found that the transactions between Filtertek and Filtertek de Puerto Rico were actually sales since Filtertek took title to the products and was responsible for delivery, quality and collection problems. The amount of time that the products stayed in Illinois was immaterial in determining whether or not they were Illinois sales for sales factor purposes.

The final argument raised by Filtertek was that the Statute of Limitations for issuing a Notice of Deficiency had elapsed on 1980 since the Department failed to provide Filtertek with an approved copy of the extension agreement. Again, the Court disagreed and found that there had been an offer of an extension by the Department, an acceptance by Filtertek, and a communication of that acceptance to the Department by Filtertek. No further communication was necessary.

The Illinois Supreme Court refused to review the Appellate Court's decision.

Appeal of Finnigan Corp., CAL SBE 8/25/88 - CCH California State Income Tax Reporter, Para. 401-653, rehearing reaffirmed 1988 decision, 1/24/90.

Finnigan Corporation was engaged in a unitary business which manufactured and sold scientific instruments in numerous states and foreign countries. The unitary business involved various subsidiaries including one known as Disc Instruments. Disc was a California corporation which manufactured and sold equipment both inside and outside of California. Disc itself was not taxable in any state into which it made sales but California but Finnigan was taxable in those other states.

California determined that Finnigan should have computed its unitary sales factor by "throwing back" to California the sales made by Disc to the states in which Disc was not, itself, taxable. Finnigan disagreed stating that California was interpreting the term "person" to mean one individual corporation when computing the sales factor and to mean all of the corporations included in the unitary group for other apportionment formula computations.

The California SBE agreed with Finnigan stating that for purposes of the sales factor, the term "taxpayer" should refer to all of the corporations in the unitary group. Therefore, if any member of the unitary group is taxable in a state, sales made to that state by any member of the group cannot be "thrown back" to California.

The California Franchise Tax Board petitioned the Board of Equalization for a rehearing to clarify whether it was the intent of the SBE to overturn their 1966 decision in the Appeal of Joyce, Inc. The SBE refused to grant the rehearing and, therefore, reaffirmed the result of their earlier decision and overruled Joyce.

FIRST AMERICAN NAT'L BK OF NASHVILLE

First American National Bank of Nashville v. United States of America (1972) - 72-2 USTC Para. 9694, 467 F2d 1098.

First American National Bank of Nashville ("First American") was involved in three types of transactions involving federally tax-exempt obligations which the Internal Revenue Service examined.

* First American entered into agreements with security dealers to purchase federally tax-exempt obligations from issuers of the obligations and, at a later date sell the obligations to security dealers. The dealers agreed to purchase the obligations at the same price as the bank had originally paid. The bank accrued interest on the bonds between the time when the bond was originally purchased from the issuer until the bond was sold to the dealer.

* First American entered into oral agreements with other customers of the bank to purchase federally tax-exempt obligations from security dealers and later sell them to the customers at the same price, with adjustments for accrued interest. The bank accrued interest on the bonds between the time when the bond was purchased from the dealer until the time is was sold to the customer.

* First American purchased federally tax-exempt obligations from dealers and later sold the bonds to various trust for which the bank acted as trustee. The obligations were kept in the bank's regular investment account until they were purchased by the trust. When the trusts purchased the obligations, they paid the bank the cost of the obligations plus accrued interest.

In each of these "repurchase agreement" arrangements, First American reported the interest received as federally tax-exempt interest. The IRS disagreed with First American's "tax-exempt" classification.

The US Court of Appeals agreed with the IRS by stating that none of the interest received by the bank in any of the three types of transactions described above constituted tax-exempt interest. The Court found that the bank was actually lending money to persons to purchase the obligations and securing those loans with the obligations. In this way the bank was able to completely insulate itself from the risk of market fluctuations since it was assured of receiving the price it had originally paid for the bonds. The bank was actually a secured lender instead of a bond owner.

The Court further explained that allowing the bank to report the interest income it received from these repurchase agreements as tax-exempt income would result in a double tax benefit. The bank is reporting the interest received on the obligation as tax-exempt interest and is "loaning" money to person whom is ultimately going to buy the bond without receiving any interest income from the person.

FLOOM

People v. Floom (1977) - 52 Ill App 3d 971.

Center Liquors, Inc. and its president, Leonard Floom, refused to produce the company's books and records in order for them to be examined by a representative of the Illinois Department of Revenue in violation of Section 7 of the Retailers' Occupation Tax Act. In a case which was consolidated with Floom on appeal, Sam Haas – treasurer of Arem, Inc. - had provided the Department's representatives with the books and records but refused to allow them to take notes, make ledger sheets or copy the materials. The taxpayers argued that the ROT Act allowed the Department to make a cursory physical examination to determine that the books and records existed but did not grant the Department the authority to "audit" those books and records.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that the taxpayers were in violation of the ROT Act and the Department's ROT Rules and Regulations. Section 7 of the ROT Act provides that:

"All books and records...shall, at all times during business hours of the day, be subject to inspection by the Department or its duly authorized agents and employees."

The Appellate Court held that the word "inspection" has a broader meaning that just to physically look at the records. It means to examine carefully or critically, or to investigate and test officially. The power to inspect also includes the power to copy the records. The legislature by specifically granting the Department the authority to "inspect" the records also intended to imply the power to audit the records in order to determine the correct amount of tax which was due under the ROT Act.

FOODWAYS NATIONAL, INC.

Foodways National, Inc. v. Department of Revenue. Connecticut Supreme Court - 05/17/94

Foodways, a multi-state frozen food manufacturer established contracts with public warehouses, but there was ambiguity concerning a Connecticut statute. The property factor used to compute the corporation business tax was in question. Foodways Corporation conducted a significant amount of business in the state of Connecticut, and was assessed a Corporation business tax. The Foodways Corporation wanted to include their warehouse storage fees as a rent expense, but the Department of Revenue determined that this expense could not be classified as a rent expense. The case was first heard in the Connecticut Superior Court.

The issues were:

1. The characterization of "gross rents", as it relates to its inclusion in the corporation business tax property factor for purposes of apportionment of income. The Foodways Corporation wanted to include their warehouse fees in the property factor of the apportionment statute, but the Commissioner did not include their warehouse storage fees as a rent expense. The Commissioner cited the statute (s-12- 218), that defines a rent expense as tangible property.

2. The ambiguity surrounding the statute which governs whether only payments for the rental of tangible personal property are inculpable in the property factor, caused the discrepancy to occur between the two parties. The Connecticut Supreme Court ruled that the taxpayer properly included payments for warehouse storage fees in the property factor for apportionment of income. The decision of the lower court was to be reversed and the case was remanded with the direction to sustain the appeal.

 Under the rules of Statutory interpretation, any ambiguity in a statute that seeks to impose a tax must be resolved in favor of the taxpayer.**

* Prior to trading, customers were required to sign agreements with the out-of-state broker;

* Trade confirmations and statements were sent from the broker; and

* The Oregon salesman was an officer with the brokerage firm and represented himself as such to customers.

GTE AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC

GTE Automatic Electric, Inc. v. Allphin (1977) - 68 Ill 2d 326.

When filing its Illinois Income Tax returns for 1971 and 1972, GTE Automatic Electric ("GTE") included in the numerator of the sales factor, sales with a destination of Illinois and sales with an origin of Illinois and a destination in a state in which GTE was not taxable (single throwback sales). During an audit of these returns, the Department requested information regarding the following two types of sales:

* Sales of TPP shipped by GTE's supplier from the supplier's inventory in a state in which GTE was not taxable to purchasers in states in which GTE was not taxable (drop-shipment sales), and

* Sales of TPP shipped by GTE's supplier from the supplier's inventory in Illinois to purchasers in states in which GTE was not taxable (direct sales).

GTE refused to provide the information and asked for a summary judgement from the courts stating that these types of sales should not be included in the Illinois numerator of the sales factor and that the Department be stopped from requesting such information.

The Illinois Supreme Court found that although Section 304(a)(3)(B) of the IITA did not expressly address "drop-shipment sales", these sales could be included in the sales factor under, what is now, Section 304(f). To include these sales in the denominator of the sales factor and not in the numerator of any state would create a distorted sales factor.

The Court further found that the "direct" sales fell within the provisions of Section 304(a)(3)(B)(ii) - throwback sales. The fact that GTE had no control over which inventory the supplier used to fill the order was determined to be immaterial. The origin of the sale was Illinois even though it was shipped from a supplier's inventory instead of GTE's.

HANS REES' SONS

Hans Rees' Sons v. State of North Carolina (1931) - 283 US 123, 51 SCt 389.

Hans Rees' Sons ("Hans Rees'") was engaged in the business of tanning, manufacturing and selling belting and other heavy leathers. Its only manufacturing plant was located in North Carolina however some finishing work was performed at a location in New York. The company's primary sales office and warehouse were located in New York although some sales were made from North Carolina and some shipments were also made from there. The company was involved in both wholesale and retail sales.

North Carolina allocated a portion of the company's income for income tax purposes through the use of a 1-factor apportionment formula based on property. This apportionment method resulted in approximately 80% of the company's income being allocated to North Carolina.

Han Rees' disagreed with North Carolina contending that the apportionment formula used was arbitrary and unreasonable and, therefore, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Hans Rees' provided evidence breaking up the company's profits in each year into three pieces:

* Buying profit which resulted from their skill and efficiency in purchasing hides in a fluctuating market.

* Manufacturing profits which resulted from the difference between the cost of tanning performed on contracts and the cost of performing this activity at their North Carolina plant.

* Selling profit which resulted from the method of cutting the leather into small parts as to meet the needs of a given customer. Using this method, the average amount of income attributable to North Carolina was 14% (the manufacturing profits).

The US Supreme Court agreed with Hans Rees'. The Court held that although North Carolina's 1-factor apportionment formula was not unconstitutional on its face, the facts of this case (based on the evidence presented by the company) proved that the formula was arbitrary and unreasonable to Hans Rees'. The highest amount of the profit attributed to manufacturing in any year involved was 27%, far less than the 80% which resulted from the use of the apportionment formula. This was true even though the company had attributed all of the manufacturing profit to North Carolina even though some of the manufacturing profit was created by the finishing work performed in New York.

The Court rejected North Carolina's argument that Hans Rees' was a unitary business operation which began with the purchasing of raw material, ran through the manufacturing process and ended with the sales of the products to consumers, therefore, it was unfair to break the company's profits in segments (i.e. buying, manufacturing, selling). Although the Court agreed that Hans Rees' was a unitary operation, it did not believe that fact allowed North Carolina to tax an amount of income that was out of all proportion to the business transacted within the state. The Court felt that Hans Rees' had met its burden of proof in showing that North Carolina' apportionment formula created an unfair result.

Fontenot (Louisiana) v. John I. Hay Company (1955) - 228 La 1031, 84 So2d 810.

The John I. Hay Company was a common carrier which transported cargo on the Illinois Waterway, the Mississippi River, the Ohio River and the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway. None of its shipments originated or terminated in Louisiana. The company maintained an office and had employees in the State. Louisiana sought to impose an income tax on the company's Louisiana income based on the use of a revenue miles apportionment formula.

The company contended that Louisiana was attempting to tax interstate commerce in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The Louisiana Supreme Court found, however, that the State was not attempting to tax interstate commerce but, rather, was taxing the company's net income which was attributable to its interstate business done or performed within the borders of the State. Further, the Court held, it was necessary to use a formula to determine the Louisiana income since,

"[The] defendant does not carry a load from New Orleans, Louisiana to Houston, Texas gratis, nor does it only charge to carry a load from the Louisiana State border to Houston; it charges for the whole trip. Therefore, every part of the charge on loads in Louisiana is in payment of the transportation in Louisiana."

HERFF JONES COMPANY

Herff Jones Company v. Oregon (1965) - 430 P2d 998.

Herff Jones Company did business in Oregon through four resident salesmen who were actually employees of Master Engravers, Inc. The State Tax Commission determined that Herff Jones's activities in Oregon were sufficient to create nexus and, therefore, assessed an income tax liability against the company. Herff Jones maintained that the salesmen were independent contractors and, as such, their activities in Oregon did not exceed the limitations of PL 86-272.

An overview of Herff Jones' activities in Oregon follows:

* Herff Jones had a contract with Master Engravers, Inc. making Master Engravers the franchise agent for Herff Jones in several states including Oregon. Master Engravers employed 4 resident salesmen in Oregon who sold products (primarily at schools) for Herff Jones, Master Engravers and several other companies.

* Herff Jones provided each salesman with $3000 to $5000 worth of merchandise for use as samples. The samples remained the property of Herff Jones and the company would deduct any sample loss from the commission paid to the salesman.

* Master Engravers (rather than Herff Jones) provided the salesmen with automobiles but Herff Jones carried liability insurance on the cars. Herff Jones also carried a fidelity bond on the salesmen and deducts the premiums paid from the commission paid to the salesmen.

* The salesmen were required to obtain a $5 deposit on every ring sold. The orders were sent to Indianapolis by the salesmen and the rings were shipped COD or open account directly to the buyer. The salesmen or the school officials are allowed to collect the balance due on the rings and forward it to Herff Jones but credit approvals and account collections are usually the responsibility of Herff Jones.

* Herff Jones has no property in Oregon with the exception of the salesmen's samples.

* Herff Jones pays the commissions to Master Engravers who then pays the salesmen. The franchise agreement between Herff Jones and Master Engravers requires Master Engravers to employ a sales manager who is subject to approval by Herff Jones.

The Supreme Court of Oregon found in favor of the State. The Court first sought to determine whether or not the salesmen constituted representatives of Herff Jones or independent contractors. If the salesmen were found to be independent contractors, they could perform many more activities in Oregon before the protection of PL 86-272 would be forfeited.

The Court stated that, "[t]he single most important factor in determining whether an individual is an independent contractor or a servant is the right to control or interfere with the manner and method of accomplishing the result - not the actual exercise of control. Under this test, it is apparent that [Herff Jones'] salesmen are not independent contractors."

Herff Jones required the salesmen to post bonds, carry automobile insurance for Herff Jones' benefit and not compete with Herff Jones if the contract was terminated. Herff Jones also controlled the salesmen's territories. Herff Jones' contract with Master Engravers also gave Herff Jones the right to approve the hiring of a sales manager and the right to approve the hiring and firing of the salesmen. Finally, Herff Jones supplied order blanks with its name on them for use by the salesmen and also supplied samples and advertising materials to the salesmen. "It is clear from these facts...that [Herff Jones] desired to control the activities of its sales representatives."

Once the Court determined that the salesmen were representatives of Herff Jones rather than independent contractors, it was apparent that the salesmen's activities in Oregon exceed the solicitation of orders which is permitted by PL 86-272. Therefore, the Court found that Herff Jones' activities in Oregon were sufficient to create nexus and the company was liable for Oregon State income tax.

THE HOLDING COMPANY

The Holding Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1991) - 214 Ill App 3d 390.

No original return was on record as being filed by The Holding Company for the tax year ending August, 1980. On July 1, 1982, the taxpayer filed an IL-1120X carrying back a 1981 NOL to 1980. The IL-1120X reported that no tax had originally been paid for 1980, therefore, no refund was now claimed.

In October, 1982 the Department notified the company that there was no record of an original return for 1980 having been filed. Although the company provided copies of federal documents, no proof of an original Illinois return was received. The Department issued a Notice of Deficiency for the tax (and applicable penalty and interest) due in 1980 prior to the 1981 carryback. The Holding Company took the case through Administrative Hearings, to court.

HONOLULU OIL CORPORATION

Honolulu Oil Corp. v. FTB (1963) - 386 P2d 40, 34 Cal Rptr 552.

Honolulu Oil Corp. ("Honolulu") had its principal offices in San Francisco. The operations both within and without the state were controlled to a very large extent from California, as well as the accounting, purchases of equipment and supplies, insurance, and legal fees. Honolulu's operations were divided into five geographical divisions: California, Mid-continental, Canadian, Rocky Mountain, and Southeastern.

The president of Honolulu exercised a great deal of control over the divisions, and each division manager worked closely with company executives. Both parties agreed that Honolulu's business done within the state was dependent upon or contributed to its business done without the state.

Honolulu argued that all of its operations were unitary in nature and, therefore, it should be allowed to determine its California net income through the use of an apportionment formula (comparing its California property, payroll and sales to its everywhere property, payroll and sales) rather than through separate accounting.

The FTB argued that Honolulu was not the typical "integrated" oil company and was not vertically integrated. There was not the significant flow of goods that was usually found in oil companies.

Further, the FTB argued that the three unites test had not been met because central performance of "service" functions was not sufficient to support a conclusion of a unitary operation and that unity at the "operating level" was essential to such a conclusion. As such, the FTB concluded that Honolulu's California operations should be accounted for separately from its operations outside of the state.

The California Supreme Court found in favor of Honolulu by determining that all of Honolulu Oil's,

"...out-of-state production and processing is made possible as the result of its prior exploration and development, utilizing funds which became available through prior production of other wells, personnel and know-how from company-wide resources. Exploration and development are not an end in themselves, but are only the forerunner of production and processing in Honolulu's scheme to create revenue. Extensive intercompany assets and efforts were devoted to each producing well, wherever it may be located, and the mere fact that production and sale therefrom are a local operation does not transform that operation to something distinct and apart. HOWARD JOHNSON COMPANY

Howard Johnson Co. v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1982) - Circuit Court of Cook County.

Howard Johnson maintained an investment portfolio which consisted of Treasury bills, banker acceptances, commercial paper, state and municipal bonds and preferred stock. The portfolio was originally funded from a public offering of common stock, an exercise of employee stock options and excess earnings. A certain portion of the income earned on the portfolio was used for working capital, the remainder was reinvested.

Howard Johnson argued that the income was non-business since:

* The interest income had no connection to the hotel and restaurant business.

* The assets were located in New York and had no connection to Illinois.

* Over 75% of the funds were not used for working capital and the fact that they were available for use was immaterial.

* The income earned from the fund was earned outside of Illinois and had no connection to activities in Illinois.

The Department argued that:

* The investment fund was a working capital reserve.

* The fund enhanced the financial stability and worthiness of the business as a whole.

* Regulation Section 300-2(c)(2)(ii)(c) states that if the assets producing the non-business income exceeds 10% of the taxpayer's current assets the income will be presumed to non-business income. (This regulation section is no longer in existence).

The Circuit Court found that:

* Although the fund was not essential to the taxpayer's trade or business it contributed to and was identifiable with that business.

* The acquisition of the fund was integral to the business. The proceeds of the fund were designated by Howard Johnson to be for equipment, leasehold and other land improvements and working capital required for the expansion of the hotel and restaurant operations.

* The fund was anchored on short-term securities.

* Even though it might not have been necessary to use the funds in the business, the existence of the funds is reflected in the working capital and stockholder reports, therefore, "...the management basked in the financial glow of its stability."

* The same management personnel managed the fund and the hotel and restaurant operations.

* The New York fund was not a discrete business operation from the hotel and restaurant business.

The court concluded that the income from the investment portfolio was business income. Although the funds were not actually used (to any great extent) during the audit period, the court felt that the ability to use the fund and the relative liquidity of the fund (since the money was primarily invested in marketable securities) made the income business in nature.

HYGRADE FURNITURE TRANSPORT

Hygrade Furniture Transport, Inc. v. New York Tax Commission (1986) - TSB-H-86(16)C; Corporation Tax.

Hygrade Furniture Transport, Inc. ("Hygrade") identified its principal business activity as a "Freight Forwarder Acting as Agent". Hygrade contracted with furniture and department stores to deliver furniture to the stores' customers. Hygrade would then contract with independent truckers to do the actual hauling of the freight.

Hygrade owned no trucks nor did it employ any drivers. The independent truckers paid all of their own expenses. Hygrade was paid by the stores and the truckers were paid by Hygrade on a commission basis. Hygrade reported all of the income from the stores as revenues and included the commissions (about 70% of the amount received from the stores) in Costs of Goods Sold.

Hygrade's contracts with the stores stated that Hygrade was "...in the business of providing delivery service for retail furniture stores...". Hygrade further agreed to provide sufficient vehicles and personnel to meet the delivery obligations of the stores and agreed to maintain cargo insurance and to pay for loss or damage to the goods "caused solely by [Hygrade's] employees."

Hygrade argued that it was not providing a transportation service but, rather, was acting as a broker, arranging for services between the stores and the independent truckers. Hygrade further argued that if it were determined to be providing transportation services, only 30% of the revenue received should be considered Hygrade's income since the other 70% was paid to the truckers.

The State Tax Commission found that Hygrade was providing transportation services.

"That inasmuch as petitioner's entire business activities consist of the provision of transportation and petitioner holds itself out to the public as a provider of such services, it is subject to tax...Petitioner does not merely act as a conduit through which furniture stores may enter into contracts with independent truckers. Petitioner enters into the contracts and agrees that it will provide the service and accept responsibility for any damages it may cause. Petitioner then employs the truckers to perform the work. The truckers are employed by petitioner, not the furniture stores and, therefore, it is petitioner who is providing the transportation service."

In the second issue the Commission found that the revenue received by Hygrade from the furniture stores constituted gross earnings to Hygrade. The amounts paid to the truckers were considered costs of doing business.

ILLINOIS V KENTUCKY

State of Illinois v. Commonwealth of Kentucky (1991) – 111 SCt 1877.

Illinois, on the other hand, argued that the boundary was the low-water mark of the Ohio River, as it was when Kentucky became a state in 1792.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Illinois following the Court's previous decisions in the cases of Indiana v. Kentucky (1890) and Ohio v. Kentucky (1980). However, since no accurate maps of the river exist from the 1790's, the Court remanded the case to the Special Master to determine the exact location of the "1792 line".

In March of 1993 the Attorney Generals of Illinois and Kentucky reached an official agreement, establishing the boundary between the two states. Under that agreement,

* The boundary will be set at a minimum of 100 feet from the Illinois shore of the Ohio River. At some points, the Illinois border will extend farther into the river.

* The low-water mark of the Ohio River will be determined by a "digitized" map created by the US Geological Survey however, the boundary will be adjusted in Illinois' favor if the low-water mark is less than 100 feet from the Illinois shore.

* Kentucky will retain possession of several parcels of land that were islands in Kentucky territory at one time but which have since become attached to the Illinois shore due to the changing shape of the river.

IRON FIREMAN MFG. CO.

Iron Fireman Manufacturing Co. v. Oregon (1968) - 445 P2d 126.

Iron Fireman Manufacturing Company ("Iron") was an Oregon corporation engaged in the manufacturing of air frame components, subassemblies and assemblies, primarily for the Boeing Aircraft Company in Seattle, Washington. The company had an extremely close relationship with Boeing. The company's activities in Washington included:

* An Iron manager spent a substantial amount of time at Boeing selecting the items his company wanted to bid and persuading Boeing that Iron was qualified to manufacture the items.

* Many of Iron's officials made regular trips to Boeing to take care of "manufacturing problems, installation problems, repair work, redesign discussions [and] production problems" which occurred after the work had started to manufacture the products.

* Iron had production workers, metallurgists, quality control managers and assembly supervisors who spent several weeks of the year at Boeing.

* When Iron hired a new metallurgist to work with Boeing, several Boeing officials interviewed applicants with Iron. Also, prior to going to work for Iron, the metallurgist was required to spend several weeks at Boeing for indoctrination.

J.C. PENNEY COMPANY

Wisconsin v. J.C. Penney Co. (1940) - 311 US 435.

Wisconsin imposed a tax on dividends called the Privilege Dividend Tax. The tax was "for the privilege of declaring and receiving dividends out of income derived from property located and business transacted in the state." At issue was whether or not this tax violated the Due Process Clause of the Constitution as applied to corporations which were domiciled in a state other the Wisconsin (foreign corporations) and, therefore, declared dividends in those other states. In the enforcement of this tax against foreign companies, the amount of income attributable to Wisconsin was calculated using the same apportionment formula as that employed in assessing the regular corporate income tax on earnings.

J.C. Penney had their principal offices in New York. Corporate meetings, at which dividends were voted upon, were held in New York and the dividend checks were drawn upon New York bank accounts.

The US Supreme Court held that Wisconsin was attempting to income which had no relationship to the company's activities within the state and, therefore, was in violation of the Due Process Clause.

The Court's most frequently cited and quoted test of the due process standard can first be found in this case.

"That test is whether property was taken without due process of law, or whether the taxing power exerted by the state bears fiscal relation to protection, opportunities and benefits given by the state. The simple but controlling question is whether the state has given anything for which it can ask return."

JOYCE, INC.

Appeal of Joyce, Inc., CAL SBE 11/23/66, CCH California State Income Tax Reporter, 1966 Cal Tax LEXIS 18.

Joyce, Inc. was a California corporation, involved in the manufacture and sale of women's shoes and footwear. During the fiscal years ending November 1959, 1960 and 1961 its only activities in California were some minor leasehold improvements and the presence of representatives who only solicited orders within the State.

In 1955 US Shoe acquired in excess of 90% of Joyce, Inc.'s stock. U.S Shoe was an Ohio corporation who also manufactured and sold women's shoes and footwear. US Shoe's only business activity in California, prior to the acquisition of Joyce, Inc. was the solicitation of orders by company representatives. US Shoe also had two other wholly-owned subsidiaries who had absolutely no contact with California.

The California FTB determined that US Shoe, Joyce, Inc. and the other subsidiaries constituted a unitary business group and should, therefore, file a combined return for California Franchise Tax purposes. In computing the unitary group's California net income, the State included in the numerator of the factors, the payroll and sales in California of both US Shoe and Joyce.

US Shoe argued that it was not involved in a unitary relationship; that separately reporting Joyce's income to California was the proper method to determine the net income attributable to the State; and, if combined reporting was required, the California payroll and sales of US Shoe should not be included in the combined factors since US Shoe itself was protected by PL 86-272.

The California State Board of Equalization found that US Shoe and its subsidiaries (including Joyce, Inc.) were involved in a unitary business relationship and that separately reporting Joyce's income did not fairly or accurately attribute the unitary group's California income. However, the SBE further held that the California payroll and sales of US Shoe could not be included in the numerators of the unitary groups factors since US Shoe ITSELF did not have nexus in California.

"Pursuant to PL 86-272, no state has the power to impose a tax on or measured by income derived within the state by any person if the only business activities within the state are the solicitation of orders for tangible personal property, which orders are sent outside the state for approval or rejection and if approved, are filled by shipment or delivery from a point outside the state. Specifically excluded by this federal statute from this immunity are corporations incorporated in the state where the activity occurs. JAPAN LINE, LTD.

Japan Line, Ltd. v. County of Los Angeles (1979) - 441 US 434, 99 SCt 1813.

California attempted to impose a property tax on cargo containers owned by certain Japanese shipping companies. The containers were based, registered and subjected to property tax in Japan and were used exclusively in foreign commerce. There were always some containers in California although no specific container was there for more than a short period of time. The containers were involved in no intrastate or interstate transportation of cargo except as continuations of international voyages.

California felt they had the authority to impose the property tax on the foreign owned containers since they had met the four-pronged test found in Complete Auto. They believed that the containers had a "substantial nexus" with the State because some of the containers were present in California at all times. The tax was "fairly apportioned" since it was levied only on the containers' "average presence" in the State. Thirdly, the tax "[did] not discriminate" since it was imposed on all personal property in California. Finally, the tax was "fairly related to the services provided by" California since it was protected by the police and fire departments, had a trained work force in California using the containers and "had the advantages of a civilized society."

The US Supreme Court held in favor of Japan Line, Ltd. The Court found,

"When a State seeks to tax the instrumentality of foreign commerce, two additional considerations, beyond those articulated in Complete Auto, come into play. The first is the enhanced risk of multiple taxation...Second, [does] the tax prevent the Federal Government from 'speaking with one voice when regulating commercial relations with foreign governments?' If a state tax contravenes either of these precepts, it is unconstitutional under the Commerce Clause...Analysis of California's tax under these principles dictates that the tax, as applied to [Japan Line, Ltd.'s] containers is impermissible."

KEYSTONE CONSOLIDATED INDUSTRIES (1977)

Keystone Consolidated Industries v. Allphin (1977) - 45 Ill App 3d 714.

Keystone Consolidated Industries had entered into a contractual agreement with another company, Chemetron, for the construction and operation of a plant which would produce gaseous oxygen and nitrogen. Chemetron's plant would be located on property owned by Keystone in Peoria, Illinois. The gases were produced by processing air from above and around the Chemetron plant.

The Illinois Department of Revenue assessed a use tax on the monthly purchases of the gases by Keystone. Keystone disagreed with the assessment stating that they were purchasing a service rather than tangible personal property, therefore, no use tax was due.

The Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of the Department of Revenue. By examining the agreement which was executed, several provisions indicated that the transfer of oxygen and nitrogen was intended to be a transfer of ownership of property. "The gases are tangible personal property and as such are subject to the use tax."

Keystone Consolidated Industries protested a notice of a tax deficiency issued by the Department of Revenue. The Notice of Deficiency was issued as the result of a federal RAR that increased the federal taxable income of the Keystone Corporation, for TYE 6/30/80. Keystone attempted to offset the proposed deficiency by revisiting net operating losses previously denied or not pursued. The Department of Revenue denied the petition based on the premise that the Statute of Limitations had expired. The taxpayer also argued that since the Department may issue a Notice of Deficiency at any time if the taxpayer fails to report a federal change, the taxpayer should be entitled to offset the additional liability with tax attributes available to it. The Administrative Law Judge stated that there was no basis in the law to support this particular claim. He ruled in favor of the Department of Revenue in this case.

KRAFT, INC. (ILLINOIS)

Kraft, Inc. v. Roger D. Sweet (1991) - 213 Ill App 3d 889.

Kraft contended that, although Subpart F income was not technically a dividend, it should be considered as a constructive dividend for purposes of the IITA subtraction modification for foreign dividends received. Kraft further believed that treating Subpart F income and dividend income in a different manner was unconstitutional. Finally, Kraft asserted that the 1987 amendment to the IITA which permitted Subpart F income to be included in the foreign dividend subtraction modification for tax years ending on or after December 31, 1988, was actually a clarification of, rather than a change to, existing law.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that Subpart F income is not a dividend. The IRC does not provide that Subpart F income is a dividend, in fact some portions of Subpart F income provide no benefit to the domestic corporation required to report the income. The Court further found that Subpart F income is treated in a different manner than dividend income, a real and substantial difference exists between the two types of income. The differing treatment is not, therefore, unconstitutional. Finally, the Court held that the legislative debate for PA 84-1455 clearly showed that the General Assembly intended to make the amendment prospective only.

In October 1991 the Illinois Supreme Court denied the taxpayer's appeal of the Appellate Court decision.

KRAFT, INC. (IOWA)

Kraft, Inc. v. Iowa Department of Revenue and Finance (1992) - 112 SCt 2365.

During 1981, Kraft General Foods, Inc. was involved in a worldwide unitary business relationship with its affiliates. Iowa required Kraft to file a separate company return.

Iowa uses federal taxable income as a starting point for state taxation. Since the IRC allows a 100% deduction for dividends received from domestic subsidiaries, no domestic dividends are included in the Iowa tax base. No corresponding deduction is allowed federally for dividends received from foreign subsidiaries and Iowa has no foreign source dividend subtraction modification or foreign tax paid credit, therefore, foreign source dividends are included in the Iowa tax base.

Kraft believed that the Iowa tax structure was discriminatory. Iowa argued that no discrimination was present since:

* A domestic corporation's dividends might reflect some foreign operations and a foreign corporation's dividends might reflect some domestic operations. Therefore, the differing tax treatment of foreign and domestic dividends did not translate into discrimination on the basis of location or nature of business activity.

* Kraft could have avoided the tax related to the foreign dividends by setting up a domestic subsidiary with no Iowa presence to receive the dividends and then pass income through the domestic subsidiary to Kraft.

* The tax structure did not favor Iowa companies over out-of-state companies.

* The tax structure did not favor domestic business activities in general over foreign business activities. Domestic subsidiaries are taxed by the federal government and other states while foreign subsidiaries generally are not. The differing tax treatment for foreign and domestic dividends helped to balance the differing federal and state tax treatments for foreign and domestic subsidiaries.

* Finally, even if the tax structure was discriminatory, it was valid since it promoted administrative convenience for both the taxpayer and the State rather than economic protectionism. Starting with federal taxable income allows taxpayers to compute their Iowa tax liability easily and the Iowa authorities can rely on federal regulations to monitor tax compliance.

The US Supreme Court found that the Iowa tax structure was unconstitutional in that it discriminated against foreign commerce.

The Court held that:

* The foreign subsidiaries were clearly operating in foreign commerce and the decision to do business abroad was for legitimate business reasons. The fact that Kraft and its foreign subsidiaries were involved in a unitary relationship showed that Kraft was involved in foreign commerce. Iowa was attempting to tax foreign dividends, therefore, it was attempting to tax foreign commerce.

* The State could not force a taxpayer to conduct its foreign business through a domestic subsidiary in order to a avoid discriminatory taxation of foreign commerce, therefore, the fact that Kraft could have avoided the tax by structuring its business in a different manner was irrelevant.

* While it was true that the statute did not treat Iowa businesses more favorably than out-of-state businesses, this was not a crucial element when determining a violation of the Foreign Commerce Clause.

* "We find no authority...for the principle that discrimination against foreign commerce can be justified if the benefit to domestic subsidiaries might happen to be offset by other taxes imposed not by Iowa, but by other states and by the federal government."

* While not attempting to minimize the value to the states of replicating federal rules and practices, absent a compelling justification, a state cannot discriminate against foreign commerce because of administrative ease. Iowa could easily eliminate the discrimination without causing an administrative burden by creating a subtraction modification for foreign source dividends.

KROGER

Kroger Company v. Kentucky Department of Revenue (1977) - Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals, No. K76-R-22, Order No. K-4742.

The Kroger Company originally filed its Kentucky income tax returns claiming capital gains, rental income, royalty income and interest income as non-business income. Upon audit, the Kentucky Department of Revenue reclassified the income as business in nature and included it in apportionable income. The Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals found in favor of the State.

* The capital gains arose from the sale of land, buildings and equipment which was previously used in the production of business income by Kroger. When the company decided to close a particular store, all of the buildings, land and equipment was sold. In addition, the company would purchase the residence of a store manager if the manager was transferred to another location and was not able to timely sell his or her residence. The company would then sell the residence, usually at a profit. The company claimed depreciation expense for all of the above property and the depreciation expense offset business income.

The Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals found that the capital gains were business income.

* The rental income also occurred when the company closed a store. In these cases, the land, building, etc. had been leased rather than owned by Kroger. When the company closed a store at a leased location, the company would attempt to sublet the land, buildings, etc. for the remainder of the lease period.

The Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals found that the rental income was business income since the store had "turned over" (closed old stores and opened new stores) 60% of its stores within 5 years. As such the Board determined that closing stores and disposing of remaining leases was an incidental part of the company's business activities.

In addition, when Kroger sublet the stores for less than the original lease amount, Kroger claimed the resulting loss as a business loss and used it to offset business income.

Therefore, the Board determined that Kroger had no basis to claim any resulting income as non-business income.

* The royalty income arose from two sources. The first was the Tender Ray Process of meat tenderizing. The process was developed as a joint venture with the Westinghouse Company.

The second source of royalty income was a "diffuser" which re-circulated air to a cooling system in the summer and a heating system in the winter. Both the tenderizing process and the diffuser were developed for use by Kroger and, therefore, any royalty income was business in nature.

* Interest income resulted primarily from loans to subsidiaries and from the sale of closed stores and warehouses. A lesser amount of interest income was earned from short-term investments.

The Board found that the company's loans to its subsidiaries arose out of or were created by a business activity since Kroger and its subsidiaries were involved in a unitary business relationship. The Board further found that the interest from the sale of the closed stores was definitely related to the company's business activities and, finally, that the interest from the short-term investments was income produced from a use of working capital. Therefore, all of the interest income should have been classified as business income.

LA PINE SCIENTIFIC COMPANY

La Pine Scientific Company v. Lenckos (1981) - 95 Ill App 3d 955, 420 NE2d 655.

In 1954, the Illinois Department of Revenue issued final assessments under the Retailers' Occupation Tax Act against Arther S. La Pine and Company (aka La Pine Scientific Company). In 1957, the Department's subsequent action-in-debt was dismissed due to the expiration of the applicable statute of limitations.

In 1977, the company's Illinois income tax return reflected no tax due for the year, however, the company had made estimated payments which it was now requesting to be refunded. In 1978 the Comptroller's office notified the company that its 1977 income tax refund was being withheld to pay off the 1954 assessments pursuant to Section 10.05 of the State Comptroller Act. Section 10.05 states that any time a person is entitled to a refund (warrant) from the state, the Comptroller will notify any taxpayer of any liability to the State which is "due and payable" and will then reduce the refund by the amount of the unpaid liability.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

La Pine Scientific Company contested the withholding of the 1977 refund arguing that,

* The 1954 assessments did not meet the "due and payable" requirement of Section 10.05 of the State Comptroller Act, and

* Section 10.05 of the State Comptroller Act (which was created by PA 77-2807, effective January 8, 1973) could not be applied retroactively to a 1954 assessment.

The Illinois Appellate Court first held that both La Pine and the Department were proceeding on the mistaken premise that Section 10.05 was a new collection remedy available to the State by PA 77-2807.

This was not the case. In reality this collection remedy had been available to the State for almost 100 years. Prior to the adoption of the new Illinois Constitution in 1970, the duties of the Comptroller were performed by the Auditor of Public Accounts. Section 12 of "An Act to revise the law in relation to the auditor of public accounts" contained nearly identical language to Section 10.05 of the State Comptroller Act. In actuality, PA 77-2807 merely continued to provide the State with the same collection remedy which had long been available.

The sole issue for the Appellate Court to decide was, therefore, whether or not the 1954 assessments were "due and payable". The trial court had found that the debts were not "due and payable" since their collection was barred by the expiration of the statute of limitations. The Appellate Court disagreed.

"Statutes of limitations affect the remedy by limiting the period within which legal action may be brought or remedies may be enforced; they bar the right to sue for recovery but do not extinguish the debt which remains as before...[The assessments] had not been "extinguished" as the trial court found but were merely unenforceable in a court of law. As such, the assessments are still claims "then due and payable" for purposes of section 10.05 and were properly set off against plaintiff's tax overpayment"

LAKEHEAD PIPELINE COMPANY

Lakehead Pipeline Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1989) - 192 Ill App 3d 756.

Lakehead Pipeline Company ("Lakehead") filed Illinois income tax returns for 1973 through 1975 using a two-factor formula based on barrel miles and property to compute its Illinois business income. This two-factor formula had been approved by the Director of the Department of Revenue in 1970. For 1976 and 1977 Lakehead filed Illinois returns using a three-factor formula. In audit, the apportionment formula on each of these returns was changed to the previously approved two-factor formula. Lakehead paid the audit liability and then filed claims for 1973 through 1977 using the three-factor formula. The Department determined that the approval of the two-factor formula had been in error and that Lakehead should have filed all of the years using the statutory one-factor barrel miles formula. The claims were correspondingly reduced. Lakehead felt that the statutory one-factor formula was distorted and pursued the case through Administrative Hearings and into court.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that Lakehead did not meet its burden of proof in showing that distortion occurred through its use of the statutory one-factor formula. The primary business conducted in Illinois was the transport of oil through its pipelines. The Court did not believe that the difference between the one and three factor formula percentages was significant.

Lakehead argued that ANY difference in the formulas was enough to require the Department to allow Lakehead to use the three-factor formula. The Court disagreed.

"The chosen formula must be applied unless it unreasonably and arbitrarily attributed to Illinois a percentage of income out of all proportion to the business transacted."

The Illinois Supreme Court refused to review the case.

LAUREL PIPELINE COMPANY

Laurel Pipeline Co. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania May 5, 1995.

Laurel Pipeline Company appealed a decision of a lower court regarding its disposition of an idle pipeline. The Commonwealth Court and the Board of Finance refused to characterize as non-business income the gain on the sale of a pipeline that had been idle for three years. The Pipeline Company is an Ohio Corporation engaged in the business of transporting refined petroleum products from refinery and pipeline connections from the Philadelphia area to Pittsburgh and intermediate points. The Company decided to shift its distribution patterns and because of the shift and insufficient volume, Laurel disconnected operation of the Aliquipa-Cleveland pipeline in 1983. On December 22, 1986 the Company sold this pipeline for a profit of $3,766,047. After the disposition, the Company distributed the gain to its stockholders in the form of dividends. None of the proceeds were used by Laurel to acquire any assets for use in future business operations or to generate income for use in future business operations.

The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue refused to classify the gain as non-business income citing the functional test for classifying income. The Department contended that the sale of the pipeline constituted income from tangible property that was sold and it served as an integral part of the taxpayer's regular trade or business. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania disagreed with that assertion. The Supreme Court held that the pipeline was not disposed of as an integral part of Laurel's regular trade or business. Rather, the Court said, the effect of the sale was that the company liquidated a portion of its assets. This is evidenced by the fact that the Company did not reinvest back into the operations of business, but they distributed the gain entirely to stockholders. The Court reversed the decision of the lower Court and it classified the profit from the disposition of property as non-business income.

LEITGEN, LOYAL AND BARBARA

Loyal and Barbara Leitgen v. Internal Revenue. U.S. Court of Appeals, 8th Circuit. 8/20/82

Loyal and Barbara Leitgen were owners of a small business, the Atlantic East Company. In 1972 they reported a net operating loss of $21,821.26. They were seeking to establish a carryover assessment of their operating loss and apply it to the years, 1973, 1974, and 1975. After reviewing their case the Commissioner decided that they were not entitled to the carryover, due to their lack of evidence concerning their supposed net operating loss. He examined their income for the three years in question and assessed tax deficiencies in the amounts of; $4,781.58, $567.65, and $1,091.00, respectively.

The Issues Continued:

1. The Leitgens claimed that the Commissioner was barred from assessing and challenging the reported loss, due to the expiration of the statute of limitations, but this was not the case. Although the statute of limitations for assessment had expired for the year in which the taxpayers claimed they suffered a loss, the Commissioner was not barred from challenging the amount of the loss. The Leitgens also argued that, section 172 of the Tax Code (which states that a loss be carried back three years before it can be carried forward), did not apply in their case because they were foreign residents during the three years preceding their loss. The District Court rejected both contentions, and found that the Leitgens failed to substantiate the amount of the 1972 loss. The Court also found that the Leitgens failed to establish that the loss could not have been applied three years back to the years 1969, 1970, and 1971. The Leitgens failed to present verifiable proof that they actually incurred a loss for the year in question.

LEWIS V REYNOLDS

Lewis v. Reynolds (1932) - 284 US 281, 52 SCt 145.

In 1921 a federal income tax return was filed for Arthur Cooper (deceased). Tax, as reflected on the return, was paid. Upon review by the IRS an additional deficiency was assessed on the return which was paid on March 21, 1926. In July 1926 a refund of the additional amount of tax paid was requested.

In May 1929, the IRS informed the trustees to Mr. Cooper's will that a further review of the returns determined that the actual liability for the tax year exceeded all of the amounts previously paid. However, since the collection of any additional tax was barred by the statute of limitations, the claim would be denied but no additional deficiency would be assessed. The trustees argued that once the statute of limitations had expired the Commissioner lacked the authority to re-determine and reassess the tax.

The US Supreme Court found,

"...the ultimate question presented for decision, upon a claim for refund, is whether the taxpayer has overpaid his tax. This involves a re-determination of the entire tax liability. While no new assessment can be made, after the bar of the statute has fallen, the taxpayer, nevertheless, is not entitled to a refund unless he has overpaid his tax. The action to recover on a claim for refund is in the nature of an action for money had and received and it is incumbent upon the claimant to show that the United States has money which belongs to him...While the statutes authorizing refunds do not specifically empower the Commissioner to re-audit a return whenever repayment is claimed, authority therefore is necessarily implied. An overpayment must appear before refund is authorized. Although the statute of limitations may have barred the assessment and collection of any additional sum, it does not obliterate the right of the United States to retain payments already received when they do not exceed the amount which might have been properly assessed and demanded."

MADISON GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY

Madison Gas and Electric Company v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (1979) - 72 TC 521.

Madison Gas and Electric Company ("Madison") was a Wisconsin corporation which was an operating public utility, engaged in the production, purchase, transmission and distribution of electricity and the purchase and distribution of natural gas since its incorporation in 1896.

The issue of primary interest in this case involved whether or not the agreements which Madison had entered into with two other electric utility companies for construction and operation of a nuclear power plant created a partnership for federal income tax purposes.

As part of its plan to meet consumer energy demands, Madison joined Wisconsin Public Services Corporation and Wisconsin Power and Light Company in constructing coal and nuclear plants and certain transmission facilities. Further Madison and the other two companies entered into various agreements including one entitled, "Joint Power Supply Agreement".

The Agreement provided that:

* The three utility companies wished to obtain the benefits of advanced technologies and the economies of scale to make the most effective use of the power facilities by sharing in the ownership and operation of the facilities.

* Madison would be admitted into the power pool agreement with the other two companies which allowed each of the utilities to share the others' reserve generating capacity. The utilities could also buy and sell each others' capacity to equalize the reserves of each company.

* The three companies would construct and own a nuclear plant as tenants-in-common.

* The three companies would plan for the construction of a future plant to be owned as tenants-in-common.

Madison argued that the above agreement did not create a partnership. It was Madison's position that the arrangement had no profit motive and, therefore, lacked a necessary requirement for being considered a partnership. Madison felt that only a co-ownership and expense-sharing arrangement was created from its agreement with the other two utility companies. The company cited IRC Regulations Section 1.761(a) and Section 301.7701-3(1) of the Procedural and Admin. Regulations which provided that "a joint undertaking merely to share expense is not a partnership".

The IRS contended that, based on the definition of a partnership which is included in Section 7701(a)(2), the agreement did constitute a partnership and that this position was further supported by the fact that Madison and the other companies elected under Section 761(a) to not be subject to the provisions of subchapter K of the IRC.

The United States Tax Court found in favor of the Internal Revenue Service on this issue. The Court did not agree that an arrangement had to have a profit motive in order to be considered a partnership. While the profit motive or business activity test is important in distinguishing between a partnership and co-ownership of property, it is not the only test for what constitutes a partnership. Further, the Court felt that the arrangement did have a profit motive since, "...a group of business organizations decide[d] to band together to produce with economies of scale a common product to be distributed to members of the venture in kind."

MADISON PARK BANK

Madison Park Bank v. Zagel (1982) - 91 Ill 2d 231.

In 1974 Madison Park Bank incurred a large federal net operating loss. The Bank carried the 1974 loss back to offset federal taxable income in 1971. Also in 1974, the Bank had federally-exempt interest in excess of their federal NOL which they were required to add back on their Illinois return. Since the Department did not allow Illinois Line 1 to be less than zero, the Bank was notified that additional money was due on the 1974 return. The Bank took the case to court.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that the Department had no authority for limiting Illinois Line 1 to zero. If "federal taxable income" was actually a federal loss, that negative number should be allowed as a starting point for Illinois tax computations. However, the Appellate Court further found that double deductions were expressly prohibited by the IITA. Since the taxpayer had already received the benefit of reducing income in the carryback year (1971) they could not also receive the benefit of offsetting Illinois income in the current loss year. The court instructed the Bank to amend its 1974 return and pay the resulting liability, which the Bank did.

The Department appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court. The Court refused to issue a decision on this case since the Department had appealed on the basis that Madison Park was being allowed a double deduction by offsetting income in the loss year and in the carry year. Once Madison paid the "double deduction" liability, the issue was moot. However, the Illinois Supreme Court vacated (voided) the Appellate Court's decision to prevent other taxpayers from being allowed to receive the benefits of a double deduction.

MCDONNELL DOUGLAS

McDonnell Douglas Corporation v. Franchise Tax Board, California Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District, Division Four, No. B064073, July 7, 1994, 26 CA 4th 1789, 26 CA 4th 808, 31 C Rptr 712, Modified August 8, 1994.

McDonnell Douglas Corporation "MDC" is a Maryland corporation, with aircraft manufacturing facilities located at Long Beach, California. Most of the aircraft manufactured at the Long Beach facility are delivered to the customer at the facility itself, or at a facility in Yuma, Arizona. The customers must make all transportation arrangements from these delivery points. The majority of the aircraft purchased have a final destination outside of California.

California code determines the amount of franchise taxes owed to the state according to a complex formula which takes into account, among other criteria, three factors "(1) the value of real and tangible personal property owned or rented and used in California during a specified year (the 'Property factor'); (2) the amount paid for employee compensation in California during a specified year (the 'payroll factor'); and (3) sales made in California during a specified year (the 'sales factor'). This case centers on what is included in the "sales factor" portion of the formula.

This method of franchise tax calculation is derived from the Uniform Division of Income for Tax Purposes Act (UDITPA), which has been adopted by over 20 states. The express general purpose of the UDITPA is to standardize state corporate income tax laws and "to make uniform the law of those states which enact it." (Section 25138; Times Mirror Co. v. Franchise Tax Bd., Supra, at p. 874.)

Section 25135 of the California Regulations states "Sales of tangible personal property are in this state if: (a) The property is delivered or shipped to a purchaser, other than the United States government, within this state regardless of the f.o.b. point or other conditions of the sale."

The State argues that the above section should be read by placing the emphasis on the phrase "delivered...to a purchaser...within the state," referring to the place where the purchaser takes physical possession of the property (place of delivery approach). The states position is strongly supported by its prior administrative rulings and regulations promulgated by the franchise tax board itself.

MDC, on the other hand, utilizes case law from other UDITPA jurisdictions to show that emphasis should be placed on the phrase "purchaser...within the state." The "state" being the state where the purchaser is located (destination approach). Under this approach MDC sales to customers from outside of California, who took delivery in California and if the aircraft's final destination is outside California, would be excluded from the sales factor for California (thereby lessening the California tax).

The court ruled that, even though the administrative regulations and rulings are entitled to great weight, the administrative regulations and rulings which make up the foundation of the states' case were simply "administrative opinions." The court found that by placing the emphasis on the delivery and not on the destination the California rule would be contrary to the rule adopted by several other states (Georgia, Connecticut, Ohio, Colorado, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Florida).

In addition, if the court adopted the states' position, the California rule would run completely against the UDITPA's stated purpose of trying to ensure uniformity among the ratifying states. The court found in favor of MDC and excluded the sales to purchasers outside of California, even if the property was delivered in California, as long as the aircraft's final destination was outside of California.

MELAMED, LEO AND BETTY

Leo and Betty Melamed v. Illinois Department of Revenue. March 30, 1994.

The plaintiffs, Leo and Betty Melamed, were appealing a decision made by an administrative law judge concerning a claim for a refund of Illinois income tax. They argued that they were entitled to offset their arbitrage interest costs against their arbitrage interest income and report only the net amount as income for Illinois income tax purposes. The Melameds claimed that they were entitled to subtract the interest income received in one tax year on the basis that it was a recovery of interest expenses paid in the previous tax year. They based their conclusion on the Illinois Income Tax Act (section 2-203(2)(h)). The primary issue in this case was whether the interest expense in interest arbitrage transactions and reverse repurchase agreements could be offset against arbitrage income notwithstanding a Federal change in which the interest expense was reclassified from Federal Schedule E to Federal Schedule A on the plaintiff's Federal 1040 income tax returns. The court of appeals ruled that the Melameds were not entitled to subtract their interest income as a recovery of interest previously paid. They affirmed the judgement of the circuit court.

MIAMI CORPORATION

Miami Corporation v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1991) - 212 Ill App 3d 702.

Miami Corporation ("Miami") was founded for the purpose of overseeing the Deering family's personal investment portfolio. Income was received through investments in real estate, stocks and other securities.

Real estate, which was owned in Louisiana, included 250,000 acres of land on which oil and gas deposits were discovered after the land was purchased. Miami contended that the original purchase price of the land did not reflect its true value, therefore, inclusion of the land in the property factor at original value created a distortion in the apportionment formula.

The Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of Miami. In one part of the decision the court stated that the capitalized rent expense on an office located in Chicago, Illinois was valued higher than the 250,000 of Louisiana property containing oil and gas reserves. The Court felt that Miami had met the requirements of Section 100.3700(a)(4) and proved that the statutory formula created a distorted result.

THE DEPARTMENT ISSUED AN ACTION ON DECISION SHORTLY AFTER THE APPELLATE COURT'S DECISION IN THE MIAMI CASE WAS ISSUED STATING THAT THE MIAMI CASE WAS VERY FACT SPECIFIC IN NATURE. IN GENERAL, THE ARGUMENT THAT PROPERTY HAS INCREASED IN VALUE SINCE ITS PURCHASE IS NOT GOING TO BE PERSUASIVE IN PROVING DISTORTION AND WILL NOT ALLOW SECTION 304(f) RELIEF TO BE GRANTED.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY BARGE LINE

Ott v. Mississippi Valley Barge Line Company, et al. (1949) - 336 US 169, 69 SCt 432.

Louisiana and the City of New Orleans took this consolidated action against Mississippi Valley Barge Line Company ("Mississippi") and several other barge lines to the US Supreme Court. The case involved the propriety of the ad valorem taxes of the State of Louisiana and the City of New Orleans as they were imposed on barge lines.

Mississippi and the other barge lines were foreign corporations which transported freight in interstate commerce up and down the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. Each barge line had an office in Louisiana but its principal place of business was in another state.

Tugboats brought the barges to New Orleans where the barges were left for unloading and reloading. The tugboats then brought the barges to ports outside of Louisiana. The barges were at the Louisiana port for only the short periods of time necessary to unload, reload and make necessary repairs.

Louisiana and the City of New Orleans imposed ad valorem taxes based on the ratio between the Louisiana miles and the miles everywhere for the line. Two lower courts had found in favor of the barge lines stating that the companies had no tax situs in Louisiana. The US Supreme Court disagreed.

The Court saw no practical difference so far as either the Commerce Clause or the Due Process Clause was concerned whether the company uses barges or railroad cars to move freight in interstate commerce. The problem under the Commerce Clause is to determine the proper portion of the company which can be taxed by any state. The Due Process Clause is concerned only with whether the tax imposed has a reasonable relation to the opportunities, benefits or protection received by the taxing state.

"We can see no reason which should put water transportation [at least as it applies to transportation on inland waterways] on a different constitutional footing than other interstate enterprises."

The propriety of the apportionment formula was not an issue since the type of apportionment formula which was being used by Louisiana and the City of New Orleans had been viewed as acceptable on its face in prior Court decisions and the barge lines did not attempt to prove that the formula was distorted as it applied to their particular set of facts.

The Court also found in favor of the State and City on the second issue of whether or not the barge lines had nexus in Louisiana. Although the property being taxed was not regularly or habitually in Louisiana for the whole taxable year, the formula was being used to arrive at an average portion of property which was present within the state during the taxable year.

MOBIL

Mobil Oil Corp. v. Commissioner of Taxes of Vermont (1980) - 445 US 425, 63 L ED 2d 510, 100 SCt 1223.

Mobil Oil Corporation ("Mobil") had its principal place of business and its commercial domicile in New York. Mobil and its affiliates constituted an integrated petroleum business which did business in over 40 states as well as a number of foreign countries. None of Mobil's affiliates did business in Vermont. In Vermont, Mobil's business activities consisted of wholesale and retail marketing of petroleum and related products.

Mobil's federal net income for 1970, 1971 and 1972 included substantial amounts of dividends received from its foreign affiliates. On its Vermont income tax return, however, the company classified all of the foreign source dividends as non-business income. Vermont reclassified the foreign source dividends as business income.

The US Supreme Court held in favor of Vermont stating that,

* Sufficient nexus existed between Mobil and Vermont to justify an apportioned tax on both appellant's investment income and its operating income.

* Mobil's contention that including the dividends in business income could result in multiple taxation since Mobil's commercial domicile state of New York could tax the dividends as non-business income was without basis. New York did not tax the dividend income as New York non-business income and if it attempted to tax the income as such it would probably fail.

* The fact that the income was foreign source dividends did not mandate special taxation rules. Mobil did not overcome Vermont's position that Mobil and its foreign affiliates were involved in a unitary business relationship, therefore, it is accepted that such a relationship existed. Once a unitary relationship was established between Mobil's activities in Vermont and the foreign affiliates, the dividends could be included in apportionable income.

MOLINE NATIONAL BANK

Moline National Bank v. Illinois Department of Revenue, Plainfield National Bank v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1983) - 111 Ill App 3d 1086.

The taxpayers in this case purchased federally tax-exempt obligations at a premium. When filing their Illinois income tax returns they reduced the addition modification for interest received from federally tax-exempt obligations by the amortized bond premium. The Department of Revenue contended that the amount of interest which should be added back was the total amount of interest received or accrued from the obligations and that no adjustment was allowable for amortization of bond premium.

The Illinois Appellate Court found in favor of the taxpayers. The Court held that the Illinois Income Tax Act was a tax on net income not gross income. Taxation of the amount a bondholder receives from a bond issuer, without amortization of premium, effectively taxes an amount in excess of the actual income from a bond. The amortized premium does not represent income or interest. It is a return of capital and, therefore, it is outside the scope of the IITA.

MONTGOMERY WARD LIFE INSURANCE

Montgomery Ward Life Insurance Co. v. Department of Local Government Affairs (1980) - 89 Ill App 3d 292.

The Illinois Department of Local Government Affairs had issued a intangible property tax assessment to Montgomery Ward Life Insurance Company ("Montgomery Ward") for the 1977 tax year. In determining the amount of taxes due, the Department included the Government National Mortgage Association securities ("Ginnie Maes") held by Montgomery Ward in its tax base.

Montgomery Ward disagreed the assessment, stating that:

* Ginnie Maes are obligations of the United States which are exempt from state taxation.

* Even if Ginnie Maes are not exempt, the Department is precluded from including them in the tax base because of its published assessment standards set forth in the Property Tax Manual.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

In 1968, Congress created the Government National Mortgage Association ("GNMA") as a wholly-owned government corporation in an effort to attract private capital into the secondary mortgage market of private housing. GNMA was authorized to create the Mortgage Backed Securities Program. GNMA issued a new type of security known as a Ginnie Mae as part of this program.

As the US Supreme Court held in the case of Smith v. Davis, credit instruments of the United States (which are constitutionally exempt from state taxation) have the following characteristics:

* They are written documents.
* They bear interest.
* They are a binding promise by the United States government to pay specified sums at specified dates.
* They have specific Congressional authorization, which also pledged the full faith and credit of the United States in support of the promise to pay.

The Illinois Appellate Court determined that the Ginnie Maes satisfied all of the above requirements except for the "binding promise by the United States government to pay specified sums at specified dates." The United States had no obligation on the Ginnie Maes unless the issuer first defaulted.

Also, the Ginnie Maes were issued by private issuers and not the government and were not used to secure credit for the government. On the contrary, the purpose of GNMA was to attract private capital so that government credit would not be necessary. Therefore, the Illinois Appellate Court held that Ginnie Maes were not obligations of the United States government.

Montgomery Ward then argued that even if the Ginnie Maes were not exempt from State taxation, Illinois was precluded from including them in the tax base since its Illinois Property Tax Manual had listed them as exempt obligations during the tax years in question. Only several years later was the manual "retroactively" changed.

The Court again disagreed with Montgomery Ward stating that the inclusion of Ginnie Maes in the manual as exempt obligations was in error. The Department is not allowed to expand statutory tax exemptions through regulations. The legislature clearly intended to include only those exemptions which were required by the United States Constitution and granted by statutes enacted by the General Assembly. Since Ginnie Maes have been found to not be obligations of the United States government, the Department MUST include them in the tax base.

MOORMAN MANUFACTURING

Moorman Manufacturing Company v. G. D. Bair (1978) – 437 US 267, 57 L ED 2d 197, 98 SCt 2340.

Moorman Manufacturing Company ("Moorman") was an Illinois corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of animal feeds. Moorman had over 500 salesmen in Iowa and owned 6 warehouses in the State. All of the products sold in Iowa were manufactured in Illinois but were delivered from the Iowa warehouses.

A company's Iowa net income for income tax purposes was computed in two steps. First, interest, dividends, rents and royalties received in connection with business in Iowa was allocated to Iowa and that received in connection with business outside of Iowa was allocated outside of Iowa. Second, income derived from the manufacture and sale of tangible personal property was apportioned to Iowa based on a one-factor formula. The factor used was Sales in Iowa as compared to Sales Everywhere.

Moorman contended that the Iowa one-factor formula resulted in extraterritorial taxation since some of Moorman's Illinois' operations were responsible for some of the profits generated by Iowa sales. Moorman believed that the one-factor Iowa formula taxed income which was out of proportion to the company's activities in the State. Finally, Moorman stated that since Illinois used a three-factor formula and Iowa a one-factor formula, multiple taxation would occur.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Iowa. The Court held that the assumption that the Illinois activities made some contribution to the profitability of the company's Iowa activities did not render use of an apportionment formula invalid. Also, it is an accepted fact that a formula will occasionally over-reflect or under-reflect income which is attributable to a given state. This is true whether the formula in question is a one-factor formula such as Iowa's or a three-factor formula such as Illinois'. Either formula is acceptable unless it is proven by the facts of the case that the result is distorted. Moorman did not meet this burden of proof.

actually purchasing the microwave equipment. The IRS allowed a deduction for the portion of the contractual sale payments which related to interest and allowed Mansfield to claim a deduction for depreciation of the equipment.

The US District Court found (and the US Court of Appeals affirmed) that the so-called lease agreement which Mansfield entered into for the microwave equipment was actually a conditional sale. The Court found that the determination of whether the agreement was a lease or a conditional sale depended on the substance of the transaction, not the form. Therefore, the fact that the agreement was termed a "lease agreement" was irrelevant.

The agreement was determined to be a conditional sale since Mansfield (the lessee) agreed to:

* Assume the entire risk of loss and damage to the equipment without impairing its obligation under the lease.

* Pay all insurance costs and taxes associated with the equipment.

* Pay "rent" equal to the price of the equipment plus approximately 4% interest.

* Decide at the termination of the initial lease period whether or not to exercise an option to renew the lease at an annual "rent" of approximately one twelfth of the "rental" payment for the initial period. Mansfield further agreed to pay the costs of removal of the equipment if it chose not to exercise this option.

* Submit a financial statement to the lessor and apply for financing.

NATIONAL REALTY

National Realty and Investment Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1986) - 144 Ill App 3d 541.

National Realty purchased property in Florida in 1967 and sold it for a gain in 1973. National Realty classified the gain as non-business income on its Illinois Income Tax return. The Department reclassified the income as business income. The taxpayer pursued the issue through Administrative Hearing and into the courts.

National Realty purchased the Florida property with the intention of developing condominiums on it. Due to zoning restrictions, the taxpayer did not develop the condominiums nor did it make any improvements to the property prior to its sale in 1973.

National Realty argued that it was not in the business of selling unimproved real estate and that it never used the property in its trade or business.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that the burden of proof was on the taxpayer to show that the income was non-business in nature. The taxpayer did not provide sufficient information to prove what its business activities were or to show that the land was never used in the trade or business. Since the business activities appeared, from the information that was submitted, to be varied and diverse, the income was determined to be business in nature.

NEBRASKA DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE

Nebraska Department of Revenue v. John Lowenstein, U.S. Supreme Court December 12, 1994.

In a unanimous decision, the U.S. Supreme Court held that Nebraska's income tax on interest that a taxpayer received from owning shares in mutual funds that entered into repurchase agreements involving federal obligations was a valid tax on interest derived from loans rather than a tax on interest from the obligations themselves. The taxpayer owned shares in two mutual funds that earned interest income from repurchase agreements at a rate that was not related to the interest rate on the underlying federal obligations. The Court avoided characterizing repurchasing agreements as a "sale" and "repurchase" of federal obligations and explained that a repurchase agreement constituted a two-part transaction between a party who held federal obligations and sought cash and a party who had cash and sought to earn interest.

The taxpayer argued that the express characterization in the repurchase agreements of the first part of the transaction as a "sale" and the second part as a "repurchase" should control because the characterization was made for business and regulatory reasons that were not related to tax considerations. The taxpayer cited a 1978 U.S. Supreme Court case as the basis for their argument. However, the Court rejected this argument because the substance and economic realities of the repurchase agreements were such that the mutual funds received interest on cash they loaned rather than coupon or discount interest from the obligations.

The taxpayer also argued that Nebraska's income tax scheme did not allow the seller-borrower to attain the full amount of the federal exemption for the interest that the seller-borrower received from the federal obligations themselves and this frustrated the purpose of the exemption. However, the Court rejected this argument as irrelevant to the case.

The Court held that Nebraska's income tax on interest from repurchase agreements did not violate the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The Court found that the tax did not impair the market in federal obligations or the borrowing ability of the Federal Government. They reversed the decision of the Nebraska Supreme Court and remanded the case back to the lower court.

NEW YORKER MAGAZINE

New Yorker Magazine, Inc. v. Department of Revenue of Illinois (1989) - 187 Ill App 3d 931.

New Yorker Magazine, Inc. was a unitary business whose primary business activity was the publishing of The New Yorker magazine. It derived its revenues from subscriptions, newsstand sales and advertising.

New Yorker was audited for the years 1975-1981. In audit, New Yorker's sales factor was increased due to the inclusion of:

* Advertising income (based on destination of the magazines in which the advertising was included), and

* Subscription and newsstand sales that were shipped from a printer in Illinois to jurisdictions in which New Yorker was not taxable. (This adjustment was made through September 8, 1979 only due to an amendment to the IITA.)

New Yorker argued that the advertising income was intangible and, therefore, should be included in the numerator of the sales factor of the state in which the majority of the income producing activity took place. The Department took the position that the advertising became a part of the tangible personal property being sold, therefore, the destination sale and throwback provisions should apply.

The Illinois Appellate Court found that the advertising space being sold was an integral part of the publication and sale of the magazine. It was not a service being performed separate and apart from the magazine sales. Therefore, the Department was correct in including advertising income in the numerator of the sales factor based on the sales of tangible personal property rules.

New Yorker also argued that the subscription and newsstand sales that were shipped from the printer to jurisdictions in which New Yorker was not taxable should not be thrown back to Illinois because the 1979 amendment was a clarification of rather than a change to existing law, and the printer should not be considered a place of shipment in Illinois.

The Appellate Court found that the legislative history of the amendment referred to the change as a creation of an "exemption" for independent printing plants. Therefore, the amendment was a change to existing law. Secondly, the Court found that New Yorker entered into a contract with the printer to not only print but also to distribute the magazine. New Yorker determined the quantity to be shipped and had continuing responsibilities relating to the shipments.

NORFOLK & WESTERN

Norfolk & Western Railway Company v. State of North Carolina ex rel. Maxwell (1936) - 297 US 682, 50 SCt 625.

Norfolk & Western Railway Company ("N & W') had railway lines in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio. Its lines in North Carolina were branches connecting with main lines in the other states.

For North Carolina income tax purposes, the net income of interstate railway companies attributable to the State was determined as follows:

"...net income within this State shall be ascertained by taking their gross operating revenues within this State, including in their gross operating revenues within this State, the equal mileage proportion within this State of their interstate business, and deducting from their gross operating revenues, the proportionate average of operating expenses or operating ratio for their whole business, as shown by the [ICC] standard classification of accounts."

N & W argued that the North Carolina formula was unfair. The company believed that using an average based on mileage within the State created a grossly inaccurate result since operating expenses were much greater in North Carolina (due in part the mountainous terrain) than they were in other parts of railway lines.

The US Supreme Court disagreed. First, the Court found that use of a formula to compute the amount of net income which was subject to a State's income tax was acceptable. Second, the Court held that the use of mileage ratios in the formulas was also acceptable. "...mileage may have at times a relation to a tax upon net income which it may not bear to a property tax or even to one upon the values of a franchise...the statute is the outcome of a reasonable endeavor to arrive at a proportion of general validity."

However, the Court further found that a formula which is acceptable on its face may be unworkable or unfair when applied to a certain set of facts. N & W had argued that the

GROSS EXPENSES related to the North Carolina lines were greatly in excess of those arrived at using the statutory formula, therefore, North Carolina net income was distorted. The company had several experts testify that the actual expenses in North Carolina were much greater that the formula ratio. However, at that point the company stopped and no figures showing the actual distortion were provided.

On the other hand, North Carolina rebutted N & W's contentions that the result was unfair by providing "elaborate studies and analyses" to show that the GROSS INCOME arrived at by use of the formula was actually much less than the actual gross income which could be directly attributed to North Carolina lines.

The Court again found in favor of the State,

"A finding that the statute, though fair upon its face, is oppressive toward the railway in its practical operation cannot rest upon so fragmentary and partial a showing of facts. We must bear in mind steadily that the burden is on the taxpayer to make oppression manifest by clear and cogent evidence."

NORTH AMERICAN CEMENT

North American Cement v. Grover (NY, 1936), 199 NE 510.

North American Cement operated three cement plants and one lime plant. The corporation operated all four plants separately, sold their products in separate geographic areas, and kept separate accounts. Very little of taxpayer's products were sold from other states into New York. New York used a one-factor formula (property) to apportion the taxpayer's income; whereas the corporation argued that allocation by means of separate accounting resulted in much less income in New York for one year and a loss in each of the other years.

The court held that the operations of the four separate manufacturing plants were so interrelated that it was proper to treat the entire operation as unitary. It also found that separate accounting in accordance with recognized accounting practice is insufficient evidence to disprove the propriety and presumption of fairness of formula allocation.

NORTHWESTERN STATES PORTLAND CEMENT CO.

Northwestern States Portland Cement Co. v. Minnesota (1959) - 358 US 450.

Northwestern States Portland Cement Company ("Northwestern") was an Iowa corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of cement. The company maintained a leased sales office in Minnesota where a "District Manager", one other salesman and a secretary worked. Two additional salesmen used the office as a clearinghouse. The company also furnished two cars for use by the Minnesota salesmen.

The Minnesota salesmen solicited sales from customers whose names appeared on an eligible list of dealers. The list was provided by the company. The salesmen were authorized to quote the customers "delivered prices", however, all of the product prices were set by the company at its Iowa headquarters. All Minnesota orders were accepted, filled and shipped from its Iowa plant.

In addition to soliciting orders from eligible dealers, the Minnesota salesmen also contacted potential customers. Orders were solicited from the potential customers and transmitted to a local dealer who appeared on the company's list. The new customer's order would be accepted and filled by the local dealer who, in turn, obtained the products to fill the order from the Minnesota salesmen. Finally, the salesmen would receive and transmit to the company customer claims for loss or damage in any of the shipments, informing the company of the nature of the problem and requesting instructions concerning the claims.

The US Supreme Court held, for the first time, that a state could tax exclusively interstate commerce as long as the tax did not create any effect forbidden by the Commerce Clause. The Court felt that a tax imposed directly on that portion of a non-domiciliary corporation's net income earned from and fairly apportioned to business activities within the taxing state, did not violate the Commerce Clause, even if the corporation's activities were in furtherance of interstate commerce.

The critical distinction made by the Northwestern Court was that a tax that is imposed on the privilege of engaging in interstate commerce would be invalidated by virtue of the Spector Rule (see Spector Motor Service, Inc.); however, a tax that is imposed on the net income from such commerce would be upheld by virtue of Northwestern.

Public Law 86-272 was passed in 1959 as a reaction to this decision.

The People ex rel. Richard S. Wangelin, County Collector v. The City of St. Louis (1937) - 10 NE2d 360, 367 Ill 57.

The case involved a dispute over where the boundary between Illinois and Missouri was located in the Mississippi River. The issue arose due to a property tax assessment which was levied upon the St. Louis Municipal Bridge which spanned the Mississippi River between East St. Louis and St. Louis.

The Illinois Supreme Court determined (based on prior boundary dispute decisions) that the boundary between Illinois and Missouri was located in the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi River. "International law today defines the river boundaries between States by the middle of the main channel, when there is one, and not by the center, halfway between the banks."

PHOENIX COAL COMPANY, INC.

Phoenix Coal Company, Inc. v. Internal Revenue, U.S court of Appeals No. 182. March 31, 1956

Phoenix Coal Company filed a petition for the review of a decision of the Tax Court. They contended that the Commissioner was barred from assessing the net income reported by the Phoenix Coal Company. They cited the statute that prohibits re-assessment within three years after filing the claim, but that statute applies only to those years for which an actual assessment of deficiency is made. The Commissioner may review the computation of tax of an earlier year. The Phoenix Coal Company reported a net operating loss of income for the 1947 fiscal year.

The Issues:

1. The Phoenix Coal Company petitioned the U.S. Court of Appeals for a review of the actions of the Tax Court. The Commissioner disallowed certain deductions on the 1945 tax return of the Company, and he re-assessed their net income for that year. After the recomputation it was noted that the Coal Company was deficient for the 1946 tax year. The Coal Company claimed that the assessment for 1946 was barred by the statutory provision in section 275(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, but the Court held that the Commissioner was following the proper procedure and did not violate the statute.

2. The Phoenix Coal Company also raised a question in regards to a recovery of $5,000 received in 1948 in settlement of its suit against its former officers and directors for conspiracy to destroy its business. They claimed that this settlement was allocable to an injury of goodwill, but the tax court held that this sum was allocable only to loss profits,

PHILLIPS PETROLEUM COMPANY

Phillips Petroleum Company v. Iowa Department of Revenue. December 22, 1993. Phillips Petroleum was threatened with a hostile takeover and they responded by purchasing a substantial amount of their own outstanding stock. In order to facilitate the purchase, the Corporation sold gas and oil producing assets. The central question in this case is whether the sale of those assets can be taxed by Iowa as business income, even though the transaction did not take place in Iowa.

The Issues:

1. Phillips Petroleum Corporation is a Delaware Corporation domiciled in Oklahoma. In an attempt to stave off the Companies that were in the process of taking over their Corporation, Phillips offered to exchange debt securities with an aggregate face value of $4.5 billion for roughly 40% of its outstanding stock. In order to pay off the newly acquired debt, Phillips undertook a "special asset disposition program". Under this plan Phillips sold approximately $2 billion in assets. The Iowa Department of Revenue asserted that this transaction produced business income, and therefore it was taxable income.

2. The dispute was based on the interpretation of statutory construction. It involves the Iowa code section 422.32(2) (1993). This statute set the parameters of what would qualify as business income. Another issue that became a point for discussion was the unitary business principle. Under this principle the state may tax a portion of income derived elsewhere only if the activities were related to the corporate business activities within the state. The state of Iowa adopted a two tier test to determine what is to be classified as business income under the unitary business principle. They divided the principle into a transactional test and a functional test. Both of these test identified business income, as income arising from the transactions and activities in the regular course of the taxpayer's trade or business. It also classifies income as business income if it arises from tangible and intangible property if the acquisition, management, and disposition of the property constitute integral parts of the taxpayer's regular trade or business operations. The Iowa Department of Revenue claimed that the income that the Phillips Corporation received was business income based on the disposition of property and the transactional test, but the Supreme Court of Iowa did not classify the income received as business income and they ruled in favor of Phillips. The case was reversed and Phillips was entitled to an income tax refund.

POWELL

United States et al. v. Powell et al. (1964) - 64-2 USTC Para. 9858.

The IRS summoned Powell to given testimony and produce records relating to the 1958 and 1959 returns of the William Penn Laundry, of which Powell was President. Powell appeared in court but refused to produce the records. The taxpayer's returns had been previously examined and the three-year statute of limitations barred assessment of additional deficiencies for those years except in cases of fraud, the asserted basis for this summons. Powell contended that before he could be forced to produce the records, the IRS had to indicate some grounds for its belief that fraud had been committed.

The court held that the IRS need not meet any standard of probable cause to obtain enforcement of its summons, either before or after the three-year statute had expired. It had to show that the investigation would be conducted pursuant to a legitimate purpose, and that the administrative steps required by the code had been followed.

The court also made reference to the case of US v. Morton Salt Co., (338 US 632, 642-643) where the court said of the Federal Trade Commission, "It has a power of inquisition, if one chooses to call it that, which is not derived from the judicial function. It is more analogous to the Grand Jury, which does not depend on a case or controversy for power to get evidence but can investigate merely on suspicion that the law is being violated, or even just because it wants assurance that it is not." The court felt that while the power of the IRS comes from a different body of statutes, the analogy to the other agency situations is not without force.

interest assessment. The Court also ordered a refund of the Company's privilege tax in the amount of the interest paid. The Department appealed the decision and contended that the Circuit Court erred in allowing the interest assessed to be construed as part of Prudential's income tax, which would determine the amount of their privilege tax.

The insurance company, which is domiciled in New Jersey, was authorized to do business in Illinois. As an insurer, the company is required to pay a privilege tax to the Illinois Department of Insurance in addition to corporate income tax payable to the Illinois Department of Revenue. Under the Insurance Code, the net amount of annual privilege tax paid by the insurer is reduced by the amount paid to Illinois as a tax on or measured by net income.(Ill. Rev. State. 1987, ch. 73, par. 1021(2)(b)). After a federal audit, the Prudential Insurance company was assessed additional tax liability for the years 1972 through 1980. In addition to the liability, there was an accrual of interest on the delinquent amount of taxes. The Insurance Company paid the interest expense under protest, claiming that they were entitled to a credit against their privilege tax in the amount of the interest assessment. The Circuit construed the interest payment as payment of income tax, thereby reducing the privilege tax that was owed by the Insurance Company.

The Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the Circuit Court. The Court (Circuit), held that by examining the plain meaning of the language used in the statutes, they were able to determine the obligation of the Insurance Company. The language used in this particular statute stated that the income tax is to be imposed upon money earned or otherwise received by the taxpayer. The Court held that the language of the statute was not ambiguous, and there would be no justifiable reason to search the motives of the legislature to give the statute a different meaning than what the words of the statute indicate. The Court held that the interest computed was not to be construed as part of the income tax payable, therefore it could not be used as a deduction of the privilege tax that was outstanding. Interest is not assessed on or computed by the amount of net income received by the taxpayer. The Court stated that if the Legislature intended that interest on delinquent taxes be deducted from privilege taxes, the legislature would have expressly provided for the deduction. The Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the Circuit Court.

In computing its Arkansas income for income tax purposes, Ward excluded interest income it received on loans made by it to its subsidiary, affiliate, parent and other related corporations. The company classified this income as non-business income which would be allocated to its state of commercial domicile, Illinois. Upon audit, Arkansas reclassified the interest income as business income.

Ward argued that the interest income was non-business in nature since it was not an integral part of its regular trade or business operations (merchandising). There was no activity in Arkansas relating to the loans and advances from which the interest was derived since the financial department of the office of Ward's treasurer in Chicago was the only department of the company involved. There was no evidence that any of the affiliates to which the loans were made did any business in Arkansas. Most of the affiliates appeared to be part of a unitary business operation with Ward, however, some did not.

The Arkansas Supreme Court held that the interest income was business income. The loans and advances were made to meet the cash needs of the affiliates for corporate purposes. Since many of the affiliates operated at a loss, the loans and advances kept the companies "afloat". Ward was obviously interested in the well-being of its affiliates. If the companies which supplied Ward with its merchandise went bankrupt, Ward would have to find new suppliers. If the real estate companies which held title to the buildings used by Ward went out of business, Ward's business would be hurt.

The Court also found that the funds for the loans and advances came from Ward's working capital account. No effort was made to segregate the funds which were received from sales in a particular state and funds received on investments or from the loans and advances. Rather, all of the income was placed in a general working capital fund to be used for Ward's general corporate purchases or for more loans or investments. The loans and advances were made regularly and consistently throughout the audit period.

"The fact that Ward's regular trade or business operations do not include money lending is of no significance. Obviously, the lending of money to Ward's related corporations consists of transactions and constitutes an activity in the regular course of Ward's business. We cannot view these loans and advances as a mere temporary investment of idle cash, as Ward would have us do. Even if they were, any short term investment of these funds pending their eventual use in the course of Ward's regular business operations might well be apportionable."

"It seems to us that Ward's purpose and intent in making the loans and advances were to assure financial stability and continued operation of its corporate relatives, most of whom are suppliers of Ward or furnishers of services. Some of these borrowers who are operating at a loss probably would be hard pressed to obtain loans from other sources. Keeping these corporations "afloat" is beneficial to Ward's regular business.."

Finally, the Court stated that whether or not Ward and its affiliates were involved in a unitary relationship did not control in the determination of whether or not the income received was business or non-business in nature.

"The combined reporting provision and the business income definition serve different purposes, ask different questions and apply different standards. The answer to one does not necessarily imply the same answer to the other."

ROCKFORD LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Rockford Life Insurance Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue et al. (1986) - 112 Ill 2d 174.

Rockford Life Insurance Company ("Rockford") challenged a 1978 Illinois property tax assessment which included the value of Ginnie Maes held by the company in the tax base. Rockford argued that the Ginnie Maes were obligations of the federal government and were, therefore, immune from state taxation. Also the company contended that the Department could not now include the obligations since it had not included Ginnie Maes in the calculation of capital stock in earlier years and Rockford had relied on that practice in planning its investments.

The Government National Mortgage Association ("GNMA") was established to attract private capital into housing. The mortgage-backed securities program was established. In this program, GNMA was authorized to issue securities backed by a pool of mortgages guaranteed by one of several government agencies. GNMA could also authorize private parties to issue such securities. Finally, GNMA was authorized to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest of the securities with the full faith and credit of the United States.

The Illinois Supreme Court held that the Ginnie Maes were not immune from State taxation. The obligations did not meet the four-part test for federal obligations:

* Written documents.
* Bearing of interest.
* Binding promise by the United States to pay specified sums at specified dates.
* Specific Congressional authorization, which also pledged the full faith and credit of the United States in support of the promise to pay.

The Court did not believe that Ginnie Maes met the third part of the test, a binding promise by THE UNITED STATES to pay specified sums at specified dates. The federal government merely guaranteed the holder would receive principal and interest payments.

The actual obligation of the federal government only existed when, and if, the issuer defaulted on the obligation. Also, the securities did not appear to be related to the government's credit needs. Finally, Congress did not authorize the exemption of the obligations. It provided only for the exemption of the Government National Mortgage Association itself.

The Court also dismissed Rockford's second contention, that the Department was stopped from including Ginnie Maes in the tax base due to the prior practice of not including them. The Court held that the company's reliance on the Department's prior practice was not reasonable and that no fraud or injustice had occurred.

ROPER CORPORATION

Roper Corporation v. Illinois Department of Revenue. Income Tax Hearing Division. 12/20/94

ISSUES:

1. Whether a dividend paid to Roper Corporation as part of its reorganization and sale by GE is business or non-business income?

In April, 1988 two GE subsidiaries purchased the outstanding stock of Roper Corporation. At the time of the purchase Roper included two divisions in its corporate structure; home appliances and outdoor yard products. GE wished to retain the home appliance unit, but they decided to sell the outdoor yard products unit. In order to facilitate the sale of the outdoor yard products unit, Roper transferred its appliance business to RGE, a separate Corporation. In a second transaction RGE sold its stock to another GE company, General Electric Holdings. In exchange for the stock Roper received $282 million in cash. According to the attribution rule, Roper was treated as owing more than 50% of the stock of both RGE and GE Holdings. The combination of the attribution and the redemption rules of IRC 302 resulted in Roper treating the cash payment as a dividend.

2. The Department of Revenue treated the cumulative effect of all of the business transactions as a sale of the business and as treated the dividend as business income. The Department also made the claim that the dividend was a dividend from a unitary concern. The Roper Corporation asserted that their business was not of unitary concern because the lawnmower business was separate and distinct from the home appliance business. They were willing to settle out of court in a settlement of 55% of the tax deficiency. The Department agreed to the settlement citing the hazards of litigation and the issue is a non-recurring issue, they believed that this settlement was in the best interest of the Department.

SEARLE PHARMACEUTICALS

Searle Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. The Department of Revenue and Caterpillar Tractor Co. et al. v. J. Thomas Johnson (1987) - 117 Ill 2d 454.

This case involved various challenges to a 1977 amendment to Section 203(e)(2)(E) of the IITA which provided that any corporation which was a member of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated federal income tax return, incurring a net operating loss on a separate Illinois income tax return basis, be deemed to have made the election provided in Section 172 of the IRC, that is, to relinquish the entire carryback period and only carry forward the loss. Taxpayers filing separate federal returns were allowed to carry their losses either back or forward in the same manner as they did federally.

The Illinois Supreme Court found that the 1977 amendment violated the uniformity clause of the Illinois Constitution. The Court determined that there is no real and substantial difference between a corporation which is a member of an affiliated corporate group that elects to file a federal consolidated return and a corporation which is a member of an affiliated corporate group which does not elect to file a consolidated federal return. Therefore, to distinguish between these two types of taxpayers would be unconstitutional.

SHAFFER

Shaffer v. Carter (Oklahoma, 1920) - 252 US 37.

Charles B. Shaffer was a resident of Illinois during the years in question. Mr. Shaffer had purchased, owned, developed and operated a number of oil and gas mining leases in Oklahoma. Oklahoma assessed an income tax liability against Mr. Shaffer based on the income generated from his business activities in that State. Mr. Shaffer refused to pay the assessment and, as a result, a lien was placed on his Oklahoma property.

Mr. Shaffer contested the assessment on two grounds. First, he believed that attempting to subject nonresidents of a state to a state income tax violated an individual's constitutional rights. Second, he argued that (if the law was valid) placing a lien on ALL of his Oklahoma property was also unconstitutional and the State could only place a lien on the specific property whose income generated the assessment.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Oklahoma on the first issue by stating that a state has complete dominion over all persons, property and business within the state. As such, the state also has the duty to preserve and protect all such persons, property and business within the state. In order to defray the costs of these duties, the states have the right to resort to any reasonable form of taxation.

"Property has a value chiefly for what it is capable of producing...That the state, from whose laws property and business and industry derive the protection and security without which production and gainful occupation would be impossible, is debarred from exacting a share of those gains in the form of income taxes for the support of the government, is a proposition so wholly inconsistent with fundamental principles as to be refuted by its mere statement. That it may tax the land but not the crop, the tree but not the fruit, the mine or well but not the product, the business but not the profit derived from it is wholly inadmissible."

The US Supreme Court also found in favor of Oklahoma on the second issue. The Court stated that the state could not place a lien for an income tax upon a nonresident's unproductive property nor upon any particular productive property beyond the amount of the tax upon the income that has proceeded from it. However, in this case, all of Mr. Shaffer's property in Oklahoma was part of his oil-producing business.

The income being taxed was based on all of the oil-producing business performed within the state and, therefore, the state was justified in placing a lien on ALL of Mr. Shaffer's property within the state.

SHELL OIL COMPANY (FLORIDA)

Shell Oil Company vs. Department of Revenue, State of Florida (1986) - 496 So 2d 789.

NOTE: See also Shell Oil Company v. Iowa Department of Revenue for a US Supreme Court decision on the Outer Continental Shelf issue.

The Supreme Court of Florida consolidated two applications for review of the decision of the District Court of Appeal. Shell Oil Company asked for review of the Appellate Court decision which found that the State of Florida was NOT prohibited by USC Section 1333(a)(2)(A) from imposing a tax upon income derived from the sale in the United States of oil extracted from the Outer Continental Shelf. The State of Florida requested review of the Appellate Court's decision that Shell Oil had the right to include Intangible Drilling Costs in the property factor even though they had elected to expense the costs federally.

Shell Oil Company ("Shell") conducted business throughout the United States. Among its many activities, Shell operated a number of drilling platforms for the extraction of crude oil and natural gas from the outer continental shelf ("OCS"). Shell made all transfers of OCS natural gas by sale to nonaffiliated independent pipeline companies that rented space on

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. Shell's platforms. Shell made some transfers of OCS crude oil by sale to independent third parties, but Shell transported most of the crude oil through its own pipeline to shore. Shell treated all transfers (whether to third parties or to its own pipeline) as taxable sales occurring at the OCS platforms for federal income tax purposes. For Florida income tax purposes, Shell eliminated the profits from the transfer from taxable income.

Both parties agreed that 43 U.S.C. Section 1333(a) (1970) states that taxation laws shall not apply to the outer continental shelf. Both parties also agreed that, based on this section of the Outer Continental Shelf Land Act, the sales which actually occurred on the OCS oil platforms should be excluded from the computation of Florida taxable income. However, Shell contended that Florida had no right to include ANY of the income from sales of oil which was DERIVED from OCS platforms. Florida on the other hand argued that because Shell actually sold the oil within the boundaries of the 50 states and not ON THE OCS PLATFORMS, the taxable event occurred within the reach of Florida's tax laws and the income should be included in the computation of Florida taxable income.

The Florida Supreme Court found in favor of the state, upholding the Appellate Court's decision. "Although Section 1333(a)(3) prevents states from claiming an interest in or jurisdiction over the revenues derived from OCS natural resources, the language of this subsection when read in conjunction with the rest of Section 1333(a) simply constitutes a limitation of state authority over the OCS area and does not seem intended to address income derived outside the OCS."

The Court believed that the sales occurred when the taxpayer received actual economic gain from the disposition of property. No realization of income occurred at the wellhead, despite Shell's assignment of an artificial wellhead price to the oil, because Shell received no actual economic gain from any sale at that point. Rather, realization occurred at the time Shell sold the oil in the states because only at that time did Shell derive any actual economic gain. The income was, therefore, derived outside the OCS and within the reach of Florida's tax laws.

The Florida Supreme Court reversed the Appellate Court's decision regarding the Intangible Drilling Cost issue stating:

"We find...that the district court erred in ruling that expensed IDSs should be added back into Shell's asset base when calculating the property factor of the apportionment formula. IDCs are not inherently capital in nature. Under federal law, Shell had the option of either capitalizing or expensing its IDCs...Shell elected to expense them for federal income tax purposes, thereby deducting the IDCs from its taxable income base...Florida...requires that a taxpayer's method of accounting for purposes of the Florida Income Tax Code be the same as the taxpayer's method of accounting used for federal income tax purposes.

IDCs occupy a special tax category, offering an incentive to oil and gas exploration and production...Care must be taken, however, not to extend the obvious benefits of this special treatment beyond its intended boundaries."

SHELL OIL COMPANY (IOWA)

Shell Oil Company v. Iowa Department of Revenue (1988) - 488 US 278.

The facts of this case mirror the Shell Oil Company (Florida) case. Shell sold all of its natural gas extracted from Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) lands to third parties at the wellhead platform. Most of the crude oil extracted from OCS lands however was transported through Shell's own pipeline inland, where it was either sold to third parties or refined.

Again Shell relied upon 43 U.S.C. Section 1331 which provides in part that "State taxation laws shall not apply to the Outer Continental Shelf." Shell argued that this language expressly prohibited state taxation of any income from OCS activities. In this case however, Iowa sought to include income from the ALL of the OCS-related sales (those that occurred at the OCS platforms and within the 50 states) and it also included the revenues in the Iowa single factor apportionment formula.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Iowa. The Court noted that historically the controversy between the federal government and adjacent states had centered on the ability of the states to levy production and other direct taxes on OCS production. This type of taxation was, therefore, the focus of the Outer Continental Shelf Land Act, not to prevent taxation of OCS-related income.

The Court also rejected Shell's contention that even if the Outer Continental Shelf Land Act allows states to include OCS-related income from sales which occurred outside of the OCS, the statute prohibits the inclusion of income derived from "on-Shelf" sales. The Court said,

"Shell's argument hinges on the mistaken premise that including OCS-derived income in the reapportionment tax base is tantamount to the direct taxation of OCS production...the inclusion of income in the reapportioned tax base of a state apportionment formula does not amount to extraterritorial taxation...This Court has repeatedly emphasized that the function of an apportionment formula is to determine the portion of a unitary business' income that can be fairly attributed to instate activities."

In summary, the US Supreme Court held that all OCS-related income could be included in the reapportioned tax base in computing a person's state tax liability and as appropriate in the apportionment formula.

SHELL OIL COMPANY (ILLINOIS)

Shell Oil Company, et al v. Illinois Department of Revenue (1993) - Circuit Court of Cook County, Docket Number 91 L 50905.

On its Illinois income tax returns for 1981 through 1984, Shell computed its property factor by including intangible drilling costs (IDCs) which it had elected to expense on its federal income tax returns. In audit, Illinois disallowed the inclusion of the federally expensed IDCs in the property factor.

Shell argued that the IDCs were part of the "original cost of constructing an oil or gas well" and were, therefore, included in the property factor whether they were expensed or capitalized federally. Illinois contended that only IDCs which were capitalized federally became a part of the "original cost" of the wells, therefore, only capitalized IDCs could be included in the property factor.

The Circuit Court of Cook County found in favor of Shell, holding that IDCs should be included in the property factor whether they were expensed or capitalized for federal income tax purposes. Since there were no Illinois rulings nor had Illinois adopted regulations regarding the treatment of IDCs, the court relied heavily on how other states with statutes similar to Illinois have treated IDCs and how Illinois courts have ruled on similar issues.

The court put tremendous weight on a recent amendment to the MTC Regulations which states that "...development costs shall be included in the property factor whether or not they have been expensed for either federal or state tax purposes." Although Illinois ceased being a member of the MTC in 1975, the court believed that MTC's rule on this issue affected Illinois since the "principles [of the MTC] are still embodied in the apportionment formula." In fact, Section 100.3550(c) of the Ill. Admin. Code states,

If the returns or reports under Article IV of the Multistate Tax Compact or the Uniform Division of Income for Tax Purposes Act are not uniform in the valuation of property and in the exclusion or inclusion of property in the property factor, the person shall disclose in its return to the state the nature and extent of the variance.

The circuit court felt that since,

"...the Illinois taxpayer must be consistent in excluding or including property in the property factor with the MTC states and...MTC Regulation IV.11(a) REQUIRES that IDCs be included in the property factor regardless of whether the IDCs were expensed for federal income tax purposes...Illinois should follow the decisions of the other states that have addressed the issue...and the MTC."

The court also felt that the 1986 Oregon Supreme Court decision in the case of Atlantic Richfield Company v. Department of Revenue was significant. The situation in Atlantic Richfield was similar to this case in that Oregon had not adopted any rules or statutes on the IDC issue. The Oregon Supreme Court held in that case that, in order to achieve uniformity among the taxing states, IDCs should be included in "original cost" of the property factor regardless of their federal treatment.

Finally, the court did not agree with Illinois' reliance on the 1986 decision in the case of Shell Oil Company v. Department of Revenue, State of Florida in which the Florida Supreme Court ruled that a taxpayer's method of accounting for federal purposes should be followed for state taxation purposes. In that case, the Court held that IDCs are not inherently capital in nature and if a taxpayer elected to expense them federally, they should not be included in the property factor as part of the "original cost" of the wells. The Circuit Court of Cook County determined that the Florida court's "application of the method of accounting requirement [was] mistaken."

SMITH V DAVIS

Smith et al. v. Davis et al. (1944) - 323 US 111, 65 SCt 157.

In this case the four-part test was developed for determining whether or not an obligation was a "credit instrumentality of the United States" and, therefore, immune from State taxation. The Smith v. Davis decision is referred to in many other Government obligation cases.

E. Jack Smith and several other partners were engaged in the construction and contracting business. At the beginning of 1942 the United States owed them approximately $29,000 under the terms of two contracts with the US Army. The tax officials of Fulton County, Georgia included the money due on the open account with the US Army in the tax base when computing the partnership's property tax liability. The partnership took the case to court arguing that the open account was an obligation of the United States and, therefore, could not be included in the State property tax base.

The US Supreme Court disagreed.

"...a mere open account with the United States differs vitally from the type of credit instrumentality's which this Court in the past has recognized as constitutionally exempt from state and local taxation. Such instrumentality's in each instance have been characterized by (1) written documents, (2) the bearing of interest, (3) a binding promise

SMITH, KLINE & FRENCH LABS

Smith, Kline & French Laboratories v. Oregon State Tax Commission (1964) - 403 P2d 375.

Smith, Kline & French Laboratories ("SK&F") was a Pennsylvania corporation with its principal offices in Philadelphia. It manufactured and sold ethical pharmaceutical products in interstate commerce. In Oregon, SK&F had no office, no office equipment, no inventory, no telephone listing, no telephone answering service, no mailing address and no automobile. SK&F did have 5 or 6 resident representatives ("detail men"). SK&F reimbursed these employees for use of their own cars and other expenses and provided them with samples and sales materials.

The representatives visited hospitals, other medical institutions, doctors, retail druggists and wholesalers explaining use and quality of SK&F's products and encouraging their purchase and use. The representatives did not solicit sales (except on rare occasions) but rather promoted the use of SK&F's products. Only state institutions and wholesalers purchased products directly from SK&F.

Oregon believed that SK&F was taxable for state income tax. Oregon contended that PL 86-272 created an "island of immunity" around the solicitation of orders and that solicitation required that an actual order by sought from a potential customer. Since SK&F's employees in Oregon merely encouraged the placing of orders from firms selling SK&F's products, they were not soliciting sales and, therefore, SK&F did not qualify for the exemption.

The Oregon Supreme Court found in favor of SK&F. The Court believed that PL 86-272 not only exempted solicitation activities but also "all lesser, included phases." The Court further stated that, because of the technical nature of SK&F's business, SK&F's employees in Oregon were performing what would be the equivalent of solicitation of orders for less technical businesses.

SPECTOR MOTOR SERVICE, INC.

Spector Motor Service, Inc. v. O'Connor (1951) - 340 US 602.

Spector Motor Service, Inc. ("Spector") was a Missouri corporation involved exclusively in interstate trucking. The State of Connecticut felt that Spector was liable for taxes under the Connecticut Corporation Business Tax Act. Spector believed that, since it was engaged exclusively in interstate commerce, the tax was being levied in violation of the Commerce Clause of the US Constitution.

The Connecticut Corporation Business Tax Act stated that "every...corporation or association carrying on business in this state which is required to report to the collector of internal revenue...shall pay, annually, a tax or excise upon its franchise for the privilege of carrying on or doing business within the state..."

The US Supreme Court held that, under the Commerce Clause, a state cannot levy a tax upon the privilege of carrying on a business that is exclusively interstate in character, no matter how fairly the tax is apportioned to business done within the state. Spector's business was the interstate transportation of freight. When a full truckload was to be shipped to or from any customer in Connecticut, Spector's over-the-road trucks went directly to the customer's place of business. In the case of less-than-truckload shipments, pickup trucks operated by Spector gathered the freight from customers for assembly into full truckloads at either of two terminals maintained within the State.

The Commerce Clause clearly indicates that a tax to be levied by states must be nondiscriminatory and not place undue burden on interstate commerce. Although the tax was nondiscriminatory, it placed an undue burden on interstate commerce because Spector engaged in what the court considered to be an "exclusively interstate" business and "exclusively interstate" was not within the realm of the states' borders.

The Sperry & Hutchinson Company ("S & H") was incorporated in New Jersey, domiciled in New York and (during the years in question) did business in 48 states including Oregon. S & H's primary business activity in Oregon was the sale of a trading stamp promotional service (S & H Green Stamps). The Green Stamp business produced substantial revenues during the years involved, a large part of which S & H invested in fixed income securities.

S & H divided its investment portfolio into 3 categories:

* Short-term securities (maturing in less than 12 months) held pending use of the funds in the Green Stamp business.

* Short-term securities held pending acquisition of other companies or favorable developments in the long-term investment market.

* Long-term securities held as an investment.

S & H filed its Oregon income tax returns for 1961, 1963, 1964 and 1965 claiming the interest income from these investments as non-business income allocable to its state of commercial domicile. In audit, Oregon reclassified all of the above interest income as business income for all of the years involved.

The Oregon Supreme Court (affirming the decision of the Tax Court) found that the interest income from the long-term investments and the short-term investments which were held pending favorable conditions in the long-term investment market was non-business income. However, the interest income from the short-term investments which were held to satisfy the need for working capital in the Green Stamp business was business income and should be included in income apportionable to Oregon.

Appeal of Standard Oil of California, California SBE (1983) -

Standard Oil Company of California ("Standard") was commercially domiciled in San Francisco, California. It was the parent company of an affiliated group of domestic and foreign corporations, all of which were involved in a worldwide unitary petroleum business. Certain aspects of the group's petroleum operations were also performed by affiliated joint venture corporations in which the Standard group owned 50% or less of the controlling stock.

When filing its 1967 California franchise tax return on a worldwide unitary apportionment basis, Standard included in its unitary apportionable income, dividends received from the affiliated joint venture corporations. Standard classified the dividends as business income since, in the company's opinion, the dividends arose in the main course of its unitary petroleum business and was derived from intangibles acquired and managed as an integral part of that business. considered non-business income and allocated to California since dividends are generally received from passive investments in other corporations.

The State Board of Equalization found in favor of Standard. The SBE held that that although the joint venture affiliates did not meet the ownership requirements for inclusion in Standard's unitary group, the joint venture affiliates were an integral part of Standard unitary petroleum business since they provided up to 52% of Standard's worldwide oil and gas supplies during the year in question. Since the stock in the joint venture affiliates was purchased to guarantee a supply of oil for Standard's business operations, dividend income from the stock was integrally related to the business activities and was not a passive investment. Under the functional test for business/non-business income, the dividend income should be considered business income.

With the acquisition, they were able to issue and sell additional stock, and the money received was used to improve buildings and equipment in the Pacific division. The Pacific division filled orders received from the Eastern division, serviced Eastern's products, enabled Standard to have a complete product line (only the Pacific division manufactured sales books), sold all of Standard's products, relied upon Eastern for product research and development and the recruitment of personnel, and was able to benefit from advertising material.

The vice president in charge of Pacific brought know-how from Eastern plants, conferred with the Eastern officers, asked employees from Dayton to come to Pacific to offer suggestions, and transferred several key employees from the Eastern division. The Eastern division, in their offices, handled service clinics for Pacific's customers, budgets for capital expenditures were established through conferences with Eastern offices, and balance sheets and income statements were sent monthly to Standard's Board of Directors.

when a new system was devised for sales accounting on a computer in Dayton, Pacific was put on the system which saved money, since four of Pacific's employees could be eliminated.

The California Court of Appeals found that although Pacific acted independently of Standard, it was apparent that the financing, general direction and control of Pacific was in the hands of Standard, and that Pacific was operated as a subsidiary of Standard. Although there was little evidence as to cost savings through interdivisional cooperation, it was obvious that the cooperation improved Standard's overall earning and contributed to its net income derived from the entire operations. Therefore, the business was determined to be unitary.

SUPERIOR OIL

Superior Oil v. Franchise Tax Board (CA), 60 Cal 2d 406, 386 P2d 33.

Superior Oil produced and sold petroleum and petroleum products in a number of states and foreign countries. Its principal place of business was in Los Angeles, California. Superior was not an integrated oil company, since it did no refining or processing (except on a minor scale). Its crude petroleum was typically sold at the well site to other oil companies. All its crude oil mined in California was sold in California, and all crude oil mined outside the state was sold outside the state. During the year in question Superior also received income from a realty subdivision in California, from gains on the sale of capital assets both within and without California and from dividends on stock investments.

Superior filed its California returns using the separate accounting method for its purely California activities (the real estate subdivision project, gains from the sale of capital assets in the state, and income from dividends). Superior then used an apportionment formula to determine the amount of net income received from its petroleum operations which was attributable to California. California felt that the separate accounting method should also be used to determine the amount of petroleum operations income which should be attributed to California.

The California Supreme Court found that there was unity of ownership, unity of operation and unity of use as well as dependency/contribution between Superior's California operations and its out-of-state operations. The California operation contributed substantially to the out-of-state corporations through:

* Executive policy making
* Administrative control
* Coordination of exploration activities, well production, land acquisitions

* Training of technical personnel
* Scientific and technical development
* Manufacturing and sales
* Accounting
* Tax return
* Personnel transfers
* Insurance
* Purchasing.

The California operations were also dependent upon the out-of-state operations in that:

* Substantial funds were borrowed on assets located outside of California to finance projects in California.
* Legal counseling was provided by chief counsel in Texas.
* Materials were transferred into California.
* Geophysical technical information was sent to California.
* Skilled personnel transferred into California.
* Technical and other information was supplied to California on a daily basis.

The Court declared that interstate movement of goods is not required for a business to be unitary. The Court stated that the producing well in a particular state, "is the end product of interstate activities..." which were defined as "essential factors such as land acquisition, exploration, technology, testing, availability of equipment and personnel, financing..." and that "Superior's products are thus acquired for the local market only as the result of interstate transactions to no less extent than were Butler Brothers' products made available at its local markets. It was not necessary that Butler Brothers' goods be sold on an interstate basis for the unit rule to apply in that case, and the sale of Superior's products on the local market is likewise not determinative."

TALLEY INDUSTRIES, INC.

State of Arizona v Talley Industries, Inc., (1994) – Arizona Court of Appeals, Division One, Department T, No. 1 CA-TX 92-0013.

Talley Industries Inc. was the parent corporation of twenty-five wholly-owned subsidiaries, with its principal place of business in Maricopa County, Arizona. Talley's main business lines were the manufacture of timepieces and timekeeping instrumentation, importing men's and women's apparel, purchase and sale of commercial property, industrial development, and the manufacture and supply of numerous commercial and high technology products for defense and industrial uses. Of Talley's twenty-five wholly-owned subsidiaries, only ten subsidiaries had property, payroll, or sales in Arizona.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

Talley owned 100 percent of the capital stock of the twenty-five subsidiaries and essentially controlled all of their operations. Talley's tax department prepared federal, state and local income tax returns for each subsidiary. It formulated the accounting, general operating, and personnel policies for all subsidiaries. Talley also borrowed funds, incurred corporate office costs, and acted as banker for its subsidiaries. Talley set salary guidelines, set accounting policy and procedures, selected auditing firms, set insurance requirements and established employee benefit and pension plans for all of the subsidiaries. Any claims against a subsidiary were handled by Talley under its general liability insurance policy. Talley's corporate officers served on each subsidiary's board of directors and supervised the operation of that subsidiary. Talley required its logo to be on all correspondence from the subsidiaries. Talley approved each subsidiary's annual budget. Talley's Information Services Manager reviewed the computer needs of each of the subsidiaries, and proscribed any necessary changes. Talley regularly conducted company-wide training programs and seminars. And, Talley purchased automobiles and computer equipment, negotiated contracts, and reviewed, suggested, or implemented manufacturing processes, new products, market strategies, quality control programs, and customer relations programs for the entire group. In 1983, Talley filed a combined return and apportioned 16.26 percent of its combined net income to Arizona. The Arizona Department of Revenue determined that the net income from Talley Industries Inc. and the ten subsidiaries with Arizona factors (property, payroll or sales in Arizona) was 62.2 percent of the combined net income.

Talley claims that the Talley group is a "Unitary Business" under the traditional definition of that term and is therefore entitled to file a combined return. The traditional definition of a unitary business, as stated by the California Supreme Court, is that a business is unitary if these circumstances are present: "(1) Unity of ownership; (2) Unity of operation as evidenced by central purchasing, advertising, accounting and management divisions; and (3) Unity of use of its centralized executive force and general system of operation." Talley claims that given this definition and Talley's factors listed above, Talley qualifies as a unitary business and should be allowed to file a combined Arizona tax return (thereby reducing its Arizona tax liability).

The Arizona Department of Revenue contends that the apportionment of the combined return does not accurately reflect the net income of Talley arising from doing business in Arizona. The pertinent statute (A.R.S. section 43-942 (Supp. 1993)) reads: "In any case of two or more corporations owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the department may distribute, apportion or allocate gross income, deductions, credits or allowances between or among such taxpayers, if it determines that such distributions, apportionment or allocation is necessary in order to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any such taxpayer. For the purpose of enforcing this section, the department may require the filing of a combined report and such other information as it deems necessary." The Arizona Department of Revenue felt that the combined return was not necessary to correctly reflect the Arizona income of the Talley group.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The Department reserves the right to review and revise the work of any auditor and to order or approve procedures or methods that deviate from or are outside the scope of this manual. This manual is intended for internal use only and shall not constitute written legal advice or guidance to taxpayers for any purpose, including but not limited to, the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights.

This was the first case in which the Arizona Supreme Court considered whether or not to adopt the traditional unitary business analysis (used in most states) or an alternative analysis unique to Arizona.

The court ruled that the principal purpose of the allocation is the proper assignment to Arizona of a taxpayer's fair and accurate share of income or deductions reasonably attributable to Arizona. The court further ruled that, because no substantial interrelationship or interdependence of basic operations existed among the subsidiaries, combined reporting was not necessary for a clear reflection of the taxable income earned by the subsidiaries with Arizona income factors.

The court's opinion stressed that the ultimate purpose of the unitary business rules were to properly reflect the income attributable to Arizona. Allowing a taxpayer to lower their Arizona tax liability by including activities which were conducted in different states would be in direct opposition to the ultimate purpose of the unitary business rules.

The court did not define substantial interrelationship or interdependence of basic operations in the same manner as the courts of other states. Other state have ruled that the mere sharing administrative functions constitutes substantial interrelationship and therefore a unitary business relationship. The Arizona Supreme Court's definition of substantial interrelationship encompasses situations in which the costs associated with both the parent and the subsidiaries are so interrelated that there can be no separate accounting for these costs (i.e. when the parent or subsidiaries sell products to one another). The Arizona Supreme Court thought that the administrative costs in the present case (there were only minimal intercompany sales) can be accounted for separately, therefore no substantial interrelationship or unitary business relationship existed.

TIPPERARY CORPORATION

Tipperary Corporation v. New Mexico (1979) - 595 P2d 1212.

Tipperary Corporation was originally incorporated in 1967 as Tipperary Land Corporation. At that time it was primarily involved in the agricultural business. In 1969, it acquired a 50% interest in undeveloped mineral acreage in New Mexico and Wyoming. The mineral interests consisted of eighty coal leases in Wyoming and several uranium and sulfur leases in New Mexico. In 1974 Mobil Oil Corporation purchased some of the Wyoming coal leases. Tipperary claimed its portion of the gain on the sale of the leases as non-business income. In audit, New Mexico reclassified the income as business income.

Tipperary Corporation argued that the sale of coal leases was not part of its regular trade or business. New Mexico argued that Tipperary was in the business of exploration and development of oil, gas and minerals and that the sale of the leases was in the regular course of that business. The New Mexico Court of Appeals agreed with the State.

In a previous decision, the Court had defined the phrase "transactions and activity in the regular course of the taxpayer's trade or business" as including "[b]usiness deals and the performance of a specific function in the normal, typical, customary or accustomed policy or procedure of the taxpayer's trade or business." The Court had also previously concluded that "the nature of the particular transaction", the "former practices" of the corporation, and the use to which the income was put were all pertinent to the determination of whether income was business income. And finally, the Court had previously summarized that,

"...it makes no difference whether the income derives from the main business, the principal business, the occasional business or the subordinate business so long as the income arises from the "regular course" of the business."

The Court found that the gain on the sale of the coal leases was business income. It based this conclusion on the following facts:

* Tipperary's Articles of Incorporation listed as one of its purposes to engage "in the business of owning, holding, buying, selling, leasing and otherwise acquiring and disposing of oil, gas, petroleum and all other mineral properties of every kind, and interests and estates therein..."

* In 1969 Tipperary changed its name to Tipperary Land and Exploration Corporation in order to reflect the acquisition of oil and gas properties and other mineral interests. During this time Tipperary was also involved in mineral exploration. The president of Tipperary was quoted as saying the they were interested in exploring or developing "[a]nything that we might have found that would have had commercial value..."

* From 1969 to 1974, Tipperary was involved in a continued effort to develop and exploit its Wyoming coal acreage and to acquire additional coal acreage.

* After determining that it had neither the expertise nor the capital to develop the coal acreage, Tipperary and its partners contacted at least 33 companies in an effort to sell the leases.

* Tipperary's regular operational, managerial and executive personnel conducted the effort to develop and exploit the coal properties. The expenses incurred in core and water drilling on the property and the lease payments were paid out of general funds.

* Tipperary's management of its coal leases was consistent with the management of certain other properties it owned.

* Tipperary's Annual Reports for 1969 through 1975 contained numerous statements representing its Wyoming coal leases as an integral part of its business endeavors.

UNDERWOOD TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Underwood Typewriter Company v. Chamberlain (Conn., 1920) - 41 SCt 45, 254 US 113.

The Underwood Typewriter Company ("Underwood") manufactured typewriters and other similar products; sold these products, certain accessories and supplies which it purchased from others; repaired the products; and leased the products. Its main office was in New York however, all of its manufacturing was performed in Connecticut. Underwood operated branch offices in many states which sold, leased and repaired the machines and sold supplies. One of the branch offices was also located in Connecticut.

Connecticut imposed an income tax on Underwood based on its net profits attributable to the State. The amount of Connecticut net profits was computed by multiplying total net profits of the company by an apportionment formula that consisted of a property factor. Underwood contended that the amount of profits attributable to Connecticut should be the profits which arose out of the sales, leasing and repair activities of the Connecticut branch office.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Connecticut stating that:

"[t]he profits of the corporation were largely earned by a series of transactions beginning with manufacture in Connecticut and ending with sale in other states. In this it was typical of a large part of the manufacturing business conducted in the state. The Legislature, in attempting to put upon this business its fair share of the burden of taxation, was faced with the impossibility of allocating specifically the profits earned by the processes conducted within its borders. It, therefore, adopted a method of apportionment which, for all that appears in this record, reached, and was meant to reach, only the profits earned within the state...There is...nothing in this record to show that the method of apportionment adopted by the state was inherently arbitrary, or that its application to this corporation produced an unreasonable result."

NOTE: This was the first case in which the unitary concept was applied to a mercantile business. It was also the first case in which the US Supreme Court upheld the right of a state to use an apportionment formula to determine the proper amount of INCOME (previous cases dealt with property taxation) attributable to that state, as long as that formula was not arbitrary and did not produce an unreasonable result.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY

Union Pacific Railway Co. v. Ryan (Wyoming, 1885) - 5 SCt 601, 113 US 516.

The Union Pacific Railroad passed through the whole length of the Wyoming territory and, in its course, through the city of Cheyenne. Cheyenne attempted to impose a property tax on the railroad based upon a pro-rata share of all of the railroad's property within the territory. A fraction was used, the numerator of which was the number or miles of track within the city's boundaries and the denominator of which was the number of miles of track within the entire Wyoming territory.

The US Supreme Court upheld the use of a formula by stating,

"The difficulty of assessing the value of railroad property in separate parcels, located in distinct cities and townships, is almost insuperable. A railroad cannot be regarded as mere land, like farm land or building lots; its value depends upon the whole line as a unit, to be used as a thoroughfare and means of transportation. A separate mile or two of its length is almost valueless by itself. And then its rolling stock has no particular locality except a constructive one in the place where the principal office of the railroad company is situated; and it would be manifestly unequal to give to that place the benefit of taxing the whole of it."

UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION

United Artists Corporation v. Taylor (New York, 1937), 273 NY 334, 7 NE2d 254, affirming 248 app. div. 207, 288 NYS 946.

United Artists Corporation ("United") was headquartered in New York and was in the business of distributing motion picture films to exhibitors (theaters). United was not an agent of the producers but, rather, was an independent contractor. It obtained licenses from producers to distribute and market photoplays to exhibitors within certain territories, and its revenue was derived from the exhibitors.

United contended that the city of New York could not levy a sales tax on the receipts from licenses to exhibit films because such tax violated the Interstate Commerce clause. The New York Court of Appeals stated that the transaction consisted of United transferring to the exhibitor the possession of tangible property in the form of positive and negative prints of photoplays with the license to use or exhibit them for a specified time. The license to exhibit without the transfer of possession would be valueless. Together they were one transaction and constituted a sale. In so far as the sale originated and consummated in New York, it would be subject to tax.

US STEEL CORPORATION

Multistate Tax Commission (MTC) v. US Steel Corporation (1980) - 434 US 452, 98 SCt 799.

In 1972, US Steel Corporation filed this action on behalf of itself and several other multistate taxpayers threatened with audits by the newly created Multistate Tax Commission. The complaint challenged the constitutionality of the Multistate Tax Compact, sought to have the Compact declared invalid and wanted a permanent injunction barring its operation. The case was ultimately decided by the US Supreme Court.

The Boise Federal Court gave no merit to the constitutionality arguments. It ordered US Steel to make certain committee minutes available to MTC auditors and to make appropriate personnel available for interviews. U.S. Steel indicated that the auditors would be allowed to examine only excerpted minutes. The court issued a more definitive order holding, in part, that:

* The MTC was entitled to conduct a worldwide unitary audit on the taxpayers.

* The MTC had a right to access of information of US Steel and all of its domestic and worldwide subsidiaries.

* The MTC may examine such books and records and personnel as may be relevant to the audit.

* After the MTC had established the general areas of inquiry on which its auditors want to interview personnel of taxpayer's tax department, the taxpayers were ordered to designate which of its personnel would have the information necessary to respond, then were required to make sure the interviews took place.

Only the portion of the case which related to the constitutionality of the Multistate Tax Compact was appealed to the US Supreme Court. The US Supreme Court agreed with the lower court's decision that the Multistate Tax Compact did not violate the US Constitution.

WALSH V IDOR

Illinois Department of Revenue v. William J. Walsh (1990) - 196 Ill App 3d 772.

William J. Walsh, individually and as a general partner of the Three Fountains East Development, Ltd. partnership, originally brought this action against the Illinois Department of Revenue. On its Illinois return for 1980 the partnership claimed a "7/1/79" valuation limitation subtraction modification. Since the proper subtraction is a 8/1/69 valuation limitation, the return was "math error" and a notice of the additional amount of tax due was issued. The issue involved in this case is whether the "math error" of the subtraction modification was proper or whether a Notice of Deficiency should have been issued for the proposed liability.

The Illinois Appellate Court reversed a Circuit Court decision and found in favor of the Illinois Department of Revenue. Section 1501(a)(12)(D) of the IITA provides that a "mathematical error" includes "an attempt to claim, exclude, deduct, or improperly report, in a manner directly contrary to the provisions of the Act and regulations thereunder any item of income, exception, deduction, or credit." The Appellate Court held that,

"The literal meaning [of Section 1501(a)(12)(D)] suggests that the supposed mathematical error in question must be so clearly and inarguably contrary to the Act and regulations that it is expressly prohibited as a deduction, exemption, credit, or item of income. If there is reasonable doubt that the Act and regulations clearly prohibit the claimed item, it should not be treated under the mathematical error provisions of the Act and the taxpayer should be accorded the deficiency notice proceedings.

In the pending case, we find that the taxpayer's attempt to use "pre 7-1-79 Appreciation" is, in fact, "directly contrary to the provisions of the Act and regulations thereunder"."

WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY

Wabash Railroad Company v. Illinois Department of Revenue. Circuit Court of Cook County. March 23, 1995.

Wabash Railroad Company filed a petition with the Circuit Court seeking a review of an administrative decision made by the Illinois Department of Revenue. The primary issue in this case centers around the proper formula to be used to apportion the business income of Wabash Railroad Company, in computing its Illinois taxable income for the years ended December 31, 1977 through 1981. Wabash asserted that it should be allowed to use the one-factor "revenue miles" formula prescribed for taxpayers furnishing transportation services, but the Department of Revenue contended that Wabash must use the three-factor formula prescribed for general taxpayers.

There were several issues that served as the central focus of this case. The parties agreed with one another concerning the unitary status of Wabash. It was found that Wabash was part of the unitary group consisting of Norfolk & Western Railroad Company. The controversy in the case stemmed from the argument made by Wabash, contending that they were furnishing transportation services, and therefore they should be allowed to use the Revenue Miles formula to ascertain their proper tax liability. The Department of Revenue disagreed with this particular claim and the Court agreed with the Department. The Court held that Wabash did not provide transportation services as defined in the Illinois Tax Act section 304(d), which states that the "transportation of 1 passenger or 1 net ton of freight the distance of 1 mile for a consideration", determines what is to be considered as transportation services. The Court held that Wabash's assertion that they were entitled to use the Revenue Miles formula was unfounded. The mere fact that Wabash was part of a unitary group that furnished transportation services, did not mean that every component of the unitary group was engaged in providing transportation services.

The Court asserted that the argument presented by Wabash in reference to the regulation of their business by the INCC, which is the agency that regulates the common carriers of interstate commerce, was not a convincing argument. The Court found that the structure of the agreement between Wabash and Norfolk allowed the maintenance of separate corporate identities for mutual economic benefit and business purposes. Therefore, a determination of Wabash's income tax liability should be consistent with the structure of that agreement.

Another point of contention in the case surrounded the apportionment formula found in Section 100.3700(a)(4) Appendix A. Wabash contended that the use of this formula by the ALJ violated the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution. Wabash claimed that the use of this apportionment formula would result in more than 100% of their income being subject to the State's taxation. The Court agreed with Wabash.
The Court cited the internal consistency test as the basis for their decision. The test holds that a formula must not result in more than 100% of a multistate enterprise being subjected to tax.
Wabash contends that the last issue in this case, the Department denying relief to Wabash, was against the manifest weight of the evidence. Wabash claimed that the statutory apportionment formula used in this case did not fairly represent the extent of their business activity in the State. They contended that they were entitled to use an alternative apportionment formula. The Court agreed with Wabash. The Court cited alternative allocation as the basis for their decision, which allows for alternative provisions if the allocation and apportionment provisions do not fairly represent the extent of a person's business activity in a state.

WALT DISNEY PRODUCTIONS (1973)

Walt Disney Productions v. United States - (71-2 USTC Para. 9507), 327 FSupp 189 Affirmed as Modified, (73-2 USTC Para. 9484), 480 F2d 66, Cert. Denied.

Walt Disney Productions ("Disney") was a California corporation. In 1962 the corporation's principal business activities were the production and distribution of motion picture films and the operation of Disneyland.

On its 1962 federal income tax return Disney attempted to claim an investment tax credit on motion picture negatives. The production of a motion picture is a complex process involving story material, talent and production expertise and facilities to create a "motion picture negative". The negative is then used to make positive prints which are rented to exhibitors (theaters) for viewing by the public. The investment tax credit which Disney claimed on its federal return was based on the total costs of production of the motion picture negative.

The IRS disallowed Disney's investment tax credit on the motion picture negatives claiming that:

* The negatives were not tangible personal property.

* If the negatives were found to be tangible personal property, they did not individually have a useful life of eight years or more when placed in service.

* If it was determined that the negatives qualified for the credit, Disney used an erroneous basis for the negatives when computing their credit.

The US District Court found (and the US Court of Appeals affirmed) that the motion picture negatives were tangible personal property.

"The motion picture negatives here certainly are tangible - weighing between 27 and 51 pounds, between 5000 and 11,800 feet in length and capable of being seen and touched. The negatives are physically used in the manufacture of prints which are plaintiff's stock in trade to its consumers. It is this use which establishes the eligibility as tangible personal property."

The District Court also found (and the Court of Appeals also affirmed) that Disney's estimate that each of the motion picture negatives had a useful life of at least eight years was acceptable. Many of the company's productions made prior to 1962 had an earning capacity in excess of eight years.

"[Disney] is engaged in the business of producing family entertainment. As such the film productions of [the company], unlike many other production companies, are not so-called "dated material", i.e. subject matter with an interest span limited by its contents."

On the final issue the Court of Appeals reversed the District Court's decision. The Court of Appeals found that the basis used to compute the investment tax credit on the motion picture negatives should be the same as the basis used for depreciation.

WALT DISNEY PRODUCTIONS (1977)

Walt Disney Productions v. United States (74-2 USTC Para. 9623), (76-2 USTC Para. 9606) Affirming and Remanding District Court Decision (77-1 USTC Para. 9398) (As Amended).

The facts of the 1977 case were essentially the same as those of the 1973 case. The 1977 case involved the fiscal years ending September 1963 through 1969. The business activities of Disney were expanding in that many of the motion picture negatives were produced for television and the company was now operating a second theme park, Disney World.

The case involved many of the same issues as the 1973 case,

* Were the negatives tangible personal property?
* Did the negatives have a useful life of 8 eight years of more?
* What basis should be used for the negatives?

The US District Court found in favor of Disney on all counts, following the Court of Appeals decision in the 1973 case. The Court of Appeals affirmed the District Court's decision, however, the Court of Appeals decision provided an in-depth explanation of the procedures, and costs involved, in making a motion picture negative (or master negative). This explanation was used to determine the "costs" of the negative for investment tax credit purposes.

The end product (the exhibition print or film) provides both sound and moving pictures. However, the audio and video portions of the film begin processing separately. The "cut-picture negative" contains only the video portion of the film. The "master sound tape" contains all of the dialogue, music and sound effects. These two items are then collectively referred to as the "master negative". This master negative is durable and the steps necessary to produce "it" do not have to be repeated.

This manual is not a statement of Department policy. The pieces of the master negative then go through a number of procedures to ultimately create the exhibition print. The interim products created by these procedures are short lived and can be used to make approximately 100 to 150 exhibition prints. The company must then go back to the master negative and start again.

Disney claimed all of the production costs up to the point at which the master negative was produced for the investment tax credit. These costs included:

* Preparing a script from a story.
* Building sets.
* Hiring and rehearsing talent.
* Editing the original film negatives (video portion).
* Mixing the sound effects, dialogue and music (audio portion).
* Other capitalized cost associated with the creation of the master negative.

WOOLWORTH V NEW MEXICO

F. W. Woolworth Co. v. Taxation & Revenue Department of New Mexico (1982) - 458 US 354, 73 L ED 2d 819, 102 SCt 3128.

Woolworth's principal place of business and commercial domicile was in New York, but it engaged in chain store retailing throughout the United States. New Mexico income tax laws distinguished between apportionable "business" income and allocated "non-business" income Woolworth reported dividend income from four of its foreign subsidiaries (which also engaged in chain store retailing in foreign countries) as non-business income, none of which was to be allocated to New Mexico. Also, Woolworth classified Foreign Dividend Gross-up as non-business income. In audit, New Mexico reclassified both the foreign dividends and the Gross-up amounts as business income.

The US Supreme Court found in favor of Woolworth stating,

"[Woolworth] - as owner of all of the stock in three of its subsidiaries and a majority interest in the fourth - has the potential to operate these companies as integrated divisions of a single unitary business.
